Board of Directors rejects Taylor's VP appointment

Denham turned down for spot by two-thirds vote

By Larre M. Sterling

The ASI Board of Directors rejected the controversial ap­pointment of Jeff Denham to the position of executive vice pres­ident in a three-hour meeting Wednesday night.

The meeting began with an open house event in which members of the public, spoke both in favor of and against Denham's appoint­ment. ASI president-elect Adam Taylor, who appointed Denham to the position, was among those who spoke on behalf of Denham.

After other agenda items, the Board went into executive (clos­ed) session in order to hear a recommendation about Denham's appointment from the Ad Hoc committee and to discuss Denham's qualifications and in­volvement in the Poly Royal riots. The session later was opened to the public, however, because Mustang Daily challeng­ed the legality of the closed ses­sion.

The Board of Directors re­jected Denham's appointment through accepting the Ad Hoc Committee's report by a two-thirds margin. The Ad Hoc Committee did not recommend Denham on three grounds.

First, the committee was con­cerned about Denham's ability to deal with controversy. Greg Bertens, a director for the School of Liberal Arts and the chairman of the Ad Hoc commit­tee, said the committee conclud­ed that Denham did not handle himself well regarding his arrest in the Poly Royal riots. Bertens said Denham did not understand the "danger of the riot situa­tion."

The committee also felt that Denham's letter to the editor submitted to Mustang Daily was unprofessional. The letter was written as a rebuttal to an earlier one.

Secondly, the committee decided that Denham does not have enough experience with ASI. Bertens said the position should be filled by someone who desires to gain leadership experi­ence from ASI as opposed to gaining basic learning knowledge about ASI. He said Denham showed a general lack of direc­tion with the position and lacks specific goals. "His lack of expe­rience in ASI will hurt his ability to fulfill the position of ASI ex­ecutive vice president," Bertens said.

Ad Hoc said that the executive vice president should have enough experience with ASI as opposed to gaining basic learning knowledge about ASI.

The committee also felt that Denham's letter to the editor submitted to Mustang Daily was unprofessional. The letter was written as a rebuttal to an earlier one.

Committee considers planning 1-day Poly Royal replacement

By Carol Boosenbark

A committee of students is trying to organize a one-day open house event in reaction to Presi­dent Warren Baker's decision to "indefinitely cancel" Poly Royal. The Ad Hoc committee, primarily con­sisting of members of the execu­tive team from this year's Poly Royal, is holding informal meetings in order to brainstorm ideas for the new event, ten­sively scheduled as early as early winter quarter 1991.

The group plans to center the event around departmental displays, with a reduction in concession stands.

Students design Cuesta building model

Arch. class helps in student center getting approval

By Stephanie A. Penner

Publicity would be limited, and only Cal Poly alumni and parents of Cal Poly students would be invited. There would not be a holiday for students as in the past for Poly Royal.

"It's got to be built up right. The way it was run in the past, it got away from open house and got more into a food fair, party-type image," said Tim Kraus, logistics coordinator for Poly Royal 1990.

The group expects that a decrease in concession stands would cause drastic financial losses to clubs and organizations. This concern has prompted the committee to look into other op­tions.

I'd like to start something new...from ground zero," said Bruce Sherman, newly elected chairman of the event. The group wants to begin with a very small open house, improving it slowly in the coming years.

The committee has been in contact with other University of California and California State University campuses, and has suggested that all campuses hold open house events on the same day.

"We are developing a new pro­gram...we are learning from OPEN HOUSE," he said.

Cuesta College currently is going through master planning for the structural development of the campus over the next five years.

To help students visualize the center, Cal Poly architecture pro­fessors were asked if they would be interested in assigning their classes the task of drawing and designing models for the proposed student center. Cal Poly professors Don Swearingen accepted the task.

Cuesta held elections for the proposed student center.

During the week of May 7-11, Cuesta held elections for the proposed student center.

Of the 8,000 students currently attending the college, 1,455 stu­dents needed to vote and 66 per­cent had to vote "yes" for the go-ahead of the student center. Marcom Piros, student pres­ident of Cuesta College, said Cal Poly's models resulted in a posi­tive voting outcome.

