Rice cleared in probe
But student and ex-campus officer dispute administration's decision

By Terry Lightfoot

The agreement between Cal Poly and Walter Rice clearing him of any wrongdoing in a case alleging the sale of grades and drugs did not end the dispute for all parties.

The agreement, signed last week by interim Vice President Philip Bailey and Rice, stated "there was insufficient credible evidence to suggest that Dr. Rice committed any act which in any way would bring discredit to the University or Dr. Rice. Accordingly, the matter will not be pursued further."

The original investigator for Public Safety and the prime witness in the case feel the university administration should have punished Rice for his part in the case.

In the completed police investigation, a copy of which Rice gave to Mustang Daily, Rice is charged with doing cocaine with a student and his teacher's assistant Peter Charles and of changing grades and giving grades to a student who never attended class.

Jodi Traversaro, who is now attending Cuesta College, was the most vocal protestor of what he feels is inaction by the university. Traversaro told campus police that Rice was aware that Charles changed grades and sold grades to students.

Wayne Carmack, a Public Safety officer for 15 years, was the original investigator on the case. He later retired in the middle of the investigation due to a work-related hearing disability.

The students Carmack interviewed either substantiated Traversaro's claims or were non-cooperative, he said Sunday. At no time did the students disprove the claims, he added.

No criminal charges were brought against Rice because of a lack of physical evidence, he said. "But there is no doubt in mind that there were ethical questions."

Both Carmack and Richard Brug, chief of Public Safety, disagreed any mishandling of the investigation.

Brug said Friday that if he had to, he would handle the investigation the same way all over again.

In an interview Sunday, Rice said the investigation was definitely skewed against him.

"At no time did they talk to any of my colleagues, the office secretary or even sources that would help my side of the investigation," Rice said.

The most damning statement in the police report is from Carmack to alleged drug use by Rice, Charles and a student. The student whose name is withheld, said on three separate occasions that he did cocaine with Rice.

On first mention, the student said the drugs were taken at his home, when Rice and Charles stopped by unannounced. In the second reference, the student said it was a party. In a written statement, the student repeated that the incident happened at his home.

Rice said he has never done drugs with Charles or the other student.

Brug said the focus of the investigation centered on grading.

The police report is laden with accusations against Charles and depicts Rice as having turned his head to the behavior. At no time, however, is Rice accused of changing or selling grades.

Caltech speaker explains time travel possibilities via imaginary corridors

By Patty Hayes

Time travel is theoretically possible, according to a Caltech astrophysicist who spoke to a large Cal Poly audience Thursday morning.

Kip Thorne, highly respected in the world of physics, accepted the invitation to lecture here because of past conversations with the late Jim Hauser, a Cal Poly physics professor who died suddenly last March. The lecture was held in his memory.

Hauser developed many computer programs, one of which relates directly to the work of Thorne. The program, called "Hyperspace," deals with the idea of time travel.

Thorne's idea of time travel does not involve going "Back to the Future" in a souped-up Delorean, but is, rather, a thought experiment.

"We want to understand the laws of physics more deeply," Thorne said to the mostly male audience in the Cal Poly Theatre.

Thorne's thought experiments push these laws to their limits. He uses Albert Einstein's theories of relativity to show that time travel is conceivable.

"Gravity is the same as the curvature of space and time," Thorne said, tossing an orange into the air as he jumped off a table.

He used this demonstration to show that if people were falling naturally due to gravity, rather than fighting it as they do everyday, space and time would not exist as we know them.

Thorne described imaginary tunnels that connect distant parts of the universe, which he called "wormholes." Wormholes could be a passageway to time travel, but they are constantly being created and "pinched off" by the forces of gravity, he said.

Therefore, some sort of matter would need to be inserted in the wormhole to keep it open long enough to travel through, Thorne said.

"Do the laws of physics permit an arbitrary advanced civilization to create and maintain traversable wormholes for interstellar travel?" Thorne asked.

In other words, is it possible to create a wormhole and keep it open long enough to travel back in time? Maybe.

