Poly Royal, beer won't mix in '90

Brew distributors, city agree not to push party image

By Jason Foster

There will be no connection between beer and Poly Royal this year. At least in terms of advertising.

The area beer distributors, after meeting with the Chamber of Commerce and city officials last fall, all agreed not to increase the amount of their advertising or mention Cal Poly or Poly Royal in their ads during this year’s Poly Royal, said Budweiser College Representative Jim Powell on Tuesday.

“We’re going to stay away from promoting it as "Party Royal" this year,” Powell said. "The city told us they don’t want to have what happened last year happen this year.”

Last year, fliers advertising beer with messages of “Welcome to Party Royal!” and other slogans connecting alcohol to Poly Royal were common. Police were kept constantly busy breaking up large parties, the most notable of which firefighters were pelted by parties throwing rocks and bottles at the Cedar Creek Apartments.

“The city requested the change, and we’re going to do it,” Powell said. “We want to work with the city and not make a hassle.”

San Luis Obispo Police Chief Jim Gardiner said that the city and the Chamber of Commerce have established the liaison with the beer distributors in order to help the Poly Royal Executive Board “get the emphasis back on Poly Royal, not on Party Royal.”

“We didn’t want Poly Royal attached to alcohol sales,” he said.

Scott Hublou, superintendent of the Poly Royal Executive Board, said Tuesday that all parties are working in a positive manner toward making adjustments this year.

“No one’s putting pressure on anyone. Everyone’s trying to work together,” said Hublou.

“The beer companies have been very cooperative,” said Gardiner. “They are understanding of our concern and are supportive of having a good event.”

Graduation split

President Baker to speak at ceremonies

By Laura Fleischer

Graduating seniors who don their caps and gowns for spring commencement this June can expect some changes from years past, according to a proposal approved by President Warren J. Baker’s staff this week.

Following the pattern of December’s commencement, in which Cal Poly held two ceremonies for the first time, students will be split into two groups for commencement exercises at the Mustang Stadium on June 16.

Those graduating from the schools of Architecture and Environmental Design, Business, Liberal Arts and Professional Studies and Education will attend commencement exercises at 9 a.m. A second ceremony will be held at 4 p.m. for students in the schools of Agriculture, Engineering and Science and Mathematics.

“The feedback we received from the December commencement being split was extremely positive,” said Hazel J. Scott, vice president for student affairs.

She also consulted ASI, Student Affairs, Chicano Commencement, Academic Senate (the faculty governance) and other administrators about the new proposal.

The reason for the split commencement is to allow graduates 10 guest tickets, as opposed to the usual five, she said — in order to give students the option of inviting more guests and to deter ticket scalping and counterfeit ticketing often occurred in previous years.

“If having more tickets was an important consideration in making this decision,” Scott said.

Lopez’s water level won’t close down lake

By Kathy Kenney

As spring approaches, the drought threatens to put a damper on some water sports. But windsurfers, water skiers and sailors, take heart, because Lake Lopez might be down, but it’s not out.

Lack of rainfall will not keep the lake and its facilities from full operation, said Don Millen, a park ranger, but “it has affected us quite significantly.”

Located east of Arroyo Grande, the lake is not only used by weekend campers, but serves as a popular recreational spot for locals and several Cal Poly sport clubs and classes.

Glenn Frady, a county engineer, said the lake’s elevation has dropped 10 feet since this time last year. The lake has reached its lowest level in a 20-year history, he said, but it is in better shape than any other lake in the county.

Rangers hope this will not attract more people than usual to Lopez because there already is an overcrowding problem. Anne Gunnarson, the Cal Poly sailing club president, said the lake is dangerous because there are too many people in too small an area. When the club’s 1990 season starts in spring, they will go to Laguna Lake as an alternative.

Those inconveniences, Millen said, are a result of last surface acreage as water volume decreases. There is not only less room to ski and sail, he added, but people will have to be especially careful of submerged objects.

