ASI candidates announced; election process modified

Candidates forum, computer voting system being planned

By Sabrina L. Garcia

ASI elections are approaching and according to Elections Committee chairperson Joanna Bandler, some important changes have been implemented that will affect the efficiency of the procedure.

In the past, those running for board of directors within their schools have not had a considerable amount of exposure, Bandler said. This year, the candidates were asked to write a 150-word statement that will be published by the elections committee and distributed throughout the campus.

"The candidates were asked to write about themselves, why they feel they are qualified and what their goals are," she said.

"Usually the students don't know the difference between one candidate or another so they just vote for an interesting name or the only female. Now the students have the opportunity to get to know the candidates so they'll feel more comfortable voting for them." Elections are April 18 and 19.

Bandler said a major goal of the election committee is to improve voter registration.

"One positive aspect to help achieve that goal is that there are three people running for president and two people running for vice-president," she said.

Statistics show that when candidates for the larger offices are running unopposed, fewer people vote because they feel it is unnecessary.

Greg Bertens, chairman of the Ad Hoc committee and Board of Director for the School of Liberal Arts, has organized what Bandler believes is the most necessary change: an open forum for the presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

The forum will invite students to ask questions along with a panel of campus leaders.

"I feel that this is long overdue," said Bertens. "The students need more substance. They need to know how the candidates stand on the various issues and how they will affect the future of our campus."

The panel will consist of representatives from KCPR, Mustang Daily, the Greek community, the Ad Hoc Committee and the current president and vice-president. The open forum is scheduled for Tuesday, April 17 from 11 a.m. to noon in the University Union Plaza.

The Elections Committee is presently experimenting with an automated voting system much like one used on campuses like Stanford and USC.

"It's a Macintosh program that will simplify voting and bring up the credibility level of the outcome," said Bandler. "We'd never have to worry about a recount because the computer will do it for us.

"There's a good chance that we'll use it this time but if not, we'll definitely be using this system in the future," she added.

In order to run for an ASI office, candidates must have a ASI, page 9

Cal Poly-backed agriculture school opens in Costa Rica after 6 years

Ceremony draws 900 to come down to E.A.R.T.H.

By Natalie Guerrero

Earth Day may be making all the headlines lately, but more than 900 people celebrated the opening of another E.A.R.T.H. over spring break in Costa Rica.

E.A.R.T.H. (la Escuela de Agricultura de la Region Tropical Humeda) is Costa Rica's first humid tropic agriculture school, one in which Cal Poly plays an intricate role.

The presidents of Honduras and Costa Rica were among the guests at the outdoor opening ceremonies March 26. Classes officially began shortly after a Week of Welcome similar to Cal Poly's WOW.

Cal Poly and the University of Nebraska have jointly supported E.A.R.T.H. for six years with associate dean of academic affairs for the School of

A U.U. Galerie show about mime Fran Dukehart invites viewers to interact with the exhibit.
Why is it that so many people seem to think that life begins at conception and ends at birth? I often question the pro-life group and their motives. Members of that organization spend their afternoons picketing in front of Planned Parenthood clinics as they make tearful pleas with women entering the clinics to spare themselves and their very much alive unborn child.

Recently, according to the Los Angeles Times, the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality cited photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano. As examples of such offensive work, the group most frequently cites photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano.

A critic reviewing the Bush Administration's decision to oppose any legislation that would force the National Endowment for the Arts to fund any art considered obscene or sacrilegious. The White House position was outlined by NEA Chairman Jerry Werblin. The president wants the endowment to make an essential contribution "to the national politics.

A good critic might also note the compelling simplicity of the White House's position: that because the National Endowment for the Arts has already served notice that his government will not allow the National Endowment for the Arts to become a stand-in for the National Endowment for the Arts, the endowment has contributed an essential contribution "to the national politics.

Finally, by refusing to pander to Helms and other members of his own party's so-called new right. President Bush has taken a small but important step toward some restoration of civility in the national politics.

The end of the Cold War has deprived Helms and his fundamentalist colleagues of the demon they once used to stoke the fires of their lucrative direct-mail fund-raising operations. Bush now has issued notice that his government will not allow the National Endowment for the Arts to become a stand-in for the Evil Empire.

