Release of S. African leader causes celebrations, clashes

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela walked triumphantly through the city center. Columns of cheering activists jogged through Durban and other cities. "We have waited too long for our freedom," Mandela told the crowd. He said that until the proper climate was created for peaceful negotiations, the armed struggle was still a policy of the ANC.

Students don't need to go in search of summer employment because the jobs have found them, said Shirl S. Gholston, Coordinator of Student Employment.

Expo-90, a pre-career job fair, will kick off the summer job search with more than 83 organizations this Feb. 27 in Chumash Auditorium. Participants include such well-known employers as Propha pH advertising agency, the agency representing Propha pH.

Release of S. African leader causes celebrations, clashes

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela walked through a prison gate to freedom Sunday, setting off joyous celebrations and violent clashes as blacks nationwide welcomed their leader back from 27 years in jail.

"Comrades and fellow South Africans, I greet you all in the name of peace, democracy and freedom for all," Mandela told tens of thousands of cheering supporters who thronged outside City Hall, many getting their first look at the African National Congress leader.

"I stand here before you not as a prophet, but as a humble servant of you the people."

Within an hour of the release, as Mandela's motorcade arrived at City Hall, violence broke out. First aid workers and journalists said one person was killed and more than 100 people injured when riot police fired shotguns after groups of black youths smashed shop windows in the city center.

Some youths retaliated by hurling bottles at the officers. Hundreds of terrified people waiting to hear Mandela ran for cover as police fired blasts of shotgun pellets.

Clashes between police and celebrating blacks were reported in at least two other areas, while in Johannesburg thousands of young blacks received an escort from traffic police as they ran triumphantly through the city. Columnists of cheering activists jogged through Durban and other cities.

"We have waited too long for our freedom," Mandela told the crowd. He said that until the proper climate was created for peaceful negotiations, the armed struggle was still a policy of the ANC.

‘P’ cleanup not university’s job

The “P” that has grated the halls of Cal Poly for the past 75 years is in danger of being removed if students don’t begin taking responsibility for cleaning up after themselves.

In recent years, decorations and debris have been removed by university staff with university money, according to Dean Gerard, executive dean of facilities administration. But this is a poor use of resources. University staff has better things to do than remove items that aren’t easily identifiable.

Over the years, thousands of students have participated in the tradition of miss out on this tradition if the “P” are removed, and alumni would surely notice its absence.

Alterations of the “P” on occasion are harmless and fun — as long as they’re not done in a harmful or inconsiderate way. The Interfraternity Council passed a resolution last spring requiring greeks to clean up after themselves. But it’s not enough. A public lesson of cleaning up after ourselves.

In such cases, we suggest some of the more than 350 clubs on campus volunteer to help with the cleanup. Those that took on the “P” this summer if its care doesn’t improve rapidly. But Cal Poly can’t afford to lose its unifying symbol. In a university so lacking in spirit, the “P” stands as a testament to a proud past.

Professor lauds article on families

Editor — Good job, Natalie Guerrero. Your article on dysfunctional families Feb. 7 was excellent and overdue. I think I can go as far as to say this is the real issue facing us.

Author and speaker John Bradshaw has said the crisis in our society today is one of emotion. Some of the emotional needs of most of us were not met as children, and we are dysfunctioning in the family, whatever it is or may have been. This sets up a pretty rough road for most of us later in life unless a program of recovery is undertaken. Since starting on my recovery a few years ago, I have become more aware of the widespread prevalence of this emotional crisis. It is seen in the faces of many of my students and fellow workers. I realize I am powerless to change it for you. All I can do is to encourage you to do something about your part in the overall crisis.

I am amazed so many people think they can recover by reading a self-help book or two. Recovery is not a leisurely pursuit. It means practicing the principles of a support system in every aspect of your life.

Remember, denial is not a river in Egypt. Imagine what a better life you can create for yourself through recovery. We are all so young. Get started. Get help. Don’t wait!

Mail clerk denies headline’s validity

Editor — I would like to comment on the article “Poly mail moves at snail’s pace” which ran in the Mustang Daily Feb. 1. Mail properly addressed to campus addresses is delivered daily to the United States Postal Service within 24 hours of being picked up by the Mail Center. Campus mail is delivered to the Mail Center. On-campus envelopes should be addressed to an individual and a department. Building and room numbers are not necessary.

Also, I don’t feel the title of the article is objective journalism, since it assumes fake rumors are true. Some of Mustang Daily’s readers only skim the paper, and the title may be all they remember.

Don’t tear pages out of magazines

Editor — As I was working last week at the Information Desk in the University Union, I was informed that the cover story to one of the magazines that are available for checkout has been removed. The result of this was an inconvenience to others who wished to read the magazine.