U.S. losing touch with its roots

By Patty Hayes

"I don't remember." Former President Ronald Reagan said those words, or their equivalents, 124 times last week in his eight-hour testimony on the Iran-Contra affair. 124 times. That's an average of 15.3 times per hour. OK, so the former president was a busy man and can't remember every detail of his eight years in office. Granted, but 124 times?

When Reagan was asked about Cen. John W. Vessen, he did not remember him. He said the name sounded familiar, but he could not recall any more than that. But Vessen was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — the United States' top military office — and was appointed by Reagan himself. It seems incomprehensible that the former president could simply forget such a prominent figure.

It's as if Reagan's presidency was just another film role for the former actor, and now that the credits have rolled, the script has been forgotten. Reagan is not the only one who has "forgotten" a few things lately. Congress was reminded last week that is, too, has a script to follow — the Constitution.

New Czechoslovakian President Vaclav Havel spoke to a joint session of Congress last Wednesday. The dissident-turned-leader, who has come in power following the ousting of the communist regime, described his country's "road to democracy." He pleaded for U.S. support of the changing Soviets on the path "toward genuine pluralism."

Havel praised both Jefferson and Lincoln. Havel has more time to think about his hopes than normal life because he is pinned under a boulder denounced communism. As president, his speeches have rolled, the script has been forgotten. It seems incomprehensible that the former president could simply forget such a prominent figure.

"A person who cannot move and live a somewhat..." said a teachers' union spokeswoman. The union and school examiners. But Escalante is not the only star in the public school with the superintendents, and can't remember every detail of his eight years in office. Granted, but 124 times?

2nd Tacos Acapulco opens
Students line up for 'authentic burritos'

By Cyndi Smith

The unpretentious taco stand that opened with no advertising, no advance notice, no frills — and a line around the block — opened its second stand Friday on Foothill Boulevard.

Tacos Acapulco has become one of San Luis Obispo's most popular restaurants during the past few months, making hungry Cal Poly students happy and making owner Albert Hernandez an entrepreneur's dream.

Students frequent Tacos Acapulco before school, after school, for a study break, for lunch, for dinner and after parties. As early as 10 a.m. and as late as 2 a.m., lines stretch around the outside of the Broad Street building.

The 35-year-old Hernandez said the success of Tacos Acapulco is beyond his wildest dreams and explained his principle of offering customers "an honest deal."

"People have to eat every day, and they are looking for good, quality food at good prices," he said. "I think they also like the authenticity of the place."

Authentic it is. Mexican music blares from a stereo, and the cooks, who are all from Acapulco, sing along. Sombreros and sarapes line the walls.

And customers wait in line to yell out their order to the cooks, who prepare huge burritos and tacos, chop food, cook meals and tortillas or simply dance around to the music in front of them.

"My cooks are all families who owned restaurants in Acapulco," said Hernandez. "With the devaluation of the peso, they can't make a profit down there anymore, so they came to America, and I met up with them in Santa Ana."

Hernandez, who grew up in Los Angeles, said everyone on his father's side of the family had been involved in the food industry. He grew up around the business cooking, waiting tables and busing tables.

When he was 23, Hernandez had an idea to open a taco stand in California like the ones in Tijuana.

"I thought it would go over pretty well here, but I never had the money," he said.

Meanwhile, he was working with his brothers selling imports from Mexico to a shop in Nipomo. One of his brothers came to San Luis Obispo to look for a location for an import shop. He found the Broad Street location that was to become Tacos Acapulco.

"My brothers wanted an import store, but I thought that a taco stand was what San Luis Obispo really needed," said Hernandez.

The name Tacos Acapulco was chosen, Hernandez said, because Acapulco is "an international resort place that not only Mexican people, but also Anglos, can identify with."

Tacos Acapulco was opened on June 23 of last year. Hernandez had no money for advertising, so he stood on the street corner soliciting customers. Within two days, business had doubled and it continued to climb within the next few weeks.