—From the Los Angeles Times, March 26.

Pro-lifers should support kids

Maybe it is about time for the pro-lifers to put down their picket signs and put their energy into a constructive and beneficial solution to this significant growth in infant deaths. I realize that members of the pro-life organization believe that they are doing their part to prevent unnecessary deaths, but at the same time infant mortality rates are rising, as well as the number of infants born retarded, disabled, and uncared for.

According to the Commission, the rising infant mortality rates are considered to be a measure of the health and well-being of the United States population as a whole. If 105 infants die each day, 39,000 of the 3.8 babies born annually decide to die the same evening? According to the Commission, the rising infant mortality rates are considered to be a measure of the health and well-being of the United States population as a whole. If 105 infants die each day, 39,000 of the 3.8 babies born annually decide to die the same evening? Eight months later this same mother gives birth to another 3.8 babies. Babies born in Jamaica and Costa Rica have a better chance of seeing their first birthday than infants born in three of the United States' large metropolitan cities. Washington D.C. has a mortality rate of 19.5 per 1,000 infants; Philadelphia has a rate of 17.3 per 1,000 infants; and Los Angeles has a rate of 10.3 per 1,000 infants. These statistics equal those of the Third World. Pretty darn good for the most developed country on the globe.

Why are the pro-lifers doing about this issue? Do they know that the young woman who just came from the walk away from the abortion clinic and to keep her baby, may have decided to smoke crack or marijuana that same evening? Eight months later this same woman gives birth to a dead baby and becomes another statistic in the increasing number of infant mortalities. Or even worse, she gives birth to a retarded or handicapped infant who will never be able to take care of himself. The mother may also have no desire to care for such an infant.

In the pro-life organization that benefits because it was successful in keeping one more woman from making the "wrong choice," or is it the child that benefits for being encouraged to be born into a dim or non-existent future? The United States government needs to create and implement prenatal programs which will aid in cutting the high infant mortality rates. And last, I challenge the pro-life organization to extend the vision of their program to reach mortality rates and into the welfare of those children who they have already switched to "safer" products. They have 30 years' lag time to decide whether a chemical is harmful or not. They have 30 years' lag time to decide whether a chemical is harmful or not. They have 30 years' lag time to decide whether a chemical is harmful or not. They have 30 years' lag time to decide whether a chemical is harmful or not.

I don't believe that we can understand the difficulty of discounting the use of refrigeration or of air conditioners, but there are many substances that may be used instead of foam products, which are so damaging to the only earth we have. If the problem seems to be the cost, paper cups being 27 percent more costly, then the food services should reconsider. The food services make a 33 percent profit (making approximately $10,370 each week and only spending $73,740) with the system that they have set up.

I understand the system they have set up to work best in not getting the money mixed up or students being able to trick the system, but I would like to know where all this extra money goes. Do they spend it on hanging lighting and glass framed prints hanging in the sandwich plane? I think that the money could easily go towards biodegradable products for the food services.

In general, the world's response to national crises is considerably slow. For instance, it took 30 years for the biologically disastrous chemical DDT to be regulated, even though the harm was already obvious to scientists for about 20 years. In the case of destroying the ozone layer, I don't believe that we will have 30 years' lag time to decide whether a chemical is harmful or not.
Los Angeles faces dry season as they suspend Owens Valley pumping

LOS ANGELES (AP) — City officials have agreed to suspend ground water withdrawals from the Owens Valley in accordance with a tentative pact that ended the notorious "water war" with Inyo County residents.

The loss was anticipated, but water agency officials are nevertheless concerned because California is entering its fourth consecutive year of drought.

The nation's second-largest city is facing an estimated 50 percent shortfall in its total water supplies, Department of Water and Power spokesman Ed Freudenburg said Wednesday.

In normal years, the city's aqueduct to the Owens Valley and Mono Basin provides from 70 to 75 percent of Los Angeles' water needs, which averages about 613 million gallons of water a day.

This year, however, the aqueduct will supply only about 25 percent of the city's water.

Inyo County water chief Greg James last week asked the city to stop exporting ground water to Los Angeles for a year, and DWP officials agreed on Monday.

The suspension is needed to give the Eastern Sierra Valley's environment a chance to recover from the drought and previous years of city withdrawals. The Owens Valley is about 200 miles north of Los Angeles.