"The models helped a voter gain approval," he said.

Credit/no credit's big change

The Academic Senate, a faculty organization, is in the process of submitting a resolution to President Baker calling for the number of units a student can take credit/no credit to be reduced from 45 to 18. Furthermore, in addition to their committee's recommendations, they propose to exempt all lower division (GEK) courses from being taken credit/no credit. The Academic Senate's rationale for this action was that the credit/no credit option was originally not intended to be used for lower division courses. The resolution from the Academic Senate also said that letter grades cause students to "strive for excellence." In addition, they cited the fact that other CSU schools have stricter credit/no credit standards. CSU Long Beach allows only 12 units to be taken credit/no credit.

The Academic Senate's revamping of this resolution is excessive and it should be passed in the form in which it originally came away from the Academic Senate's committee, with no lower division course restrictions. A reduction of the number of possible credit/no credit units is a good idea, because allowing 45 units, nearly one-quarter of most curriculums, does penalize students who don't use the credit/no credit system, as Academic Senate pointed out. But to further limit which courses a student may take credit/no credit, while still reducing the amount of courses they can take, is placing undue and unneeded restrictions on students.

If students can take only 18 units credit/no credit (only a small percentage of their curriculum), then their classes should be up to the individual. Where we choose to place our academic emphasis should be our choice.

A tribute to Dr. Gonzo

... maybe this is all pure gibberish — a product of the demented imagination of a lazy drunken hillbilly with a heart full of hate who has found out how to live out there where the weird winds blow — to sneer in the dark whiskey and drive off on empty streets with nothing in mind except falling in love and not getting arrested. No Ipsa Lociator. Let the world understand. By Steve Jones

From the introduction of Hunter S. Thompson's Generation of Swine Tales of Bomb and Degradation in the '80s.

I was first turned on to Hunter S. Thompson two years ago by a friend. If you're not familiar with this doctor of gonzo journalism, he first came on the journalistic scene in the late '60s and immediately established himself as the renegade journalist against the system that he studied for so long finally got him. His drug-induced, Hallucinated vision strikes one as having been, after all, the sanest," said writer Nelson Algren. Where the Buffalo Roam (an absolute must-see for those of you with VCRs). His syndicated column, "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas," is about a trip from Los Angeles to Las Vegas with his lawyer in a red convertible with a whole trunk full of illegal drugs. The changes stem from an 11-hour search of Thompson's house after a sexual assault charge by Gail Palmer-Slater, a pornographic movie producer. Palmer-Slater apparently asked Thompson for an interview and sent him a card saying "Sex is a dirty business but I got a real good time." Also enclosed was a video entitled, "Shrooms for Sensational Sex.

When Thompson suspected they were conducting the interview in his hot tub (I don't know HOW he could have gotten the wrong idea), she refused and later said he got angry and twisted her left breast. She immediately established himself as the premiere outlaw journalist of American affairs.

Now we could argue about the legality of the search (which Thompson called part of a "witch-hunt"), or the morality of Thompson's drug use. But what it really comes down to is, the drug use got him hurdles, I have confidence that they won't break your spirit or wit. If you're not familiar with Thompson, his drug-induced demented perception of events as they happened. It is a visual story in which he tells to us. Ethnic study need hasn't been met!

In response to the letter written by William L. Preston in the Mustang Daily on Tuesday, May 22, 1990, The Coalition for Ethnic Studies felt a need for clarity concerning the subject of ethnic studies. Dr. Preston suggested that the need for ethnic studies at Cal Poly has long since been fulfilled. He justified the ethnic nature of Cal Poly academics, which is a position that the Coalition for Ethnic Studies feels a need for clarification.

In his letter, Dr. Preston proposes a question, "How would a specific ethnic studies course, taught by a member of a respected ethnic group, benefit students in an ethnic studies department, contribute to an enhancement of general education beyond that already provided by anthropologists, geographers, and sociologists?"