"There is a unit length so small that nothing smaller can be measured," Thorne said. He referred to that space as "quantum foam."

In the quantum foam, it Thorne said. See THORNE, page 3

Footsteps for peace...

A march from Avila Pier to the gates of Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant Sunday marked the end of the sixth annual Create Peace Week. Sponsored by the Central Coast Peace and Environmental Network, the week included a speech by John Robbins, author of "Diet for a New America," and a concert by Holly Near. The idea for Create Peace Week was developed in 1985 by Cal Poly Students for Social Responsibility and San Luis Obispo Physicians for Social Responsibility in celebration of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

A King controversy...

The recent celebration of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday has sparked some differing opinions.

"Win!"

Simon Thomas leads the men's basketball team to an overtime win against UC Riverside.
Editor — The Jan. 19 column “Quick tours waste time” misses the mark little more than its author’s attempt to glorify his sense of cultural superiority by bellowing the so-called whirlwind package tour vacations that are popular in Europe and are often considered to be the usual sort of vacation for college students. In his list, Lorenz proceeds on a self-congratulatory diatribe of his experiences in Europe and compares the inanity of the typical American tourists who, he says, go on these tours for — well, what a question! — “vacations but an "empty bank account" none of hundreds of out-of-focus Polaroids.” Lorenz may know what he’s talking about when he says that only the "real" West Germany, but his blanket condemnation of this kind of tour suggests cultural arrogance, not cultural literacy. A traveler who is interested should know about the historical and global significance of his or her itinerary. It also has a lot to gain from one of these short, and relatively inexpensive, jaunts to the Old Country and needn’t feel inferior to someone who has had the opportunity to spend three months observing the ducks and birds in Central Park. I feel the author would be better served by dwelling less on the question of the “pseudo-European” and more on the question of the “pseudo-intellectual.” Andy Hafford Biochemistry

Polyaphetic toward minority issues

By Luis Torres

Cal Poly might someday be worthy of a demonstration honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., if it will become soon as it is. The reason for this is that the Universidad of Cal Poly has become a three-month demonstration of the ascendancy of white students over students of color. The indifference — even hostility — to the demonstration must have been a bad disappointment to the black media who organized it, but I must say that Cal Poly’s disregard for minority issues is nothing new here at Cal Poly. In this case, especially noticeable during the demonstration in the University Union Plaza was the astonishing rudeness of the students immediately surrounding the speakers’ platform.

Cal Poly was founded in the left front row, at the bottom of the platform steps, as close to the speakers as anyone else in the audience, and I could not hear the speakers due to the laughter, loud voices and frenzied commotion behind me caused by students who had crowded around due to curiosity over the demonstration. These students kept up their clamor with the presentation of taped reports. The Student Union Committee presented his prepared remarks even though he had announced new remarks which he said were by the reaction to the demonstration Jan. 11 and by the dismal underrepresentation of minority students at Cal Poly. The indifference — even hostility — to the demonstration must have been a bad disappointment to the black media who organized it, but I must say that Cal Poly’s disregard for minority issues is nothing new here at Cal Poly.

Cal Poly is a good university, but it will advance neither until minority participation in the educational mission. Minorities must achieve full representation here in students, faculty, staff and administration. Luis Torres teaches in the English department.
THORNE

From page 1 would be possible to create a wormhole held open by two plates, Thorne suggested. Once created, the wormhole could be used to travel through time, Thorne said. He demonstrated using two large balloons.

"Imagine that I am here (at one balloon), and my wife is over there (at the other balloon)," Thorne said, pointing across the stage.

"We hold hands through the wormhole, while I go off at very high speed and come back," Thorne continued. "And looking at each other through the wormhole, we've both aged by one year. Then I look out at her through the external space, and she's aged by 50 years."

That concept is the basis for Thorne's time travel argument. Thorne is hopeful that his argument will be more concrete after a meeting of astrophysicists from Caltech, the Midwest and the Soviet Union.

"I have not given you any definitive answers, but I believe we may have some in a few months," Thorne said.