"Los Angeles basically agreed with us that ground water pumping should be limited ...," James said.

"There really was no debate about it."

DWP officials said they already had factored into their projections the possibility of having to eliminate the Eastern Sierra water source.

The reduced flow from the Owens Valley aqueduct, one of the city's major sources of water, has prompted city officials to look elsewhere to make up the deficit.

Mayor Tom Bradley asked residents last week to voluntarily cut back on their water use by 10 percent. Los Angeles also pumps ground water from beneath the San Fernando Valley, and is relying increasingly on the regional Metropolitan Water District, which supplies water from water agencies to recover from California and the Colorado River.

Under the agreement, about 89,000 acre-feet of ground water will be pumped this year.

Agriculture who coordinates the Costa Rica project from Cal Poly, attended E.A.R.T.H.'s opening.

"It was an impressive ceremony, especially when a young lady who was the master of ceremonies introduced each representing country and students entered carrying their national flag," Sabel said.

Sixty students from eight different Central American countries and the Dominican Republic were accepted from the 600 applicants to be the first freshman class of E.A.R.T.H.

"You could see on student faces that they were very proud to represent their country," said Sabel.

The repeated theme of preserving the tropical rain forest while improving agricultural methods was emphasized in the eight speeches given by the selected guests. During the ceremony students planted trees to symbolize their commitment to the challenge of preserving the environment for future generations. Students also wrote letters to future E.A.R.T.H. students and placed them in a time capsule that will be opened in 25 years.

The official photographer of the ceremonies was Juli Reiten, a Cal Poly art and design senior, who was the master of ceremonies.

"It was an impressive ceremony with E.A.R.T.H. will continue at least until June 1991, said Carter. Cal Poly is in Phase II-A, which includes helping the college hire more faculty and developing curriculum for the junior and senior years. Only freshman and sophomore courses are currently offered.

Since 1985, more than 100 faculty, staff and students from Cal Poly and the University of Nebraska have assisted the governments of the United States and Costa Rica in the planning and development stages of this new four-year college.

Students who attend the college must be from a humid tropic region. All students, faculty and employees will live on campus because the nearest city, San Jose, Costa Rica is 60 miles away.

Mustang Poly crushes Cal Lutheran

Mustang tennis now ranked No. 1 in United States

It was a clean sweep for the Cal Poly men’s tennis team.

The Mustangs got out the broom and swept Cal Lutheran off the courts 9-0 in a non-conference match Tuesday afternoon at the Poly courts.

“Although we ended up winning 9-0,” said coach Kevin Platt afterwards, “It was a good match for us to play, even though we ended up winning 9-0.”

Cal Poly, ranked No. 1 in the recent Division II tennis rankings, rolled in the singles matches. Neal Berryman, in the top slot for the Mustangs, struggled early, but beat Tapio Rantanen of Cal Lutheran, 7-5, 6-1.

A typical slow start,” said Berryman of his performance. “I didn’t play well, but I was happy that I was able to win even though I wasn’t playing my best.

The Mustangs’ Tim Fresenius, in the second singles spot, knocked off Cal Lutheran’s Matt Simpson 6-3, 6-2. Eric Sasao, the Mustangs’ No. 3 singles player, quickly finished off his opponent 6-0, 6-2.

Cal Poly’s Peter Killian downed Cal Lutheran’s No. 4 singles player 6-1, 6-3, while Alex Havrilenko picked up a 6-0, 6-2 win for the Mustangs. Max Allman, in the final singles spot, cruised to a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

“Cal Lutheran, the eighth-ranked team in the NAIA division, pushed Cal Poly in the doubles sets. Allman/Sasao beat Cal Lutheran’s Matt Simpson/Tony Cohen 7-4, 6-3. Cal Poly’s No. 2 doubles team of Fresenius/Killian made quick work of Maturo/Schnaible 6-3, 6-1. And the No. 3 doubles of Allman/Sasao beat Cal Lutheran’s Philip Jacobs and Rantanen 6-1, 7-5.

“Our guys played well,” said Platt. “It wasn’t like they were playing guys that were a lot worse.

