Resident adviser experience: From math to medical care

Hall reps try to balance counseling with enforcement of residence rules

By Kim Jarrard

It is easy to tell that Rudy Obispo loves his job as a resident adviser for Trinity Hall.

"I like the challenge of working with people," said the 22-year-old senior.

Although advisers are responsible for enforcing rules in the residence halls, this is only a small part of the job. Interaction with other students seems to be the main reason Cal Poly students choose to be advisers.

"The friends I made on my floor are my good friends now," said Manny Logus, a Fremont Hall resident adviser last year.

"I was their resident adviser, yet because we developed such a neat bond, I was also their friend," said Shannon Turner, an adviser for Yosemite Hall.

Shannon Turner, an adviser for Yosemite Hall, was one of Logus' residents in Fremont. Because of him, she said, 11 people from her hall became advisers, many more than usual do.

Turner has also made close friends with students in her hall and other advisers.

It is important for an adviser to be a friend as well as a person residents can look up to, she said, because many residents often need someone with whom to talk.

People come in all the time to talk with Turner about problems.

"People have told me stuff that I just can't believe, stuff that people have gone through at my age. I'm only 19," she said.

Sometimes giving advice can be hard, though.

"When someone comes up to me and talks about a problem," Obispo said, "I sometimes wonder if I'm telling them the right thing.

Sometimes it is possible to blow it and give a resident the wrong advice, Logus said. But he learned from it and used the experience to do better the next time.

Giving advice is only one way advisers help residents. Two weeks ago, Obispo took a student who was severely vomiting to the hospital at 3 a.m. It turned out to be the flu, a relieved Obispo said. "I was glad it was nothing serious.

On the other end, some residents are happy they have someone to lean on. Sometimes when mathematics freshman Michael Charbonneau, a Sequoia Hall resident, needs help with his math homework, he'll turn to his adviser. Other times, he said, "they're just nice to talk to." Being an adviser can, however, have drawbacks. Obispo compares it to living in a fishbowl, where he is constantly being examined by all the residents.

"They look at you and you are the example," he said. "If you start fooling around just a little bit they get the clue that it's all right.

Being an authority figure to peers can also be difficult. Turner said even though the residents are her friends, sometimes she feels like she is talking on them.

Asking residents to do such things as turn down their stereo was challenging for Logus. He had to develop a style where he could be serious enough with the residents without being intimidating.

Being a resident adviser also does not leave a lot of extra time for other things.

"It cuts on your personal time," said Valerie Root, an adviser for Sierra Hall.

An adviser will be on duty anywhere from two to four nights a week, from about 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays and until noon on weekends.

Sometimes if Turner wants to go out with friends, she cannot because she may have to work.

See ADVISERS, page 8

Former mayor says few have faith in the political process

By Tara Murphy

Republicans and Democrats are afraid to confront problems many Americans are forced to deal with every day, said a former socialist mayor.

"Neither party has the guts to face the issues people are facing in this country," said Bernard Sanders, a socialist mayor in Burlington, Vt., for eight years. "The most important crisis is that in parties we don't talk about what's important.

As a result of that lack of discussion, Sanders said, people are not voting.

"The majority has given up on the political process," he said. "They choose not to vote given their choices.

"In terms of citizen participation and voter turnout, it is clear that the policies of the Democratic and Republican parties have failed," said Sanders.

He cites the environmental crisis, housing shortage, lack of affordable health care and unfair distribution of wealth as examples of the lack of leadership by these parties.

Sanders thinks the concentration of wealth among the elite is an extreme problem.

"The richest one percent owns over 50 percent of the wealth in the country," said Sanders. He did not say how that affects voter participation.

Sanders thinks a national health care system like Canada's should be implemented in the United States. "Government should provide basic necessities of life" for people, he said. Sanders said the United States and South Africa are the only countries in the world without guaranteed health care.

Energy and the environment are two other issues that are rarely discussed. "We need to rethink energy systems," said Sanders.