"Within two weeks I had more business than I knew what to do with," he said.

By September, Hernandez knew he had to start expanding.

"People kept coming up to me with partnership offers, but I wanted to keep it a one-owner place. That way, the quality won't go down," he said.

So far, the success of the newest Tacos Acapulco on Foothill Boulevard has been just as great as the first one, Hernandez said. Adding the menu will make it even greater.

"We're adding carnitas, menudo on weekends, lengua (beef tongue), barbecue beef and chicken to go," he said.

Besides adding to the menu, Hernandez said he is looking for a location for an im­

The word "accreditation" doesn't mean much to most students on campus. But to the natural resources management department, the word means a great deal.

Since 1984, the NRM department has been trying to get forestry accredited and added to the forestry department. It must meet certain standards as defined by The Society of American Forestry and the California Board of Forestry to be labeled "forestry and natural resources management."

This decision to make forestry part of the NRM title has sparked debate and controversy among faculty and students in the department. And wanting the word "forestry" in the NRM title is not the only problem. In order for the department to become forestry-accredited, it must require a certain number of students to take eight forestry classes. Eight full-time faculty must be on call as well.

Right now, the department doesn't have enough students in the forestry curriculum to become accredited. In addition, there are only seven full-time faculty members.

The NRM department is requiring students from other concentrations within that department to take a certain curriculum made up of mainly forestry classes.

"I'm pissed off," said Matt Janssen, an NRM senior with an environmental management concentration. "Our major is very important, especially nowadays, and yet it is being pushed around."

Environmental management is designed to have a broad-based curriculum and should teach students a variety of things, said Jason Hanchett, a junior with an EM concentration. The EM concentration is different from others because it aims to get people from different fields together in order to find solutions to environmental issues.

"Environmental engineering is very specific and very technical," said Hanchett. "We focus on the management side of the environment, and we try to bring all sides together."

But like any program, there are variations in philosophy. Doug Pirollo, interim NRM department head, said that services are common in any department.

"We're always looking for the students," said Pirollo regarding forestry accreditation. "We are allowing as many increased avenues for career development and we are assisting them in becoming better citizens."

Pirollo calls himself a forester with a holistic viewpoint. He said other areas are as important to take as forestry. "We can't teach forestry without teaching other resources."

There are five other concentrations besides environmental management in the NRM department: forest resources management, forest resources-urban forestry, forest resources-watershed chaparral and fire management, park and forest recreation and fisheries-wildlife.

Environmental management majors are not against forestry, but the cats are being pushed there.

The EM concentration now has 12 forestry classes in its curriculum, and three can be switched. That means EM students and the other concentrations must take eight forestry classes that do not pertain to their major.

"Not all of us are one of the fortunate ones, however. Janssen is on the 1984-86 catalog, and the changes were made in the 1986-88 catalog."

Janssen is on the earlier catalog, he only has to take forestry. "I had to get a special consideration form approved and get on the catalog that was still pretty open," he said. "And that wasn't easy."

Janssen is in a good position compared to other EM students. "I suppose I should care about me," he said. "But I see too many colleges that are being plugged into a system to fulfill a goal, and I don't want to be a part of that."

S. African reform is money-based — Clark

By Tara Murphy

The reason South Africa has released Nelson Mandela and de-escalated violence is to help the economy, says a specialist on South Africa.

Cal Poly history professor Nancy Clark told a small audience in the Multicultural Center Tuesday that the move will allow South Africa to cut military spending and reassure investors that their money is safe.

Clark thinks change in South Africa will not come until the entire system is overhauled.

"Reform makes us think of revolutionary change," said Clark. "In the case of South Africa this is a total misconception."

It is impossible to reform a system in which blacks don’t even participate, said Clark. Reform doesn't consider the whole system of apartheid and is meaningless in South Africa.

Violence is still a problem in the country, and that can partly be blamed on the government, she said. Clark said shifting from violence and oppression to negotiations opens a new way to exert pressure on the government, but that "the violence is really endemic."

