Campus manure creates annual Poly stink

Farm units use waste for financial reasons, to be self-sustainable

By Natalie Guerrero

…the odor that lingers around campus in the evenings this time every year is nothing that should make students turn up their noses.

Farm Superintendent Gary Ketcham said the smell comes from the manure that is produced on campus and spread on the grain fields during the day. "It's a lot cheaper than hauling it," he said, "and it's a lot cheaper than buying commercial fertilizer."

This process is all part of the "sustainable agriculture" concept.

The aim of this concept is to make a farm self-sustainable. A farm is self-sustainable when it is able to use the waste that it produces.

Poly students ‘think like kids’

Landscape arch. class helps plan playground site

By Natalie Guerrero

Eighteen students from professor Brian Aviles’ third-year landscape architecture class were given an opportunity to "think like a kid" as they designed playgrounds for the future location of the ASI Children’s Center.

“We usually don't work at a kid's point of view, so that really made this project a lot more challenging than others I have worked on,” said Jason Jones, a third-year landscape architecture student.

Playground designs ranged from elaborate to simple. David Phelps’ design resembled a miniature Disney Frontierland.

UC Davis professor: Animals deserve same rights as humans

By Erika Dills

Animal rights activists from throughout the county gathered in Chumash Auditorium last week to hear a widely-known activist speak out against animal research.

Ned Buyukmihci, associate professor of ophthalmology at University of California at Davis' School of Veterinary Medicine, was invited to speak on campus by Action For Animal Rights (AFAR).

"I believe that there is a natural progression in our society to hopefully something better," Buyukmihci said. "We got rid of gladiators and slaves, and we are trying to stop discriminating against skin color and ovaries. I hope that as we progress in this fashion, we will eventually support the rights of animals."

Dwight Broulliard, an AFAR director said that while his organization is striving for the very same things as Buyukmihci, AFAR is somewhat less hopeful.

"I don't think AFAR is as optimistic as he is,"

Students promote drug legalization

By William Douglass

If a red ribbon means "say no to drugs," then the green ribbons being worn by Cal Poly students Thursday mean "yes, if you want."

A group of students passed out green ribbons and information about marijuana and other drugs Thursday at the University Union.

Computer science senior Jeff Schneiter said green ribbons are not the opposite of the anti-drug red ribbons. "Red ribbons is a good cause, but they are mind-controlled," he said. "They don't want to say no for themselves; they want to stop us from making free choices."

Schneiter said people should not necessarily use drugs but should be able to do so if they choose.

The green ribbon goal is the decriminalization or legalization of all drugs, Schneiter said.

Green ribbon activist Mike Kellner, a computer science senior, passed out ribbons during the day. "Frank Zappa tape played loud on a boom box. "What happens when the Bill of Rights?" he said. "When they tell me what I can or can't put in my body they are invading my privacy."

The green ribbon activists proposed several reasons to legalize drugs, and they had hundreds of pages of literature backing their position.

Schneiter said that drugs which are currently illegal are safer than legal drugs such as alcohol and nicotine. According to literature that the green ribbon committee handed out to students, 340,000 people die in the United States each year as a result of smoking cigarettes. Alcohol causes 125,000 deaths per year, and aspirin kills 180 people a year.

But according to the study, not one death is attributed to marijuana use, and only 3,800 deaths per year are because of other illegal drugs.

"That's baloney," said Dr. James Nash, director of Health Services, regarding the death statistic of marijuana use. "Perhaps not from overdose (of marijuana), but it impairs vision and depth perception."

"They (marijuana users) aren't going to drive well," Nash said. "And the police don't usually test for marijuana."

Nash also said the death rate from marijuana use is 10,000 times less than that of alcohol. "What's a child under 20 who is going to drive and have a four- or five-ounce drink per hour?"

Cal Poly needs to build campus directories to assist students

By Arnett Smithson

At first glance, our president’s recent actions in the Middle East seem justifiable. Iraq’s invasion of Kuwait was an act of aggression. The world was united in condemning the act of aggression. It was labeled Saddam Hussein at a Hitler. Outrage at Hussein’s actions is legitimate and it prompts us to ask ourselves whether or not in Bush we may have a new Hitler.

We invade other countries with the same level of aggression as we have done in Panama and Grenada, helped the Contras in Nicaragua and sponsored coups governments in El Salvador, Guatemala, Kenya and Indonesia to name only a few.

Then, of course, there is Panama. When Bush was the head of the CIA, the agency he was paying Manuel Noriega over $2,000 a month. These payments continued during the Reagan years despite widespread reports in the media of Noriega’s drug trafficking and human rights violations.

Only when Noriega thumbed his nose at the United States by refusing to allow the Contras to train in Panama did the administration relocate its concentration and condemn Noriega’s drug trafficking and human rights violations. We used this as an excuse to invade Panama and set up our own government.