Sanders blamed the media for making people politically ignorant. He said no changes can take place in the United States until changes are made within the media. The media.

See SANDERS, page 8

Seven Poly cultural clubs ‘enrich souls’ with dance in ‘A Trip to the World’

By Heather Dowling

The Cultural Advisory Committee presented "A Trip to the World" Friday night in Chumash Auditorium.

Seven cultural clubs performed dances related to their cultural lifestyles to promote cultural awareness on campus.

"What we're doing tonight is enriching our soul through culture, through music," said speaker Everardo Martinez, an adviser in student academic services.

The Afro-American Student Association opened the show with "Fletch 0" and "Lone Dog," "Coop Dog," "Fletch 0" and "Lone Dog" performed three short dances that date back to 500 A.D.

Next, the Vietnamese Student Association were attired typically used for special occasions during their performance.

Five dancers from the Indian Student Association followed. They wore traditional Indian dresses, called saris.

The largest group of performers was the Filipino Cultural Exchange with 17 students performing five dances. Two of the dances were bamboo dances, where students dance to Filipino music with bamboo sticks. In another, dancers imitated fireflies with candles.

Omega Psi Phi opened its show with the voice of Martin Luther King Jr. Five students - displaying the names "Snow Dog," "Law Dog," "Coop Dog," "Fletch 0" and "Lone Dog" on their matching gold T-shirts - performed a step show.

See DANCE, page 3

Folsom blues... Reporter Jason Foster says crime-fighting should be proactive, not reactive, to increase its chances of success.

Cal Poly's choir rounded out their four-city winter tour in San Luis Obispo Saturday night.

Close, but no cigar... The Cal Poly women's basketball team lost 81-77 to CSU Los Angeles this weekend.
Get tough on crime.
That saying has a nice ring to it, doesn’t it? Break the law and you get to go to jail, buddy. Do not pass go; do not collect $200.

Politicians love that phrase and that philosophy. For them, it’s the perfect solution to the problem of crime.
Stories of horrible acts saturate the media and stir fear into the hearts of the constituents. They ask politicians, “What are you going to do?” Most simply: Tell them you’ll lock criminals up and throw away the key.
Tougher laws, longer sentences and more prisons are the ways to deal with crime. After all, how can a community be safe if it does not respond to the violent behavior behind bars?
It’s a neat solution. It makes the politicians look good, it makes the voters feel safer and it makes the prison population swell like a Bull Park Frankenstein.

There’s only one little drawback. It doesn’t do anything to solve the problem of crime.
Over the past 10 years, California’s voters have approved enough measures to finance 15 new prisons and expand seven more. The state, in turn, has spent more than $32 billion on prison construction.
The incarcerated population over the same period has tripled to where there are now about 175,000 persons in state prisons and local jails.
The effect? The crime rate has remained unchanged.
Meanwhile, the future promises more bleak statistics if current trends continue. Projections say that by 1994, nearly 250,000 people will be in California correctional institutions. The Department of Corrections budget will inflate to $4 billion, compared to $300 million in 1984.
These were some of the findings of California’s Blue Ribbon Commission on Inmate Population Management. The commission, consisting of some of the state’s top penal officials, peace officers, judges and prison reform activists, gave its report to the state legislature in January after almost two years of study.

"The criminal justice system in California is out of balance and will remain so unless the entire state and federal prison system is addressed from prevention through discharge of jurisdic­tion," the final report read.
In other words, what is really needed is a proactive, holistic approach to solving the problem of crime rather than the reactive, approach of tougher laws and prisons.
Although actually implement­ing such a solution is extremely complex, the fundamentals are quite simple.
Try and keep people out of prison (the main plank of the process). Emphasize education and increase health and welfare benefits, especially in low-income and poverty-stricken areas traditionally linked with high rates of crime.
For those already in correctional facilities, help them stay out of trouble in the future. Increase the number of rehabilitation programs both inside and outside prisons. Find ways to increase the effectiveness of these programs so more convicts can be positively integrated back into society.