Cal Poly (12-3 overall, 6-0 in conference) heads into Riverside with the No. 1 ranking and the top-ranked doubles team in the nation (Berryman and Havrilenko) Sunday. In reality, I sometimes wish we weren’t ranked No. 1,” said Platt. “It can sometimes create a feeling of accomplishment.

“The rankings right now hardly mean anything. The guys were real happy when they found out. But they know it’s the rankings at the end of the season that count.”

SUMMER JOBS AVAILABLE

The Morning Star Company has hauled tomatoes from farmer's fields to canneries for the past 20 years. We require approximately 80 drivers starting July 1st through the later part of October, in Los Banos. Our drivers earn from $900 to $1100 per week depending on 1) driver performance, and 2) seasonal volume. Most of our drivers are college students. We provide guidance to obtain a Class A drivers license and pre-season training. The work is extremely demanding, requiring significant time and mental commitment. Spring graduates and those willing to pupil fall semester are encouraged to apply. We provide free housing for all drivers.

Just when Cal Poly students were about to take a three-day break from classes, Cal Poly baseball team took the field for a three-game set versus Chapman.

"We lost two tough games this weekend for a three-game set versus Chapman. "We were going to have to win this series to be a contender," said McFarland.

With over two-thirds of the season completed, the Mustangs' record stands at 16-19 overall, and 8-7 in conference play. Four of Cal Poly's remaining 16 games are against league foes as the Mustangs hit the stretch drive in search of a post-season playoff berth.

After 35 games, Noce continues to lead the Mustang hitting attack with a .455 average and 35 RBIs. Other standouts include senior outfielder Drew Herron who has posted a .384 record and 3.84 ERA in anchoring the pitching staff.

Late basketball star

Gathers' estate will be held in probate for son

LOS ANGELES (AP) -- Despite arguments from attorneys representing the family of Hank Gathers, a Philadelphia attorney was appointed Wednesday as administrator of the late basketball star's estate.

Commissioner Robert J. Blaylock of the Los Angeles probate court upheld the appointment of Martin Krimsky by a Pennsylvania court.

Krimsky was named as administrator a day after Gathers' funeral by attorneys for Marva Crump, the mother of Gathers' 6-year-old son, Aaron Crump. Gathers' funeral was held March 12.

Galerie show focuses on miming

By Patty Hayes

San Luis Obispo performing artist Fran Dukehart loves what she does for a living. "I love it so much that I want everybody to do it," Dukehart, best known as Daisy the Mime, said Tuesday. And she is sharing her love of theater and mime in a visual art exhibit, showing at the University Union Galerie through April 10.

The exhibit, entitled "Speechless," was created by Dukehart and Cal Poly art and design professor Robert Howell. The artists have created an exhibit which seeks to heighten one's sensations of sight, sound and touch through active participation. They ask that the viewer go silently through the exhibit, listening to the changing background music to fully appreciate and enjoy it.

Dukehart is currently satisfying her creativity, "I want you to delve into the darkness and the light," she said. As she spoke of past jobs, she slipped in and out of various characters and her body was the body of the athlete, the mind of the novelist and the artist, the mind of the mime, she added.

Howell created eight large positive-negative form panels with images of Dukehart in various costumes on them. The panels were designed to present opposite viewpoints, Howell said. Several "mystery boxes" allow viewers to see and feel objects representing the contrasting emotions that an actor must possess, Dukehart said.

Much of the exhibit is done in black which gives a theatrical feeling. Dukehart called it the "magic darkness" of the theater. She said not only is the darkness a wonderful feeling, but so is the spotlight.

One section of the exhibit invites the viewer to step onto a stage under a spotlight to simulate the experience of being a performer. The exhibit is also an invitation for participants to exercise creativity and imagination. "I want you to delve into the creativity," Dukehart said. "Leave the destructive and go to the creative."

In a world of violence the theater can serve, not as an escape, Dukehart said, but as a healthy outlet. "It's a healthy addiction to ask people to be more playful," she said.

She said both adults and children can enjoy the exhibit. And since it is a hands-on show, children do not have to obey the usual "rules" of a museum.

Dukehart, a married mother of three, has had a 20-year career in the entertainment field. Her time in the spotlight has ranged from modeling to stage work.