"If you’re going to physically repress people you have to go on doing it."

Clark said violence in black townships was another reason the government started to reform.

The new way to exert pressure is to pressure the government to go through with the negotiations, said Clark.

"We should push them to the wall on it."

Clark thinks sanctions should remain in place and, if anything, they should be harder. "Sanctions are one thing that pushed their government to this in the first place," she said.

Still, sanctions are more symbolic than they are substantive, Clark said. "It’s hard to assess what sanctions have meant." She estimates that they slow the countries economic growth by 1 to 2 percent, which she called "pretty significant." The usual growth rate for a country’s economy is about 3 percent.

Pulling U.S. companies out of South Africa is another way to pressure the government to keep their promises of reform and negotiations. Clark said that one argument against pulling out has always been that "when we pull out, someone else will take our place."

"But at least we’ll be sending our message, Clark said."

Some businesses leave because of pressure from shareholders, said Clark, and most U.S. corporations are gone.

Hewlett-Packard is the most recent major U.S. company to leave South Africa, said Clark. They left after they stopped making a profit.

Many Japanese firms have recently come in to the country, said Clark. They are considered to be "honorary whites." and treated with the privileges whites enjoy.

One issue that needs to be discussed is who will sit at the table.

"It’s going to be a very interesting time," she said. "It’s going to be a real mess. The government will be playing for time."

FOR ART'S SAKE: A&E Commentary
SLO: This ain't no Athens, Ga.
By Stewart McKenzie

...or one magic quarter, it seemed as if San Luis Obispo was actually starting to attract some good acts to town. Easy come, easy go.

Fall quarter saw the likes of Branford Marsalis, Stanley Jordan, Foi Dog Pondering, Peter Case, Mojo Nixon, Patto Baston and others performing on-campus or in local clubs. Though it wasn’t like having a Grateful Dead or 10,000 Maniacs playing in Mustang Stadium, at least it was better than a has-been band like The Fixx playing at Most Gym.

For a while, things seemed to be getting better and better. KOTR was having regularly-sponsored shows at D.K.’s and SLO Brewing. The October earthquake in the Bay Area became a silver lining for SLO, as many previously-scheduled acts were cancelled up there and hastily scheduled down here.

But as we approach the end of winter quarter, we’re back to the usual SLO-style. Greg Kihn, showing how much he’s aged since his forgettable Top-40 hit “Jeopardy,” made an embarrassing performance at D.K.’s a month ago. ASI Concerts is bringing Eddie & The Tide to campus, a band more suitable for U.U. hour than Chumash Auditorium.

Granted, a town of SLO’s size doesn’t do bad — we definitely get more acts here than the municipalities of Stockton and Modesto combined. D.K.’s and SLO Brewing pull their weight in a tough market. But when it comes to major acts, it is disheartening watching venues like the Santa Barbara County Bowl and UCSB’s Events Center sell out while Kihn limps into town to show how much he hasn’t grown as a musician.

Many think ASI Concerts should be the salvation, but three basic things hold them back from greatness: massive paranoia from the city and the university, no money and, worse of all, good ole Cal Poly apathy.

It amazes me that students can’t make any of these shows. How much busyness does everyone have to do? Am I missing a lot, or do people here really have the cultural awareness of an old soap dish? Did you know the late leftist Abbie Hoffman spoke here in 1967? Only 400 people showed up, mostly city residents, to Chumash Auditorium. Chumash can hold more than 900 bodies.

Still, though, things are finally looking up. Mary’s Danish is playing at SLO Brewing in two weeks, and rumor has it that there’s a faint possibility They Might Be Giants may play SLO in the near future.

ASI Concerts is trying to get the Cult for Poly Royal, but like any group it tries to get, it’s up in the air. If it did get them, are you really going to go? Or would you rather pay a third more to see them in Irvine?