We need to stop accepting the politicians’ (and our own) “real” solution of just getting tough on crime. As Vincent Schiraldi, director of the Na­tional Center on Institutions and Alternatives and member of the Blue Ribbon Commission said, the time has come for us to get smart about it.

---

Letters to the Editor

Second Opinion

Teach U.S. history with caution

The idea of America and its traditions and historical realities has undergone radical changes over the past 25 years. Social history and the story of its people’s battle to be included in American culture has made deep and important scholarly inroads — influencing the way educated Americans think about U.S. triumphs and tragedies.

Nor has pressure on campus to teach more about the pluralistic nature of America abated. Heated debates in recent years at schools like Stanford University and the University of California at Berkeley have caused further change. Latino, Afri­can-American, Asian and other ethnic studies, long available in the curriculum, are now required there.

There’s hardly an academic consensus on how and when to teach about African-American studies because of their hostility terms. Students already lack an understanding of the basic democratic principles that have allowed civil rights to flourish.

Second, U.S. institutions do have European roots — the Reformation and the Enlightenment. Hesitate about how much of today is being studied should be teaching the great American leaders to the students in the curriculum.

— Excerpted from The Christian Science Monitor, Feb. 23.

CORRECTION

Supreme Court Justice Scalia’s first name is Antonin. He was mentioned in a Feb. 26 letter to the editor.

---

Opinion

Fight crime with proactive plan

By Jason Foster

Mustang Daily

Parent speaks out on Poly day care

Editor Your Insight article Feb. 14 on married students fell short when addressing the problem of adequate day care on campus. The problem is that the administration has failed miserably in providing day care for faculty that can provide badly-needed day care for students. A waiting list of two years or more is inexcusable.

My son has been attending day care on campus for two years and loves it. Also, it has helped my wife and me in our support of students. The day care staff has put together an outstanding program.

Unfortunately, getting in for most is next to impossible and most students badly in need of this service will never be able to take advantage of it if the administration’s present course of action continues.

The present facilities are inade­quate. The staff is forced to provide care and education to infants and toddlers in a dilapidated building. Last Christmas, my wife was able to get five gallons of paint donated.

Parents, teachers and students donated their time scrap ing and painting the old, flaking paint. While people’s efforts were heartwarming, they do little to meet the increasing demand from student parents.

The administration needs to do more. Students need to do more. If you’re a parent or expecting to become one, get on the list and press the administration. Everyone should let the administration know its passive at­itude is no longer acceptable.

Greg Orton

Student applauds new Reagan piece

Editor I applaud Professor David George for his insightful commentary on Reagan’s lack of patriotic about it. Our flag is being waved so much, it’s getting transparently fake.

We’ve inherited the Reagan legacy, including the diver­gence between upper and lower classes and the creation of an accepting middle class that is shockingly impervious to reality. Reaganomics, once white, yuppie thug friends are laughing at us.

Future historians will marvel at how late 20th century media and the current administration into buying a two-bit glib politician.

Mark Wagonter

Civil Engineering

---

Letters to the Editor

Second Opinion

Teach U.S. history with caution

The idea of America and its traditions and historical realities has undergone radical changes over the past 25 years. Social history and the story of its people’s battle to be included in American culture has made deep and important scholarly inroads — influencing the way educated Americans think about U.S. triumphs and tragedies.

Nor has pressure on campus to teach more about the pluralistic nature of America abated. Heated debates in recent years at schools like Stanford University and the University of California at Berkeley have caused further change. Latino, African-American, Asian and other ethnic studies, long available in the curriculum, are now required there.

There’s hardly an academic consensus on how and when to teach about African-American studies because of their hostility terms. Students already lack an understanding of the basic democratic principles that have allowed civil rights to flourish.

Second, U.S. institutions do have European roots — the Reformation and the Enlightenment. Hesitate about how much of today is being studied should be teaching the great American leaders to the students in the curriculum.

— Excerpted from The Christian Science Monitor, Feb. 23.