But it goes further. If those who check out the magazines continue to tear articles or pages out of magazines, the Information Desk staff will be forced to examine the procedures established by the Mail Center. On-campus envelopes should be addressed to an individual and a department. Building and room numbers are not necessary.

Ideals of ’60s relevant today

Peace, love and brotherhood of mankind. These were concepts brought to the mainstream of public thought by a generation of college-age people in the turbulence of the late 1960s. These ideals may have been, as in any great social movement, some bad aspects that accompanied it, the ideals of the ’60s should not only survive but flourish.

There are many people today who criticize the resurgence of the ideals of the ’60s; they would rather leave the ’60s in the ’60s, and they often have good reason.

Too many radicals confused the notion of “Question Authority” with that of “Defy Authority.” The clashes between self-liberated liberal peace activists and the closed-minded conservative peace structure divided the nation and left a scar that is just now beginning to heal.

But people need to look at the values behind the starry-eyed hippy’s peace sign and apply it in the context of today. In the words of a visionary, “Give peace a chance.” These aren’t just words or catchy tune to which we can hum along or bang a tambourine. They represent an idea we can apply today to the changes in the world arena and to the recent “peace dividend” in President Bush’s proposed federal budget.

The peace dividend was supposed to be cuts in the federal defense budget due to the end of the Cold War and relaxed worldwide military tensions. Yet Bush’s token 2 percent “real” defense cut (considering inflation) was actually a higher defense budget figure than last year, more than $300 billion dollars. Good chunks of that are even going to develop more nuclear weapons. We already have enough nuclear weapons. But hey, you never can have enough of those things.

Meanwhile homelessness is still a national disgrace, domestic social problems are underfunded, and we are still living in the shadow of the monster deficit greatly contributed to by Mr. President’s taxne predecessor. I think our priorities are a little bit skewed.

We the people have the ability to control the direction of our nation. If we feel strongly enough about the issues on our national agenda, we can bring about the consequences we desire, in spite of the priorities of our elected leaders.

The people of several Eastern European countries demonstrated they had the power to topple long-standing governments; surely we have the power to redirect public policy.

The social consciousness that started in the ’60s is still alive and well today. We could all benefit from the furthering of this environmental and socially-responsible causes.

All it takes is the desire by all of us to make our world a better place to live. The will of the people is still the single most powerful force in this country.

"because her mother didn’t come with her."
Of all the ladies, said Minor, she seemed very bright and mature, and felt at home with adults.
Instead of pursuing a modeling career in Los Angeles or New York, Moreno graduated from high school in Orange County and came to Cal Poly last June to a speech communication freshman.
Between studying, pledging Alpha Chi Omega sorority and meeting new people, Moreno, 18, said modeling is no longer her first priority while at school. In the past three years, she has modeled for Maybelline, Teen magazine and various clothing lines and products. But even though Moreno gets paid $200 to $250 an hour — and saves most of it — “I consider it my work on the side.”
Confident of her modeling skills, Moreno said she hesitates to talk about her work to people she meets at Cal Poly.
“I know there’s a lot of girls who would think I’m a show-off or conceited,” she said. “But if people ask me questions about it I am more than willing to talk.”
One of Moreno’s roommates, a food science and nutrition junior, said Moreno is easy to live with.
“I don’t think it’s better than us. She’s very modest about it.”

oriented toward the technical student, said Gholston. It may not be feasible for underclassmen to receive a co-op, thereby making the expo attractive to a wide range of majors.
Two hundred students were handed summer jobs last year, said Gholston, and even more jobs are anticipated to be filled this year.

Students are encouraged to dress somewhere between their “everyday clothes” and a suit, she said. The first part of the fair will be an open forum where students may meet with employers on an informal basis. Later in the afternoon and throughout the following day, some of the employers will conduct on-campus interviews. Students are encouraged to bring resumes.

Like every other model, Moreno said, she has had some of those "when is this going-to-be-over?" days, but overall, she thoroughly enjoys her job. "It's fun and rewarding," she said. "I don't think in any other job you can express so many different attitudes. But it's really not as glamorous as everyone thinks it is."

Moreno said she would love to make a full-time career out of modeling, ultimately wanting to appear on the cover of Vogue. But career opportunities in San Luis Obispo, she said, are less than ideal. "I'm secluded here and the work is limited."

Moreno, who has always looked up to models, said her favorite model is Cindy Crawford, who was one of the first brunet models to become popular. "I always thought I couldn't be a model because I'm a brunette," Moreno said. "I also have a dark complexion." But her dark looks have been anything but a problem.

Though her experiences have been uncommon, Moreno fits in comfortably with other Cal Poly students. She walks or rides her bike to school, enjoys jogging and studies at the library.