Vox Theatre’s rendition of old play packs a big ‘Punch’
By David Holbrook

LANCE KOGA Special to the Daily

Lance Koga says people realize violence but take it for granted.

These disturbing scenes were executed with both puppets and actors, and offset by a crude version of what will be a full multi-media blitz, using video, music and slide projections, when the play is presented in its final form.

“The multi-media aspect of the show will contain American references of violence from clips from television shows and movies,” said Koga. The character of the devil from the original version will be transformed into the contemporary “Video-Devil.”

In the final production of Punch and Judy each scene will be done twice — once in a slapstick comedy vein using puppets and then juxtaposed with live actors carrying out the acts of extreme violence. It is definitely not a puppet show for children.

“We’ll probably publicize it as ‘For A Mature Audience Only,’” said Koga. “We’re shooting for a mature audience for whom this issue is nothing new.”

Vox Theatre will be performing at the San Luis Obispo City-County Library on March 9 and 10. Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance are $3 students, $4 general. For more information, call 546-8648.

Four more reasons to get fired up about El Pollo Loco.

There's a healthy treat waiting at your nearby El Pollo Loco. It's the delicious flavor of fresh chicken marinated in a tempting blend of fruit juices, herbs and spices. Then char-broiled over an open flame. You'll love it served hot off the grill with warm tortillas, fresh salsa and your choice of savory side dishes. And if that's not reason enough to visit your nearest participating El Pollo Loco, here are four more great excuses. Just clip these coupons today. And treat yourself to the great taste of the fast food habit worth having.

Theater Review

Though bizzare, play hits a nerve

by Jeff Snelling

It's not often when something is described as "写字楼 (differentially) unusual" that you're in for a delightful surprise. The Visit, a play by Swiss playwright Friedrich Duerrenmatt, is precisely that. The play, set in the decaying once-prosperous town of Gullen in some unnamed European country, is a dark comedy set during a murder mystery. The show starts at 9 p.m. on Wednesdays, Saturdays, and Sundays at 9:30 p.m. For more information, call 543-0223.

The Visit: See separate article.

Kelly D. Mullen

The Visit is a powerful and thought-provoking play that deals with themes of guilt, revenge, and the consequences of actions. It was performed by The Great Mercedes Bookshop (698 Higuera, SLO). The S4 show begins at 9 p.m. For more information, call 543-7951.

Tennis rolls over Westmont

Men's team loses only 2 sets out of 20 in sleepy victory

By Glenn Horn

The men's tennis team had a tough practice Tuesday. Well, actually it was a match against Westmont College, but you wouldn't have been able to convince anyone watching that fact.

The Mustangs lost only two sets out of 20 and strolled to a win in sleepy victory.

The only excitement all afternoon was the match between Cal Poly's No. 5 singles player Alex Havrilenko and Darrin Felberg. The momentum was with Felberg after he won the second set 6-1, but a small dispute over the Westmont player's line calls helped to wake up Havrilenko, who promptly finished off his opponent 6-1.

And other than No. 1 doubles team Neil Berryman and Havrilenko losing their first set 4-6, everything for the Mustangs ran like clockwork.

Rounding out scores, No. 1 Berryman defeated John Tormey 6-2, 6-2; No. 2 Tim Fresenius defeated Lance Krebonge 6-2, 6-3; No. 3 Eric Sasao defeated Chris Elwood 6-1, 6-4; No. 4 Peter Killian defeated Greg Schultz 6-3, 6-3; Havrilenko defeated Felberg 6-3, 1-6, 6-1; and No. 6 Brendan Walsh defeated Ed Amstitz 6-1, 6-3.

In doubles competition, Berryman and Havrilenko defeated Tormey and Kroneberg 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The Cal Poly squad will lock horns with CSU Los Angeles and Chapman College this Friday and Saturday, respectively, to finish out the first half of conference activity.

Division II Chapman is ranked fourth in the nation and is undefeated in conference play, so the match is expected to be for first place in the CCAA.