"I want to be a mother, I want to be a wife and I want so badly to be in that spotlight," she said. As she spoke of past jobs, she slipped in and out of various characters and her natural tendency to perform became apparent. Her facial expressions instantly make one think of a mime or a clown.

Carvey's disappointing in 'Opportunity Knocks'

By Tara Murphy

If I were Dana Carvey and I heard "Opportunity Knock" at my front door, I would ignore it and go back to thinking up material for Saturday Night Live.

While Carvey is funny as the Church Lady and does a mean impression of George Bush, we don't see this side of him in the movie. In fact, the best impression you get from Carvey is the George Bush impression you see in the commercials. And that's more than there is in the actual movie, anyway.

For some reason the Carvey of SNL is missing here. In his place is a washed-out, mildly-amusing double trapped in Carvey's body, who is forced to rely on a weak script and cliched jokes as attempted humor.

The movie is the second one by director Donald Petrie, whose first movie was the popular Mystic Pizza. If I were Dana Carvey and I heard "Opportunity Knock" at my front door, I would ignore it and go back to thinking up material for Saturday Night Live.

Lou Pasquino (Todd Graff) and Eddie Farrell (Dana Carvey) plan the perfect con in 'Opportunity Knocks.'
The Cal Poly Theatre will leave the 20th century on Saturday to be transported back to the days of Louis the 14th as the Aulos Ensemble performs authentic music of the Baroque Period. As part of the Cal Poly Arts Quincentenary Series, the Ensemble will be performing on original instruments of that time period.

"They're considered one of the finest Baroque ensembles in America," said Cal Poly Arts program manager Peter Wilt. Saturday's program, entitled "The Music of Versailles: A Royal Entertainment" will be performed on authentic 17th century instruments. The sound of the period instrument is much softer and mellower in tone than their modern counterparts. Wilt said. This makes for a better blending of the wind and string instruments.

Also, because they are playing the music on the instruments it was written for, it sounds the way it should, Wilt said. With the modern instrumentation, the wind and string instruments tend to take over and they don't blend as well together.

The Ensemble was formed in 1973, and has toured in Australia, the Far East and throughout North America. Flutist Anne Briggs, cellist Myron Lutzke, violinist Linda Quan and oboist Marc Schachman founded the group when they realized a need for Baroque music in New York. Joined by harpsichordist Arthur Haas in 1987, the group has become internationally known for their outstanding performances of this type of music, Wilt said.

"This is music you would have heard at Versailles during the court of Louis the 14th," he said. "It's an opportunity to hear something that you wouldn't hear." Tickets for the April 7 concert are $14 and $12 for adults and $11 and $10 for students and senior citizens. They will be available at the Cal Poly Theatre from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays. Curtain time is 8 p.m. For more information, call 756-1421.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legendary jazz singer Sarah Vaughan, the "Divine One" renowned for her unusual range and flowing style peppered with flavors of bebop and scat, died of cancer eight days after her 66th birthday.

Harold Levy, her manager and friend, said she died Tuesday of lung cancer at her home in the Hidden Hills area of the west San Fernando Valley. She had been ill for nearly a year and was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center hours before her death.

"Sarah Vaughan was among the most powerful, influential and soulful voices of all time, a astonishing star perfection with an vocal range and a genius for conveying emotion through her music," said Quincy Jones, who first worked with Vaughan in 1957 as the arranger on "Misty."

Some of her other memorable songs included "Broken-Hearted Melody," "Send in the Clowns," and "If You Could See Me Now."

Vaughan's voice, which had phenomonal control, had lovely tone and was true in pitch. She had a mastery of scat singing, improvising, swinging and phrasing. Vaughan's style was formed by her early association with bebop, singing with Billy Eckstine, Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie in the Earl Hines and Eckstine bands in the 1940s.

During that time, with her deep, sultry voice and dramatic colorings, she was known as the most distinguished jazz singer of the 40s. Born in Newark, N.J., on March 27, 1924, Vaughan studied piano from age 7 and was a church choir member and organist by 12. Her father, a carpenter, played guitar and her mother sang in the church choir. Vaughan won Esquire's new star award that year and the Down Beat poll as best female jazz vocalist from 1947 through 1952. She won a competitive Grammy for best female vocal jazz performance for "Gershwin, Live!" in 1982. Survivors include her 87-year-old mother, Ada, of Los Angeles and her daughter, actress Paris handheld, and soulful voices of all time, a

Harold Levy, her manager and friend, said she died Tuesday of lung cancer at her home in the Hidden Hills area of the west San Fernando Valley. She had been ill for nearly a year and was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center hours before her death.