Living with her sister, Leanne, a journalism junior, Alison Moreno said they have become a lot closer since living together. "I'm secluded here and the work is limited."

Minor said Moreno was one of the most natural and fun models with which he has worked. "It was easy for her to appear in front of the cameras," he said. "I think her chances to be successful are very good."

Poly hooper wins 2 weekend games

By Jay Garner

The men's basketball team won two games this weekend, snapping its four-game losing streak and leveling its conference record at 5-5.

On Friday night, the Mustangs won at UC Riverside, 75-73, on a strange last-second shot by Shawn Reed. Reed tripped, fell to his knees and threw up a hook shot that hit nothing but net.

"It was a desperation shot," Coach Steve Beason said. "When it fell through, I thought we'd scored. We've lost 10 close games when we've had the last shot."

Center Stuart Thomas led the Mustangs with 27 points. "They just couldn't handle him on the inside," Beason said.

On Saturday night, the Mustangs won at Cal Poly Pomona, 85-69. Beason said Pomona pulled within four points late in the game, but Cobb Nannes hit a couple of clutch three-point shots to put the game away. Nannes scored a team-high 24 points.

"They were keying on Stu (Thomas) and leaving Cobb (Nannes) open on the outside," Beason said. "He took advantage of every opportunity."

Pomona's Terry Ross, the CCAA's leading scorer, scored a game-high 36 points.

"We had to concentrate on him," Beason said. "He (Ross) was going to be a problem.

Beason said his team will have to win three out of its four remaining games to qualify for one of the four spots in the post-season CCAA tournament.

"It's not a gimme," he said. "He better get his points."

Lady tracksters open 1990 season

By Rob Lorenz

The lady Mustang track squad opened up defense of their national championship last weekend at Occidental, and if early season results are any indicator, the women have an excellent shot at repeating as the top Division II track squad in the nation.

Coach Lance Harter left many of his top athletes at home, yet his ladies still won a handful of events.

"We're going to take this one low-key," he said on Thursday before leaving for Occidental.

If this was low-key, just wait until Cal Poly gets into the full swing of things.

The list of top performances is a lengthy one. Cuesta College transfer Shannon Sweeney won the 1500 meters, with teammate Nancy Long coming in six seconds behind to take second; the defending national champion in the 110 meter hurdles, Gina Albanese, won the 400 meters in a lifetime best time of 56.99 seconds; junior Jill Hoffman, running her first track race in two years, won the 3000 meters.

Volleyball club gets sloppy win

By Jay Garner

With your host: Mustang outside-hitter Todd "The Mouth" Sims.

Sims led the Mustangs to a sloppy victory over San Jose State, 15-10, 15-9, 16-14, with 14 kills (unofficially — no one kept statistics). Sims also led the Mustangs in showmanship — talking to the fans, referees, opponents, his teammates, the volleyball and even the net.

"We got a lead and kept building on it. (in the second game, we didn't) pitch well in one inning — that was it. When you get teams that get on a roll, things compound."

In game one, the Gauchos scored a run in each of the first two innings before Mustang pitcher Dan Chergey settled down and got into his rhythm.

Then the Mustang bats came to life. In the bottom of the fourth, right-fielder Drew Herron began the onslaught with a sharp single to left-field which brought Mustang pitcher Chris Romero brings the heat in Sunday's games against San Francisco State.

Men's track team kicks off season with weekend meet

By Rob Lorenz

The Cal Poly men's track team opened up the 1990 season at Occidental College Saturday winning six events against Division I San Jose State and Occidental College.

In what has become a traditional season-opening tri-meet between the schools (Cal Poly hosted the men a year ago), the Mustangs came in second behind the Aztecs and ahead of Occidental. SDSU had 84-1/2 points, to Poly's 71-1/2 and Oxy's 45.

Coach Tom Henderson said the loss could be attributed to the fact that the Mustangs were shut out in four events — the javelin, the discus and the shotput, which he said are traditionally weak for Cal Poly but should improve spring quarter, and the 110 meter hurdles, an event in which the Mustangs didn't enter anyone due to injuries.

The most impressive performance of the day was turned in by the powerful Mustang pole vault squad, which swept the top five positions in the event. They were led by Steve Williams, who won the event with a jump of 16 feet 1-1/4 inches. He was followed by Cal Poly vaulters Todd Arnett and Tony Castiglioni, both who both won in lifetime bests to finish second and third, respectively.

Other wins were turned in by freshman Jeff Yale, who won the 200 meters in a time of 21.84 seconds; senior Roger Chagnon, see MEN, page 6

Poly wins first game of Saturday twin bill

What Cal Poly's baseball team did in the first game of a double-header Saturday, it failed to do in the second.

The Mustangs did their best impersonation of Jekyll and Hyde and split two games with San Francisco State at Sandshheimer Stadium. Poly ran away with the first, 13-4, and the Gators held on to win the second, 8-7.