CORRECTION

Supreme Court Justice Scalia’s first name is Antonin. He was mentioned in a Feb. 26 letter to the editor.

---

Opinion

Fight crime with proactive plan

By Jason Foster

Mustang Daily

Parent speaks out on Poly day care

Editor Your Insight article Feb. 14 on married students fell short when addressing the problem of adequate day care on campus. The problem is that the administration has failed miserably in providing day care for faculty that can provide badly-needed day care for students. A waiting list of two years or more is inexcusable.

My son has been attending day care on campus for two years and loves it. Also, it has helped my wife and me in our support of students. The day care staff has put together an outstanding program.

Unfortunately, getting in for most is next to impossible and most students badly in need of this service will never be able to take advantage of it if the administration’s present course of action continues.

The present facilities are inade­quate. The staff is forced to provide care and education to infants and toddlers in a dilapidated building. Last Christmas, my wife was able to get five gallons of paint donated.

Parents, teachers and students donated their time scrap ing and painting the old, flaking paint. While people’s efforts were heartwarming, they do little to meet the increasing demand from student parents.

The administration needs to do more. Students need to do more. If you’re a parent or expecting to become one, get on the list and press the administration. Everyone should let the administration know its passive at­itude is no longer acceptable.

Greg Orton

Student applauds new Reagan piece

Editor I applaud Professor David George for his insightful commentary on Reagan’s lack of patriotic about it. Our flag is being waved so much, it’s getting transparently fake.

We’ve inherited the Reagan legacy, including the diver­gence between upper and lower classes and the creation of an accepting middle class that is shockingly impervious to reality. Reaganomics, once white, yuppie thug friends are laughing at us.

Future historians will marvel at how late 20th century media and the current administration into buying a two-bit glib politician.

Mark Wagonter

Civil Engineering
DANCE

From page 1

The Chinese Student Association performed a ribbon dance, symbolizing the beauty and grace of the performers.

An Argentinian version of the tango was performed by three couples of non-related races.

To close the show, the German Club performed in this attraction.

The 1990 winter tour was the final concert for many graduating seniors because next quarter the choir will be performing in England in conjunction with the London study program. Each senior was honored with a red carnation.

Cal Poly’s choirs end state tour with noteworthy concert in SLO

By Natalie Guerrero

Cal Poly’s Choirs sung to an enthusiastic audience and ended the 1990 winter tour on an upbeat note last Saturday night at Mount Carmel Lutheran Church in San Luis Obispo.

"I was very pleased with our performance and with the positive reaction of the home crowd," said Thomas Davies, Cal Poly choir conductor for the past 17 years.

The two-hour performance included a variety of sections from traditional barbershop music to songs sung in French. Two songs by the Men’s Chorus captured the attention of the lively audience. The chorus acted out the swaying motions and life of a sailor depicted in the lyrics they sang.

"Everyone’s favorite is the Men’s Chorus because there is a lot of good humor involved," said Karen Denyer, president of Women’s Chorus.

This program included the Men’s and Women’s chorus, the Barbershop quartets — A Token Effort and Here Comes Treble and the Madrigal/Jazz Ensemble. About 76 students studying various majors are involved in the choir.

San Luis Obispo was the last stop on a four-city tour that began in Cupertino, then moved to Mount Shasta and Concord. Each location was a unique experience for the choir, Denyer said, but Mount Shasta was the adventure trip.

The choir drove to Mount Shasta on Saturday during the holiday weekend, and the night before it had snowed heavily. The traffic slowed down within five miles of Mount Shasta on Interstate 5. Three miles later the traffic stopped altogether, said Denyer.

After all the members on the bus stretched their legs and engaged in some snowball fights, the choir conductor noticed the time and decided to have everyone walk to the concert.

"It was pretty funny seeing so many college students walking along the highway," said Denyer, "but soon the traffic started and the bus picked us up right in front of the exit we were going to turn.

The walking adventure, fortunately, delayed the start of the choir concert only a half-hour later than scheduled.