"Sarah Vaughan was among the most powerful, influential and soulful voices of all time, a astonishing star perfection with an vocal range and a genius for conveying emotion through her music," said Quincy Jones, who first worked with Vaughan in 1957 as the arranger on "Misty."

Some of her other memorable songs included "Broken-Hearted Melody," "Send in the Clowns," and "If You Could See Me Now."

Vaughan's voice, which had phenomonal control, had lovely tone and was true in pitch. She had a mastery of scat singing, improvising, swinging and phrasing. Vaughan's style was formed by her early association with bebop, singing with Billy Eckstine, Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie in the Earl Hines and Eckstine bands in the 1940s.

During that time, with her deep, sultry voice and dramatic colorings, she was known as the most distinguished jazz singer of the 40s. Born in Newark, N.J., on March 27, 1924, Vaughan studied piano from age 7 and was a church choir member and organist by 12. Her father, a carpenter, played guitar and her mother sang in the church choir. Vaughan won Esquire's new star award that year and the Down Beat poll as best female jazz vocalist from 1947 through 1952. She won a competitive Grammy for best female vocal jazz performance for "Gershwin, Live!" in 1982. Survivors include her 87-year-old mother, Ada, of Los Angeles and her daughter, actress Paris handheld, and soulful voices of all time, a

Santana scheduled to give concert at Poly

But popular groups now may not mean better shows later

By Larre M. Sterling
STAFF WRITER

With the recent announcement that ASI Concerts is bringing Santana and Miles Davis to Cal Poly this month, one might assume that such names would generate more ticket sales, more money and the ASI allocation for better concerts in the future. Unfortunately, this is not necessarily the case.

"We have a responsibility to provide diverse programs to the student body and break even," said Dani Soban, chairman of ASI Concerts.

According to Soban, ASI Concerts hopes for a profit due to expectations for high ticket sales from the upcoming concerts, but the committee cannot guarantee that this money will be designated for future concerts.

ASI Concerts is a branch of ASI Programs. ASI programs encompasses ASI Concerts, ASI Special Events, ASI Outings, ASI Speaker's Forum, ASI at Arts, ASI Cultural Advisory Committee and ASI Music Board of Control.

Each one of these branches of ASI Programs have its own budget to plan events. Although these committees have separate responsibilities and budgets, the ASI Finance Committee in its budget considers them all to be one entity titled ASI Programs. At the end of the year, ASI Finance Committee reviews its programs as a whole to see if it would receive its own budget to plan events. Although these committees have separate responsibilities and budgets, the ASI Finance Committee reviews its programs as a whole to see if it would receive its own budget to plan events.

In the past few years, ASI Concerts has had to concentrate on just breaking even. Both of fall and winter quarter's concerts, The Untouchables and Eddie and the Tide, did not break even, Soban said.

"We haven't run a surplus big enough to host a free concert. Basically, the past years we've just broken even," Smith said. "You win a few and you lose a few. Right now money keeps going back to the program board to even up the account."

Even though the ASI Finance Committee subsidizes the ASI Programs groups by paying for phone bills, office space, photocopying and other services, as well as the fact that a portion of each student's registration fee goes to the groups, Cal Poly's entertainment committees rarely make enough money to spend on better events.

"It's hard to make a profit unless you charge the students a lot of money for tickets. No student wants to pay $70 to $80 to see a concert," Smith said.

"There was a time earlier in the '80s when we were attracting significant names. Even now we attract big names, but when it comes to submitting a request, ASI Finance Committee has a strict policy on how much money we can spend on events," Soban said.

"Without the student's registration fee going to the groups, Cal Poly's entertainment committees rarely make enough money to spend on better events."

As a result, any profit from one of these branches goes into ASI Program's pocket to first pay off debt and to second build a reserves account for future need.

According to Mark Smith, chairman of ASI Programs, there is no substantial reserves account as of yet. "If we in the future increase the reserves enough to safe-cushion, then we can subsidize free or bigger concerts."