Thorne was born in 1940 and became interested in the cosmos at age 13. Thorne graduated from Caltech in 1962, and then earned his doctorate at Princeton University.

He later returned to Caltech to teach. Thorne is considered a bit eccentric, as he has been known to do his work in the nude and to bet with other scientists on the outcome of experiments.

Cal Poly Professor David Hafemeister described Jim Hauser as having "marched to the beat of a different drummer." The same could be said about Kip Thorne.

Poly Chicano alumni hold first statewide conference

By Monica Ortiz

A newly organized Cal Poly Chicano group held its first statewide meeting Saturday at the University Union.

The Chicano Alumni Association was recognized by the Associated Students, Inc. in March 1988 and is still in the process of solidifying.

"There was an interest among Chicano/Chicana graduates to provide a network of communication for ourselves as professionals and positive role models and opportunities for up-and-coming Chicano students," said Salvador Villasenor, interim chairman of the group.

Since its recognition as an affiliate of Cal Poly's Alumni Association, the Chicano Alumni Association has formed three local chapters.

central regions: the southern, central and northern areas. Each region will operate independently with its own set of elected officers, but will continue to work under an elected state board headquartered in San Luis Obispo. The state board will be elected in September.

Membership likely will consist primarily of Cal Poly graduate and Chicano students who have attended at least two quarters. Honorary membership can be given to any staff or faculty member of Cal Poly. Any other person who wishes to join can be voted in.

Southern California Representative Mary Gandara said the Chicano Alumni Association is trying to provide a stable structure so that recent graduates do not feel completely alone once in the professional world.

"From a professional organizational standpoint, we want to be involved at every potential level we can," said Villanueva. "And that would include having the students participate at every activity that the alumni put on."

Villasenor also said that the association is ready to help students with such on-campus activities as career orientations, presentations, speakers and summer employment.

Student arrested in alleged burglary of faculty offices

By Brandon K. Engle

A Cal Poly student was arrested and charged with burglary Wednesday night after allegedly attempting to break into faculty offices to steal a textbook.

Police said Patrick J. Gordon, 22, was found crouched in the bushes near Via Carta, allegedly trying to hide after being chased by soil science professor Ronald Taskey.

Taskey said he was in his office working late to prepare for a meeting when he heard someone knocking on the lobby door next to his office. Taskey didn't answer the door, he said, because the offices close at 9:30 p.m.

Taskey told police he heard a key being inserted into the lock and wondered why someone would knock if he had a key. When Gordon allegedly entered the office lobby, he was stopped...

Poly beats Riverside in OT thriller

By By Jay Garner
Staff Writer

What inspired former-philosophy- department head-turned-athletic director Kendrick Walker to slap President Warren J. Baker a "low-five" on Friday night?

Newly discovered works by Plato? A definitive answer to the meeting of God? Proof that falling trees make sounds even if there is nobody in the forest to hear them?

No, none of the above.

Answer: The Mustangs' thrilling 84-79 overtime win over 11th-ranked UC Riverside.

Sitting two steps high in the bleachers behind the scorer's table, Walker and Baker celebrated after watching Mustang point guard Simon Thomas score 12 points and grab two rebounds in the five-minute overtime period.

"I was thinking we had to hit the first couple shots," Thomas said, "because in overtime it's such a short span of time. If you get behind ... it's tough to come back."

Thomas broke the 68-68 tie in overtime when he sank a three-point shot from deep along the baseline. UC Riverside answered with a tip-in by David Thomas finished with a game-high 27 points, shooting 73 percent from the field, 4-4 from three-point range.

The Mustangs needed a little luck just to make it to overtime. With one second left in regulation, UC Riverside's Mike Ritter released a 12-foot baseline jump shot. The ball bounced and bounced on the rim before falling harmlessly away.

"I thought it was going in for sure," Thomas said.

Mustangs lose opener

By Glenn Hom

The No. 1-ranked-Cal Poly women's tennis team learned a few lessons from Division II Fresno State Thursday, losing 6-0 to the Bulldogs in the season opener.