The choir has been practicing for the tour for the past six weeks, including a weekend retreat in Arroyo Grande. The retreat helped members memorize the songs and it also was a time for members to get to know each other. "The best times to get to know people involved in choir are the tour and retreat. It’s a great group," said Monica Ulrich, a liberal studies junior involved with the Women’s Chorus.

The 1990 winter tour was the final concert for many graduating seniors because next quarter the choir will be performing in England in conjunction with the London study program. Each senior was honored with a red carnation.

DARRELL WHITNEY/ Mustang Daily

Members of the Vietnamese Student Association perform dances utilizing fans, exhibiting grace and beauty.

Bank of America

Doing the job for more Californians.

San Luis Obispo Branch. 1805 Higuera St. San Luis Obispo, CA 93401 (805) 595-5306

* Terms for accounts and other account-related services apply. Other fees and interest on savings. See any branch or bank for details.

Bank of America N.A./A Member FDIC
Women split 2 games

Poly seeded 3rd in CCAA tourney

By Adrian Hodgson

Many teams have problems playing opponents with not-so-good records, especially after winning a close, emotional game a few nights earlier.

That's what happened to the Cal Poly women's basketball team this weekend.

The Mustangs lost to CSU Los Angeles Saturday night, 81-77; the Golden Eagles were 7-18 overall, and 1-10 in league play before Saturday. Two nights before, Cal Poly had beaten CSU Northridge 74-68 in double overtime.

After Thursday's win, the Mustangs needed to beat the Golden Eagles to secure a second-place finish in the California Collegiate Athletic Association. But the loss put Cal Poly in a tie for second with Northridge. The Matadors, however, enter the CCAA tournament as the second seed because of their better head-to-head record against fourth-place Chapman College.

Head Coach Jill Orrock said she thinks the Mustangs may have assumed they would beat CSU Los Angeles with the ease they did the first time. Cal Poly pounded the Golden Eagles Jan. 13, 73-52.

"We lost it in the first half," Orrock said. "This was their (CSU Los Angeles') last game. They were loose. They played probably the best they have this season.''

Los Angeles jumped out to an early lead and were ahead by 16 points at halftime. Orrock said the Golden Eagles' full-court press disrupted the flow of the game, and they got some easy shots from turnovers. The Mustangs were out-rebounded 21-7 in the first half, and the Golden Eagles shot 56 percent from the field in the half.

In the second half, the Mustangs turned things around thanks to the play of Vanessa Hornbuckle, who scored a career-high 25 points. Poly closed Los Angeles' lead and went ahead by two points with about 1:30 to play. But the Golden Eagles forged ahead again and stayed in front to post its second CCAA win this season.

Orrock called Thursday's battle with the Matadors, "a fight to the tooth and nail to the end."

"We knew we had to beat Northridge," she said. "It was a real confidence-builder" because the Mustangs will need the confidence this Thursday when they meet the Matadors in the first game of the CCAA tournament in Pomona.

Cal Poly led by as many as 16 points but relinquished its lead. The Matadors pulled level and forced two overtime periods, but the Mustangs got the edge in the second five-minute period and squeezed out the victory.

Seniors Deborah Vettel, Jody Hasselfield and Russia Madden guided the Mustangs to the win. Vettel scored 16 points, Hasselfield contributed 18 and Madden had 13 and 12 rebounds.

Orrock said she will be looking to those three and senior forward Gina Cardinet to lead the team in the playoffs. But she also listed Hornbuckle as one who could have an impact on how the Mustangs do in post-season play.
Women's Track

Poly continues to shine in early meets

By Rob Lorenz
Sports Editor

Freshman Jamie Park continued to show in early season track competition as the Mustangs performed impressively at the Forney Non-Sponsoring Meet held in Forney.

Park led a Cal Poly 1-3-4 finish in the 5,000 meters, posting a time of 16:31.7, which is the best time posted thus far in Division II this season. She also is the season leader in the 3,000 meters.

"What's impressive is, her 5,000 mark would have won the 1989 NCAA nationals and it's still only February," said Head Coach Lance Harter.