Mustang Head Coach Steve McFarland said the biggest difference between the two games, was that Poly avoided giving up the big inning in the first game. The Mustangs held the Gators to just five hits in game one, but gave up a seven-run fourth inning in the second.

"In the first game, we stayed on top," McFarland said. "We got a lead and kept building on it. (in the second game, we didn't) pitch well in one inning — that was it. When you get teams that get on a roll, things compound."

In game one, the Gauchos scored a run in each of the first two innings before Mustang pitcher Dan Chergey settled down and got into his rhythm.

Then the Mustang bats came to life. In the bottom of the fourth, right-fielder Drew Herron began the onslaught with a sharp single to left-field which brought home. Doug Naecow from third. Then, second baseman Matt Vasques singled in another run to knot the score at 2-2. But Poly's big inning was the seventh. Six men crossed the plate in the inning that put the game out of the Gators' reach. The Mustangs got only four hits in the inning, but were helped by some dreadful pitching by Gators Steve Staltry and Travo Arsenault.

The two pitchers walked three in the seventh and they one-hopped countless pitches to pitcher Phil Gaggero. Gaggero did not help much either, accounting for four errors.

But Chergey (1-1) was the story of the first game. After the third inning, he gave up just two hits and walked no one, before he gave way to Dennis Reed in the ninth. And he gave up four runs, but only one was earned.

McFarland, however, said Chergey's performance was not as good as the one last weekend against San Jose State in a losing effort. McFarland also pointed to his young pitching staff — there are 11 freshmen pitchers on the Mustang roster — which he said is inexperienced, but will improve.

"We just have to be patient," he said.

First baseman Jason Pokrzywinski led the Mustangs in hitting in game one. He went four-for-five with a double, and Vasques chipped in with a two-hit and three RBIs.

Game two was almost exactly the same, except the teams traded places. Cal Poly jumped out to a 3-0 lead, thanks to a two-run, 360-foot home-run by catcher Barbara. Wednesday against UC Santa Barbara.

Next home game for Cal Poly is unavailable at press time. The noon, but details were the same, except the teams traded places, with senior all-american Melissa White winning the event, followed by transfer Rica Brown and freshman Chris Olksow; Brown won the shutout, with sophomore Lori Larson placing third and sophomore Vicki Barnett placing fourth. Sophomore Kim Sheppard turned in a second place performance in the 100 meters and came back to place third in the 200 meters. White also placed second in the javelin.

Next weekend the Mustangs will travel to Santa Barbara.

The Mustangs will be on the road again next weekend, but they won't be going far. They will take a little trip down the coast to take on UC Santa Barbara.

"The factors that (caused the need for armed struggle) ... exist today," Mandela said. "We have no options but to continue."

"We express the hope that a climate conducive to a negotiated settlement would be created."

Mandela spoke of "my long and lonely years in prison."

"I am content that your pain and suffering was far greater than my own," he said, adding that he would make further statements after consulting his ANC comrades.

"There must be an end to white monopoloy of political power and a fundamental restructuring of our political and economic systems to ensure that the inequalities of apartheid are addressed," he said.

The ANC leader called President F.W. de Klerk a man "of integrity," and called on the white community to "join us in the safety of a new South Africa. The freedom movement is a political home for you, too."

Mandela, jailed since 1962 for helping plan the African National Congress* anti-government guerrilla campaign, was greeted by a thunderous cheer when he and his wife, Winnie, walked hand in hand through the gateway of Victor Verster prison in Paarl, 33 miles from Cape Town. Scores of policemen stood guard, and a small army of journalists recorded his release.

Student arrested for suspected bike theft

By Brandon K. Engle

Despite recent publicity, bike theft continues to plague this campus. Thursday night, however, a Cal Poly student slowed the theft rate when he stopped a thief from stealing his bike on Via Carta Street.

A bike belonging to computer engineering junior Robert J. Vadnais was the only one remaining in the bike racks on Via Carta Street, according to a police report. When Vadnais went to pick up the bike he found someone crouched down, working on the bike.

Vadnais hid in the bushes and watched the person as he tried to disassemble his bike, according to Sgt. Robert Schumacher of Public Safety. Vadnais ran to a phone and called the police.

When they arrived, they found Marcel Dean Graeber, a mechanical engineering sophomore, allegedly stealing parts from Vadnais' bicycle. Graeber was arrested and booked at the San Luis Obispo County Jail for possession of stolen property.

During a search of Graeber's house on Hathway Street, police recovered a green "G.T." mountain bike, a racing bike and various bike parts. Also recovered were several orange traffic cones believed to be taken from the scene of the Jan. 31 bomb scare near Yosemite Hall.