To use the terms "contribute" and "enhance" implies that there are presently courses that meet the true definition of ethnic studies, and is somewhat misleading. At present, there are no courses that focus on the study of the cultures, lifestyles, and social structures of minority groups in the United States from the perspective of the minority groups themselves. Please note, however, the term "contribute" is not to say from the perspectives of the minority groups themselves. Engineering technology dept. gets 10 high-tech thermometers

By Ann Slaughter

High-tech thermometers donated to the Cal Poly engineering technology department will provide hands-on learning for engineering students.

The donation of 10 thermometers known as RTDs (resistance temperature detectors) resulted from the association of two Cal Poly professors with Kevin Martin, chief executive officer of KPK Industries.

Martin and engineering technology professors Fred Friedman and Charles Loman are members of the Instrumentation Society of America.

"We got to talking in one of the meetings, and he (Martin) said he might be able to donate these thermometers to the campus if they could be used," Friedman said.

Friedman said he uses the RTDs in his instrumentation of mechanical systems course, ETME 337.

"I had the students try and determine what type of thermometer it was and what the specifications for the thermometer were," Friedman said.

There are many types of resistance temperature detectors, he said. The ones that were donated are platinum. The 10 thermometers are valued at $3,000.

Friedman also noted that there will be many uses for the RTDs.

Leadership program ends its first year

Readies itself to become full-scale operation in fall

By Joe Tarica

Leadership program, "Winners in Training," open to all Cal Poly students, faculty, staff and alumni, is a comprehensive developmental program concentrating on personal skills. The program trains through activities such as ropes courses, workshops and group consultations, said Rod Neubert, University Union associate director for program management.

"What you learn in the classroom is only part of what you need to know to be a winner in life," reads the WIT program philosophy.

"Winners in Training," which developed from 10 years of research, is a synthesis of 50 other leadership programs that focus on change for the ordinary individual.

"We've taking all of these resources that initially were open to small groups (such as student union) and making them available to all," Friedman said.

The thermometers that were recently donated to the ET department are both versatile and accurate. Each is valued at $300.

"I foresee applications in the future for them — possibly they'll be used in senior projects, where students need to measure temperatures," he said.

Friedman said the RTDs could also be used in the food industry to measure the temperature of a vat of food components. They are also used in process plants, and in refineries, where one must measure the temperature of a refined fluid, he said. Power plants also use them to measure the temperature of steam.

Three of the RTDs are on loan to engineering technology professor Bob Rogers for use in the air conditioning and heating system, Rogers said. An RTD can sense the temperature and send the information back to a computer, where it uses the information to determine what type of heating system is needed. Rogers also uses them to measure the temperature of steam.

Mustang Daily, Friday, May 25, 1990

The Mustang Daily is now accepting applications for its Summer 1990 editor and staff. Positions open include:

- Editor-in-chief

Health Center tests students for chlamydia, educates on STDs

By June Thompson
Staff Writer

It is important for those at risk to be better informed about the most prevalent sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) in the United States and Europe, according to a recent Abbott Laboratories news release.

The disease is chlamydia. There are an estimated three million to five million new cases of this bacterial infection each year in the United States. About 70 percent of women and 30 percent of men having chlamydia exhibit no symptoms.

Because many carriers of chlamydia do not know they have the disease, which can result in sterility in both men and women if left untreated, said Dr. Andrea Brauning of Cal Poly's Health Center. She said it is important for those at risk to be tested.

"We see quite a bit of chlamydia," she said. "We recommend that sexually active women be tested when they have a 'Pop' test once a year."

For men, she added, STD screening can be done in a urinalysis.

The U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) set new STD treatment guidelines last September. CDC recommends testing for all pregnant women in the first trimester. For pregnant women with the risk factors of multiple sex partners, gonorrhea and presence or history of an STD, an additional test is recommended in their third trimester.

Chlamydia is the leading cause of tubal pregnancy. In infants, it is the common cause of neonatal eye infections and pneumonitis.

Complications from the disease in women and newborns have an estimated indirect cost of $1 billion a year.

CDC guidelines also recommend testing for women 24 years of age or younger and for those who are sexually active with a new partner within the preceding three months.