"Jamie is showing repeatedly that she is going to be a great one."

Placing third and fourth respectively for the Mustangs in the 5,000 meters were Amanda Marks and Tracy Lebestos.

Cal Poly also performed impressively in the weight events. Melissa White won the javelin with a throw of 147 feet away from a national qualifying toss. Buxby Sexton placed second behind her teammate with a toss that Harter said is well ahead of her previous improvement of last year. Sexton placed third at nationals in 1989.

Jill Hoffman destroyed the 3,000 field with another personal best time of 9:56.8, and Sharon Polley claimed her first collegiate win with a time of 14:7.1 in the 10,000 meter hurdles.

The 800-meter relay team also turned in a tremendous performance without two of the top Mustangs even running. The team of Laurie Durette, Kristina Hand, Melanie Haint and Stephanie Barrett won the race by 11 seconds.

"They breezed through the victory," said Harter. "It returned our depth factor to the competition as we ran without Aaron Arlin and Teena Colebrook. If we are to compete with the likes of (Division I powerhouse) Villanova this season we must develop three consistent competitors to support Teena as an anchor leg.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.

Men's Track

Mustangs impressive at Berkeley

By Adrian Hodgson

The Cal Poly men's track team got a taste of a dual-meet sweep of UC San Diego.

In the first regatta of its season, the Cal Poly crew club lost to the University of San Diego Saturday morning in Morro Bay.

Despite the club's loss, Head Coach Jaime Bea was not disappointed.

"All the race were very competitive, but I was especially impressed with the varsity women's six-second victory." The Cal Poly and USD crew teams began the day early, beginning their physical and mental preparation at 7:15 a.m. in anticipation of the 8 a.m. races.

The morning featured unfavorable racing conditions, with high winds, choppy water and first regatta

The Cal Poly men's track team got a taste of a different kind of meet at UC Berkeley last weekend.

Many of the individual events were phazed out in favor of the Head Coach Tom Henderson called "a relay-format meet." The non-scoring meet had no winners or losers, but Henderson got a chance to see some of his athletes in their secondary events, against competitors from Stanford, UC Berkeley, CSU Sacramento and various club teams.

The Mustangs were led by outstanding performances in the pole-vault, triple jump, the 1,500 meters and the 5,000 meters.

Junior John Federoff won the 5,000 in a personal-best 14:50.1, beating his old high school rival and Stanford standout David Scudamore. Henderson said they were neck-and-neck for 12 of the 12½ laps, but Federoff out-kicked Scudamore in the final 200 meters to win by three seconds.

Cal Poly swept the top four positions in the triple jump. Ben Holback edged teammates Nathan Cotten, David Ramirez and Tim Thompson with a winning jump of 47 feet 3 inches.

The Mustangs continued their dominance of the pole vault this season as they took five of the top six spots. Junior Todd Arnett placed first with a vault of 16 feet and was closely followed by teammates Steve Toney and Frank Burke, who tied for second place.

Another bright spot for the Mustangs was De-mian Kloer's victory in the 1,500 meters. Kloer squarked a half-second win over one of the Golden Bears' middle distance runners. Kloer's winning time was 3:57.1.

Henderson said the meet was good and he looked for competitive efforts in events the athletes are less accustomed to than their primary events.

Henderson also said several men were rested in preparation for next week. The squad will split up for meets at UCLA and CSU Bakersfield. In Los Angeles, the Mustangs will face UCLA and California Collegiate Athletic Association rival CSU Los Angeles. In Bakersfield they will match up against the Roadrunners, UC Riverside and Cal Poly Pomona.

Softball

Lady Mustangs win 7th consecutive game

The Cal Poly women's softball team extended its winning streak to seven games on Saturday with a doubleheader sweep of UC San Diego.

The women have won seven straight after opening the season with five consecutive losses to Division I opponents.

In the first game, the Mustangs were sparked by Kim Barrett won the race by 11 seconds.