He feels that ASI Concerts should concentrate on just breaking even. Both of fall and winter quarter's concerts, The Untouchables and Eddie and the Tide, did not break even, Soban said.

Maiden Pegasus launch scrubbed due to wet weather

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Rain forced space agency officials to scrub the scheduled maiden flight Wednesday of a winged Pegasus rocket, an economy vehicle designed to put small satellites in orbit after an aircraft launch.

The flight was tentatively rescheduled for Thursday. If the weather improves, the 41,000-pound rocket will be strapped under a B-52 and flown to 40,000 feet for launch over the military's Western Test Range, according to the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

The 440-pound launch payload, dubbed Pegsat, will be placed in a polar orbit of 368 miles. Pegsat will release a small, experimental Navy communications satellite. Remaining on the Pegsat frame will be an instrument package to send data back to scientists about the stress on Pegasus and its payload as it goes through the atmosphere.

Two canisters designed to release chemicals to produce an artificial "northern lights" effect over Central Canada also will be aboard. Scientists will use the glowing clouds to study the Earth's upper atmosphere.

Pegasus, developed by Virginia-based Orbital Sciences Corp. and Delaware-based Hercules Aerospace Corp., is designed to put small satellites into orbit at low cost.

The Pentagon and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration want to use Pegasus for military and science satellites, but Pegasus also is expected to attract business from companies, foreign governments and university scientists who need a cheap way to put small payloads in orbit.

An Orbital Science Corp. official estimated the cost of a Pegasus launch at between $6 million and $8 million, depending on how much business it gets.

Fee increase being sought by Children's Center board

Parents at the ASI Children's Center are hoping to designate $1 per student from activity fees to help pay for expansion of the current facility, which has a three-year waiting list for day care.

The center's Parent Advisory Board has developed a petition and must collect 900 signatures by Tuesday to place an initiative on the ASI spring ballot, said Jene Eisen, chairwoman of the board. The group will have the petition available to sign today in the UU during activity hour, 11 to noon.

The board wants to designate $1 per student for a period of 10 years to help finance the construction.

Eisen said the CSU Chancellor will not approve the Children's Center if the money is not raised. She said fees charged parents are not enough to cover expenses.

"We have to get this on the ballot, or find another way to raise the money," Eisen said. "If not, the center may not be approved."

Thatcher seeks to blunt impact of protested government poll taxes

Despite rioting, the plans to hold firm on decision

LONDON (AP) — Recognizing this is in serious political trouble, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has moved to blunt the impact of its unpopular local government tax.

But even though the so-called poll tax has provoked protest in a demonstration that turned into a riot Saturday, the government shows no sign of backing down.

Instead, Mrs. Thatcher is taking a gamble that she can make the tax palatable by the mid-90s deadline for the next election.

And that, even close aides acknowledge, is an uncertain prospect.

"That's the question, and I don't know the answer," said a Thatcher aide, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It is not easy to be popular when you are taxing 17 million more people."

On Tuesday, Environment Secretary Chris Patten ordered all high-spending local authorities to impose lower taxes and cut their budgets for the current fiscal year. He said the move would reduce the bills of 4 million people by $50-$160 a year.

Besides, the tax that took effect April 1 averages $592 a person a year, about one-third higher than the government target. It must be paid by most of the 38 million adult Britons. Previously, only some 12 million property owners paid local government taxes.

But the immediate effect of Patten's "capping" of the high-spenders was to exacerbate the controversy.

The opposition Labour Party was angered that no authorities were ruled by Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative Party were on the list.

The targeted authorities claimed they would have to cut services and accused the government of being vindictive.

Some threatened to fight the measure in court.

Patten, who is in charge of the tax, is dropping hints of further fine-tuning.

But Mrs. Thatcher says she will not abandon the community charge, as the tax is officially called.

She introduced the reform believing a head tax was fairer than a property tax because it would not everybody, not just homeowners.

She also believed that once the bills came in, taxpayers would blame them on Labor high-spenders.

Instead, the blame is falling on her. And the Patten refinements appear to consist largely of spending more central government money to bring down the levels of the poll tax.

That's precisely what Mrs. Thatcher did at the last elections. But threats of a retreat and prevents her from cutting income tax and boosting old-age pensions, health spending and other taxes.