A recent study by Dr. Lane Mercer, chief of gynecology at Northwestern Memorial Hospital in Chicago, involved 1,376 women under 25 years of age who showed no symptoms. Chlamydia was found in 7.6 percent of these women, who were private patients of specialists in gynecology, obstetrics and family practice.

A pamphlet available at Cal Poly's Health Center entitled "What are sexually transmitted diseases?" notes that among those with symptoms, some men and a few women report a "bail meus-like discharge" and "stinging when urinating." Other symptoms are abdominal pain in women and testicular pain in men.

The pamphlet also noted that infected persons must tell their partners and be treated with antibiotics.

turnout of 1,544," he said. "Of those students, 1,191 (77 percent) voted 'yes' on the center. The models were very effective for the fact that the students were able to gain a concept of the student center. (Cuesta students) were also very intrigued and very impressed."

The students at Cuesta will be paying a yearly $10 fee increase for a center they probably won't utilize because of the three to three year time span needed to build the center.

According to Swearingen, the architecture department was asked to design the models because of its reputation and the "excellent architecture (program)" at Cal Poly.

There are three different choices for sites for the student center. Swearingen divided his class into three teams per site and three people per team. To complete their models and drawings, the students were asked to analyze the site, climatic concerns and underground aspects, and design for compatibility with the existing structure. The students had limited time to complete their projects.

"In a 4½ week process they designed diagramatic floor plans and built three-dimensional interior/exterior models," said Swearingen.

Swearingen. Cal Poly students presented the projects to the Cuesta College council of the president and to the academic deans. According to Swearingen, his students could benefit greatly from this assignment not only for their portfolios but for other reasons as well.

"The models were very effective for those students, this class of third year architecture students, to gain a concept of the student center," he said. "The concept has not been sold," said Swearingen. 'The students not only gained their projects to the Cuesta students and faculty to successfully visualize a future student center. The concept has been sold," said Swearingen. The students are not licensed but some ideas might be used after the professional architect is commissioned for the job. According to Swearingen the projects were "only used to generate ideas and produce something three-dimensional to help persuade a positive voting outcome and approval for the student center."

Swearingen was impressed by his students' work. "In the 15 years I've taught architecture students, this class of third year students is one of the best I've taught."

Mustang journey to nationals for the last time — with Harter

By Neil Pascale

For Lance Harter, the dynasty he has slowly pieced together at Cal Poly, is coming to an end. This weekend, the Mustangs to 12 NCAA track and field and cross country national championships, a number unparalleled by any other coach.

The past four years, his track teams have placed second three times in a row and in 1989, won the men hope to salvage Harter for one more championship at the NCAA Division II National Championships in Hampton, Va.

The women will have 19 individuals competing, including eight All-Americans from last year.

Hendrix the list is senior Teena Colebrook, a five-time NCAA champion in the 800 and 1,500 meters.

Colebrook is the defending national champion in both events and for good measure, has the fastest time for both events this year.

Stephanie Barrett, another All-American, will also run in two events, the 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

The 1,500 meters figures to be the Mustangs' strongest event with six qualifiers.

Coming off their first Californian Collegiate Athletic Association championship in five years, the men hope to improve on their seventh place finish at nationals last year.

The Mustangs have 12 men qualified, including six in the pole vault.

Two-time All-American Steve Williams figures to be among the top vaulters for the third consecutive year. Williams placed second in 1988 and 1989.

Another All-American, Steve Neubauer, qualified in the 1,500 meters and the steeplechase.

Freshman Scott Hempel will run in the 1,500 and 5,000 meters.

White Sox start quickly, resemble last year’s O’s

BALTIMORE (AP) — In their effort to duplicate the success of last year’s Orioles, the Chicago White Sox are helping write a rival to the Orioles of last year.

Armored with the youngest roster in the major leagues, the White Sox are attempting to do what Baltimore did last year by becoming a pennant contender.

Chicago took another step in that direction Wednesday night by besting the Orioles for the fourth time in nine days. While the White Sox improved to 23-14 — compared to 16-20 a year ago — the Orioles fell six games under .500 and into the American League East cellar.