The match was competitive despite the score.

"It was just subtle differences," said new Head Coach Marla Reid. "I think that if we hadn't won some first set tiebreakers, we would have pulled some matches out."

Rated sixth in the nation and playing No. 1 singles, junior Debbie Matano was out-muscled 6-2, 7-5 by her upper-division opponent, who used an effective all-around game to score Matano's baseline attack.

Fourteenth-ranked junior Tracy Matano had the momentum after winning a second set tiebreaker but lost 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

Junior Vicki Kanter, last year's top seed, played No. 3 singles this time around and was defeated 7-6, 6-4.

Junior Coby Nease continued her dominance in the form of the season, defeating 7-6, 6-2, 6-1.

The doubles matches were cancelled due to darkness and no lights, courtesy of the recent power outage on campus.

"I wanted a tough opener for the team to let them know where we stand and how much work we need to do," said Reid. "I don't think they really knew what to expect."

"For our first match I thought it went very well, even with a new coach," Kanter said. "Miguel (Phillips) was a great coach, and it's hard for Marla to take over, but she's doing the best job, right now."

Poly falls to Pomona

By Adrian Hodgson

Even after the Cal Poly women's basketball team lost 83-75 to Cal Poly Pomona Saturday, Head Coach Jill Orrock said she believes her team can beat the fourth-ranked Broncos.

"We're the only team in the league that can (beat them)," Orrock said.

The Mustangs, riding high on emotion, looked devastated in the first seven minutes. They jumped out to a 12-2 lead and led by as many as 13 in the early going before Pomona pulled to within one, 38-37, at halftime.

"We did a great job with our defensive game plan in the first half," Orrock said. "We played tight on (All-Americans) Nike Beckman. Then Thomas hit another three-point shot from the same spot — 74-70, Cal Poly."

Thomas wasn't finished. He scored on a leaner, one-handed shot from eight feet out to put the Mustangs up by six points. Thomas also made two foul shots to give the Mustangs their biggest lead of the night, 82-74 with 1:30 remaining in overtime.

But UC Riverside closed the gap to three points at 82-79 with 30 seconds left in overtime. UC Riverside then fouled Thomas, however the Mustangs couldn't put the game out of reach. "He didn't make either of them, and the Mustangs wound up 79-77."

Thomas finished with a game-high 27 points, shooting 73 percent from the field, 4-4 from three-point range.

"He took over," said teammate Coby Nease. "He was awesome."

The Mustangs needed a little luck just to make it to overtime. With one second left in regulation, UC Riverside's Mike Ritter released a 12-foot baseline jump shot. The ball bounced and bounced on the rim before falling harmlessly away.

"I thought it was going in for sure," Thomas said.

Answers to the Mustangs' questions:

1. Who scored the game's final 11 points?
2. What is the name of UC Riverside's top basketball player?
3. How many points did Thomas score?

"We're the only team in the league that can beat them," Orrock said.

Believe it. Nobody can stop the 49ers

When are people going to learn? First it was the Vikings.

"Well, Vern, Minnesota has the best front four in the NFL. They'll be in Joe Montana's face all day long."

San Francisco 49ers 41, Minnesota Vikings 15.

"Pai, the Rams gave the 49ers two of their toughest games this season, and they beat San Francisco once. Los Angeles got beaten on three tough road games in the cold Northeast. They're on a roll. The could give the Niners some trouble."

San Francisco 49ers 30, Los Angeles Rams 3.

Do we see a trend here? The Niners are better this year than they were last, and they are on a roll. They will not be denied, yet people insist on saying "Sure, they're good, but ..."

No guts about it, the trend of blowout wins will continue in the Super Bowl. Forget John Elway's show.

"Forget the Three Amoebas. This is Joe Montana's show."

The Niners have already played well enough to get to the Super Bowl, but I just don't see the Broncos having much of a chance. The Niners have already beaten two teams in the playoffs that would have been favored against the Broncos. I'm going to throw out a prediction here, even though I'm not very good at that kind of thing. San Francisco 35, Denver 16.