Another blow to the tax is worsened by economic problems.

A year ago the Tories were claiming to be whipping inflation and turning the economy around. Now interest rates have hit 15 percent, inflation is heading above 8 percent, and the Tories have fallen 20 points behind Labour.

"It is not possible to claim economic miracles one year and then be forced to put interest rates up to historically high levels the following year and retain a reputation for competence," said John Cole, a political analyst for the British Broadcasting Corp.

"But what has made this doubly difficult is the prime minister's own identification with the poll tax," he wrote in the weekly Listener.

Saturday's riot shocked Britons and temporarily distracted from the tax itself.

The riot shows no sign of dying. It all comes down to the personality of the 64-year-old prime minister's daughter. She won't be moved on an issue she believes is right.

Hong Kong angry...

Chinese congress approves new law for British colony

BEIJING (AP) — China's legislature gave final approval today to the basic law by which Beijing will govern Hong Kong after 1997, but Hong Kong politicians immediately demanded it be amended.

The National People's Congress, which largely rubber-stamps decisions by top leaders, made no changes of its own in the law, which was thrashed out during the past five years by a special Chinese-Hong Kong committee.

Under the law Hong Kong, which has been ruled by Britain since 1894, is promised a high degree of autonomy within China and protection of its capitalist economic system for at least 50 years. However, many of Hong Kong's 5.7 million residents fear the guarantees are not strong enough, and they already are emigrating to escape coming under Communist rule.

The law provides for a 60-seat local legislature in which 20 members could be directly elected at first, 24 members in 1999 and 30 members in the year 2003. It also sets up a complicated split-voting procedure that gives appointed legislators power to veto controversial bills.

After Hong Kong residents loudly supported last year's massive pro-democracy protests on the mainland, China added provisions for declaring a state of emergency in Hong Kong and banned subversive activities and contacts between Hong Kong and foreign political groups.

Hong Kong residents greeted the draft's publication in February with protests and demands for greater democracy.

The colony's legislature voted 20-6 today to ask China to change the law before 1997.

Tens of thousands of Hong Kong residents already have emigrated because of fear about life under Communist rule, and the pace has stepped up sharply since China used its army in June to crush the pro-democracy protests.

Hudson's ex-lover files $22 million libel suit over book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson's ex-lover claimed Wednesday in a $22 million libel suit that he was maliciously portrayed as a psychiatric criminal by the authors of a book about the late actor.

Marc Christian, who won $5.5 million from the Hudson estate in a landmark AIDS lawsuit, said in a statement of claim filed in Superior Court that actress and närrator Marion Mitchelson that he was shamed by the book's depiction of his relationship with the actor.

The Tom Clark and Dick Kleiner book "Rock Hudson, Friend of Mine," released last month, referred to Christian as "a criminal, a thief, an unclean person, a Friend of Mine," released last month, referred to Christian as "a criminal, a thief, an unclean person, a criminal, a thief, an unclean person, a Friend of Mine," released last month, referred to Christian as "a criminal, a thief, an unclean person, a Mitchelson said the portrayal was false and that he was shamed by the book's depiction of his relationship with the actor.

"He's just not going to sit still for it," Mitchelson said. "We asked them to take out all the passages we felt were libelous and they didn't take them out." In addition to Clark and Kleiner, the suit names New York-based Pharo Books as defendants.

Marc Christian, a spokesman for the publisher, said, "We didn't immediately available for comment.

"The writings are libelous on their face because Christian is charged with improper and immoral conduct," Mitchelson said. "They've backed up by any facts at all.

Give your parents a pleasant surprise. Tell them how much you saved on your IBM Personal System/2® and IBM Proprinter® with the special student prices.* What’s more, the IBM PS/2® Loan for Learning makes paying for your PS/2 even easier.

Let us show you how easy it is to own and use a PS/2. It comes with easy-to-use, preloaded software, IBM Mouse and color graphics.

You’ll see how quickly you can turn out reports, term papers and sparkling graphics that could give your professors a pleasant surprise, too.

*El Corral Bookstore Guarantees that there will be No Lower Prices Offered Through June 15, 1990.
Purchases are limited to full time students, faculty and staff.