The White Sox are on course to complete such a reversal. "We want to make a turnaround like they did," Orioles manager Jeff Torborg. "We want to make a turnaround like they did."

So far, the White Sox are on course to complete such a reversal. Coming off last year’s dismal 69-92 season, they have combined with sensational pitching to stay close to Oakland in the AL West.

The White Sox have six racks on their roster, and the team’s average age is 26 1/2. But despite their relative inexperience, Chicago is batting over .260 and ranks among the league’s top three in ERA.

The bullpen, led by Bobby Thigpen (12 saves), has been excellent. In the last 12 games, Chicago’s relievers have accounted for five wins and five saves.

"We believe in ourselves right now," said designated hitter Dan Pasqua, who hit two homers Wednesday. "Ever since spring training, everybody’s been doing their jobs and as long as they continue to do that, we’ll continue to play well."

The Orioles, meanwhile, are finding it extremely difficult to come up with a suitable encore to last year’s surprise season in which they rebounded from a 54-107 record to finish second in the AL East at 87-75, two games behind the Toronto Blue-Jays.

Baltimore hasn’t been above .500 since April 23 and ranks last in the league in team-hitting average. Their starters are 10-16 with an ERA over 4.10.

OPEN HOUSE

From page 1 everyone did at Poly Royal and all the great things that happened, (and) planing that to this new program," said Scott Hublou, superintendent of Poly Royal 1990.

Two former Poly Royal advisors Ken Barclay, Student Life and Activities director, and Walt Lambert, coordinator of Greek affairs, have been attending meetings and will continue to advise the students.

Lambert said he had heard that President Baker is aware of the group and approves, as long as they are responsible and cautious not to entice what happened this year.

Stan Ullrich and Mike Stobbin, faculty advisors of this year's Poly Royal, will not oversee this new event because of prior engagements.

Once the committee has a more detailed plan for the new event, new faculty advisors will be assigned, Lambert said.

The success of Poly Royal, although overshadowed by rioting Friday and Saturday nights, has motivated these students to continue to work toward a new event.

"I usually put Poly Royal ahead of everything," said Sherman. "There were a lot of good things that happened, I wish people would have looked at everything we did at Poly Royal, not what happened off campus.

"When you want to restart something that police and the Administration took away, you have a real battle..." said Sherman. "...people need to work on it together. We have a lot of good ideas, but a lot of us are really driven, and very upset, but we are not giving up."

Recently appointed students Bruce Sherman, Phoenix Schmitz, Kevin Rison and Mike Belgard will organize meetings this rather than the bad aspect of the riots."

"You'd pointed out that Cal Poly's Public Safety and the city Fire Department praised the Poly Royal executive board for their excellence in safety precautions. "...On campus that event was great, better than it has ever been," said Hublou, a five-year veteran of the executive board. "The (educational) image we were really trying to portray, we portrayed well."

The committee is attempting to preserve what happened on campus during Poly Royal, not what happened off campus.

"We want to preserve something that police and the Administration took away, you have a real battle..." said Sherman. "...people need to work on it together. We have a lot of good ideas, but a lot of us are really driven, and very upset, but we are not giving up."

This appointment to executive vice president isn't concerning the arrest," said Denham, who pointed out his past experience as president and a Board of Trustees member of his community college.

Throughout the discussion, Neubert said it was time-consuming, Neubert said it was "too much only about one week a week."

For next year, Neubert said he was looking forward to the program running smoothly now that all the bases have been established. "We were really struggling this year just to pull it off," he said.

Neubert encouraged students to consider participating in the WIT Society or in the "Winners in Training" program in general. By doing this, a student has the potential to gain skills not normally offered in a university's lecture environment.

"We're trying to produce people," he said.

vice president runs the executive staff and must, therefore, have knowledge about all branches of ASI. Because there is a limited job description for the position, the executive vice president must have a background and understanding in the procedures and policies of ASI.

Third, the committee said it did not have confidence that Denham would represent ASI well based on the way he has presented himself in public. Bertens said that Denham did not present his ideas clearly nor represent himself well in a social atmosphere.

"The (educational) image we were really trying to portray, we portrayed well."