"They breezed through the victory," said Harter. "It returned our depth factor to the competition as we ran without Aaron Arlin and Teena Colebrook. If we are to compete with the likes of (Division I powerhouse) Villanova this season we must develop three consistent competitors to support Teena as an anchor leg.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.

"I like what I see so far. We will be very potent."

The track and field team will split their squad next weekend, with 14 to 16 athletes traveling to the Aztec Invitational at San Diego State and the rest of the teams competing at a CCAA quadrangular meet at Bakersfield, California. Cal Poly Pomona.
Poly ruggers win crucial weekend match over SDSU

By Scott Green

Which college essential in your backpack?

อภิปราย: ทุกที่ในที่นี้อยู่ที่ Zentrum Data Systems. อย่าลืมถามว่ามันจะดีอย่างไร

Wheeler's do well
at UC Berkeley

By Bill Ridge

The Cal Poly Wheelers continued in a 6-3 NCAA Final Four game over the weekend, placing riders in both the men's and women's finishes. The team finished second in both teams' final.

Saturday's rounds comprised of a 7th-8th finisher, with a 10 percent chance of finishing first in the Cal Poly Final Four.
The men's team finished second in both teams' final.

The men's team did well, with Dave Page finishing third and Jake Lindsey finishing fourth.

The women's team also did well, with Janice Wilson finishing third and Lisa Adams finishing fourth.

Coral Bookstore

Dollar Off

TWO DOLLAR COUPON PER ITEM
no cash value

California Polytechnic State University

3085 SP "94/95" 150

Item 1

Item 2

Item 3

Item 4

Item 5

Item 6

Item 7

Item 8

Item 9

Item 10

Item 11

Item 12

Item 13

Item 14

Item 15

Item 16

Item 17

Item 18

Item 19

Item 20

Item 21

Item 22

Item 23

Item 24

Item 25

Item 26

Item 27

Item 28

Item 29

Item 30

Item 31

Item 32

Item 33

Item 34

Item 35

Item 36

Item 37

Item 38

Item 39

Item 40

Item 41

Item 42

Item 43

Item 44

Item 45

Item 46

Item 47

Item 48

Item 49

Item 50

Item 51

Item 52

Item 53

Item 54

Item 55

Item 56

Item 57

Item 58

Item 59

Item 60

Item 61

Item 62

Item 63

Item 64

Item 65

Item 66

Item 67

Item 68

Item 69

Item 70

Item 71

Item 72

Item 73

Item 74

Item 75

Item 76

Item 77

Item 78

Item 79

Item 80

Item 81

Item 82

Item 83

Item 84

Item 85

Item 86

Item 87

Item 88

Item 89

Item 90

Item 91

Item 92

Item 93

Item 94

Item 95

Item 96

Item 97

Item 98

Item 99

Item 100
no to all Nicaragua and all the nations of the world, that the president of Nicaragua, Daniel Ortega, the "people's leader," will respect the popular mandate," Ortega added.

The Sandinistas remain far larger than any single party. United Nationalist Opposition (UNO) leader Violeta Chamorro heads a fractious alliance of 14 parties ranging from far right to far left — and was unclear how power would be transferred.

ADVISERS

From page 1

until 2 a.m. But most advisers expect not to have much free time when they apply for the job and are usually ready for it.
But being short on time has actually helped some advisers.
Oblipo and Turner saw their grade point averages go up because being an adviser taught them better time management.
Besides being on duty, advisers are also expected to go through a three-week training period before school starts, plan one to two programs for their hall and work at the front desk three hours a week. Advisers are also required to attend a Psychology 251 class every week to learn how to develop self-esteem and to handle such crisis
as death.
Overall, being a resident adviser is a positive position, said Carole Hansen, staff development specialist.
"The rewarding part for me is working with students in the res-dent adviser position as they go through the learning process," Hansen said. "They see how effective they can be and how they might change their style."
But in the end, is it worth it?
"They tell you to make your schoolwork number one," Lagan said. "I ended up making resident adviser position number one priority."