(Stark) so we could force the ball back out.”

The Mustangs held Bracken to just 14 points, well below her average, but the defense broke down in the second half. The Broncos shot only 17-38 on field goals in the half, but they outrebounded the Mustangs 29-15, giving the Broncos second chances and easy layups. Bronco forward Carine Edmonds pulled down nine offensive boards on her way to 25 points.

For the final few minutes, though, it looked like either team could have won. Pomona would stretch its lead to six points, but Poly would pull back to within two. The Mustangs could never pull even, however, because the Broncos were grabbing the offensive boards and scoring on high-percentage shots.

Orrock said the Mustangs had the emotion to be able to win, but the execution was not great.

But at 2-2 in the California Collegiate Athletic Association, Orrock said, “We’ve got to keep the intensity. Our next two games at Chapman and Dom­inguez are must wins.”

For the third game in a row, the Mustangs spread the scoring around well. Both Hasefield and Vanessa Hornbuckle had 15 points, closely followed by Deborah Vetel and Gina Car­Qiner, who had 14 and 13 points respectively.

Thomas said.

Thomas had a lot of help in the Mustang’s defeat of defending CCAA-champion UC Riverside.

Naess scored 17 points, in­cluding a four-point play when the Mustangs needed it. He was fouled as he sank a three-point shot from the top of the circle. He then made the free throw, ty­ing the game at 58-59.

“That was sweet,” he said.

“I’ve never had one of those be­fore.”

Naess also had a team-high nine rebounds. Stuart Thomas (Simon’s brother) scored 16 points, and James Gama scored 14 points for the Mustangs.

For UC Riverside, Chris Ceballos scored 25 points and Ritter scored 20 points.

On Saturday night, it was the other Thomas who led the Mustangs to victory over the other Cal Poly (Pomona), 106-95.

Stuart Thomas scored a team-high 29 points and grabbed five rebounds.

“He had a pretty tough challenge in guarding Terry Ross,” Coach Steve Reason said.

“He responded well.”

Nevertheless, Ross scored 33 points for the Broncos and pulled down 19 rebounds.

“Ross is as good an athlete as I’ve seen in this conference,” Reason said.

The Mustangs’ two wins over the weekend raised their record to 13-4, 3-1 in the CCAA.

“Our guys came out ready to play two nights in a row,” Reason said. “I’m not sure we have done that before (during) this season.”

Cal Poly can now put the ner­vousness of the opener behind them and begin to play up to the form that produced a third place finish in last year’s NCAA Divi­sion II National Tournament.

Cal Poly’s formidable doubles lineup will anchor the team. The twin powers of Debbie and Traci Matano will be challenged for the top send on the squad — and in the nation — by the team of Kaster and Danica Armstrong.

Aside from the score, Reid liked what she saw on the courts. “Our attitudes are really posi­tive,” she said. “We carried ourselves very respectfully out there. That’s my goal this year — for us to gain respect and to have respect for our opponents.”

Stories in the police report paint Charles as a teacher’s assistant who doubled as a drug dealer and a material dealer. Some students claimed they threatened him with physical harm. Rice said he could not say what Charles was capable of since he wasn’t wise enough to read a book.

Now that the case has been closed, there was no reasonable basis for the suspension or the banning at all. The worst part, he said, was the university’s delay in informing him about the allegations. “My mind would wander,” he said. “I’d play all sorts of deductive games,” he said. Rice also said she came to realize that she was doing was wrong. See RICE, page 8

Rice said he thinks that Traversaro’s tenacity in pursuing the case may be because of a relationship gone sour between her and Charles.

“There was no question that the two were involved,” Rice said.

But Carmack said he places a lot of credibility on Traversaro’s statements because she has been consistent in several interviews.

As far as the university is concerned the case is closed and Rice has been officially cleared. Rice had considered legal action to exonerate himself, but he considered the agreement with Cal Poly as a victory.

Rice said he is happy to be teaching again, but being suspended and banned has had a lasting effect.

“One doesn’t forget being arbitrarily suspended.”