COMMENCEMENT

From page 1 said, "I came down on the side that it was better to have two ceremonies and be able to give students more tickets."

Largely because of this change, graduates and their guests will not hear an outside speaker at the ceremony. Scott said this is because the split commencement decision was made too late to begin searching for a speaker.

The ceremony, which is scheduled to last one hour and 45 minutes, will include remarks by a member of the Academic Senate, the ASI president and the commencement address given by President Baker.

Participating schools and the outstanding graduate from each will be recognized.

Although the estimated 2,500 spring graduates will be honored as a group at the stadium ceremonies, each school will host a reception to follow where students will be recognized individually.

According to Bob Bostrom, director of housing and a member of the commencement committee that recommended its suggestions to Scott, "There needs to be pomp and circumstance, but it need not be boring."

He said he and his committee felt that the best way to make the ceremony less boring and decrease the number of graduates and guests talking and moving around was to shorten it. They proposed to delete the traditional outside speaker, he said, partially because it is difficult to find a speaker everyone would want to listen to and awkward to ask a speaker to give two commencement addresses.

Scott said, however, that it is possible the school may have an outside speaker in future years. "I realize students feel it's very important to have an outside speaker," he said. "So if it's important to them and it's their commencement, we're going to look very seriously at ways we can accommodate that."
POLY ROYAL

Pawl said the major beer distributors on the Central Coast—Larbraker Bros., Pacific Beverage and All-American—will all "in condolence work out for a year and see how it goes."

"We won't do anything special this year," he said. "There will be the usual displays in the stores saying what's on sale, there will be more beer in the stores, but flyers and bars and things like that are going to be considered a no-no."

Although beer advertising will be scaled back, Pawl predicts there will be no real loss of sales duringPoly.

"It's no big thing—we're not threatened by it," he said. "People are going to drink beer that weekend anyway."

It's a good weekend for us in terms of sales," he added. "But we have bigger weekends than that, like the Fourth of July weekend."
Quake hits Los Angeles area

By Adrian Hodgson
Staff Writer

A strong earthquake rolled through a 200-mile long stretch of Southern California from San Diego to Santa Barbara late Wednesday afternoon.

The 15-second quake struck at about 3:45 p.m. and was centered 30 miles east of Los Angeles. Seismologists at Cal Tech and Menlo Park measured the temblor at 3.5 on the Richter scale.

"It hung in there for a good 10 seconds. This has been the strongest one we've felt up here in a long time," said Mike Mason at radio station KSES in the desert town of Yucca Valley, northeast of Los Angeles.

Jennifer Deng, a writer for the UC Riverside school newspaper, the Highlander, said she had heard of no injuries or damage to structures.

"But people were kind of freaked about it," Deng said. "I was in class (when the earthquake struck). The teachers told us to go under the desks."

Disneyland and some mobile homes in Anaheim reportedly suffered damage, and there were reports of power failures in Riverside County.

The quake affected about a 100-mile radius of downtown Los Angeles and swayed a high-rise in downtown Las Vegas.

Earth movement was felt as far away as Barstow and Palm Springs to the east. It was also felt in Bakersfield.

Interstate 10 closed for a time in San Bernadino County after a rockslide. A six-car accident was reported on I-10, but no injuries were reported.

"It wasn't that strong here," said Scott Paul, who lives in Reseda, about 15 miles north of downtown Los Angeles. "It lasted for a few seconds. It was kind of a shake and a little roll, but it didn't cause any damage around here that I can see."

The large quake followed a smaller temblor that jolted an area east of Los Angeles at 12:37 p.m. The earlier quake was centered three miles northwest of Upland and measured 3.6 on the Richter scale, authorities said.

Upland is 40 miles east of Los Angeles, below the San Gabriel Mountains. Reports of the 12:37 p.m. quake came from La Verne, La Habra, Chino, Claremont and San Dimas, spanning an area from 20 miles to about 40 miles east of Los Angeles.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs.

In general, an earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage, as in the October Bay Area quake.