Saddam Hussein, like Noriega, has now stepped on the Bush administration s toes by threatening our oil supply. It is for this reason that our armed forces are now facing the threat of U.S. and Soviet-made weapons and nerve gas in the Middle East. Bush has stated that he believes the use of chemical weapons in the Middle East: 1) to protect Saudi Arabia from the Iraqi threat, and 2) get Iraqi oil to prevent economic catastrophe.

Bush’s hypocrisy evidenced in actions

It is not unusual to open your class schedule, look at the location of a class and wonder where building 17 is located? It is also not unusual to be walking around campus and have a visitor stop you and ask you where the library is located?

The core of Cal Poly is approximately 370 acres and there are only a couple of campus directories. It seems only practical that Cal Poly should have a few campus directories to help both visitors and students find their destinations with ease. Even Madonna Plaza has a directory at every major entrance.

Everyone recalls their first day of school as a freshman — it was confusing and frustrating. It was tiresome flipping between your class schedule and the map on the back of your CAPTUR schedule in an attempt to find the location of your next class.

Student directories would have been a great asset to you at that time and chances are, they would be to you now. Even the seasoned student, staff or faculty member experiences the frustration of being lost when new buildings are constructed or when old offices are relocated.

Cal Poly, with 6,000 acres, is the largest campus in the California State University System. The distance alone from the U.U. Plaza to the ornamental horticulture unit is a good mile.

The construction of the Visitor’s Booth located at the Grand Ave. entrance of campus is not enough. The booth is helpful for parking information and general campus direction for the visitor. It is not, however, helpful to visitors once they are knee-deep in the confusion of finding their way from Poly Canyon to Crandall Gym.

Before funds were spent on the visitors booth, basic campus directories should have been installed for everyone’s use. Perhaps the project could be assumed by an architecture student as a senior project.

The directory would not have to be a complex, computerized system. It needs to be a basic map that would list and label all of the buildings and tell viewers where they are presently located.

The directories should include handicapped ramps and elevators for the benefit of all students and visitors.

Campus directories first should be built in the U.U. Plaza and on Dexter Lawn. From there they can be placed in any busy area.

Cal Poly is a large campus with a great number of visitors and students. Administrators should take the basic steps to make this campus user friendly.

Japan turns down aid request by Mandela

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu today rejected a request by Nelson Mandela for $25 million in aid to South Africa, said a Cabinet source.

The South African black leader, meeting with Kaifu and leading politicians, said the ANC wanted the money to help 20,000 South African grass-roots groups.

ANC had been on leave to attend a weeklong seminar on jail management and penology in Manila. He left his assistant in charge.

Police investigators are questioning an assistant to the warden about the escape Sunday in the jail in Cotabato, a city 560 miles south of Manila, the capital.

Police Chief Giovanni Planas said the escapes included one convicted murderer and others awaiting trial for robbery, illegal firearms possession and murder.

Planas said the prisoners sawed off the iron grills of the window in their cells and escaped either on foot or by boat on the river at the back of the jail compound.

The warden, Lt. Evastrio Ordinaria, said he had been on leave to attend a weeklong seminar on jail management and penology in Manila. He left his assistant in charge.

San Francisco (AP) — Dozens arrested in anti-corporate protest

Hundreds of demonstrators were arrested Monday when an orderly protest against what organizers called destruction of the planet by corporate greed erupted into vandalism, police said.

Some of the 200 protesters who gathered outside the Pacific Stock Exchange tried to enter several businesses in the Financial District and "trash"d a McDonald's restaurant on Market Street, said Sgt. Bob Crosat.

"They broke tables and windows and scattered food around," said Crosat, one of 100-200 officers who set up barricades and stood guard outside the exchange. None of the protesters got inside.

Demonstrators gathered outside the state's exchange building about 6 a.m. in a protest sponsored by Earth Action Network on the 61st anniversary of the 1929 stock market crash.

The organization billed the event as a legal, non-violent "pre-environmental and anti-corporate demonstration and blockade" of the exchange.

ASI Children’s Center office manager Evelyn Ruehr said, “I not only thought it was a good idea but told him (Aviles) about our new (ASI) Children’s Center construction (site) and asked if they would like to design a playground area there.”

Next year the center will move to the north end of campus near Cal Poly President Warren Baker’s house and adjacent to the cottages containing the Extended Education Office and the Child Development lab.

With the site plans provided by Integral Environments and specifications by Ruehr and Aviles, the students focused on designing a playground setting equipped to handle 162 children.

The children admitted are in two groups, infant-toddler and preschool.

Some requirements for the playground included safety measures for play equipment, a sand box area, an open playing area, an open theater and other related elements. Students also were required to research past findings of children’s behavior towards what type of play equipment or setting best fits toddlers and preschoolers.

Due to these low prices, no refunds will be given on any item purchased during 1/2 price sale.

The students did site analyses involving wind and sun bearing, vegetation and soil assessment. The students also had to consider the noise factor of the children, the proximity to President Baker’s house and the decision either to increase or decrease the parking lot area," Aviles said.

Additionally, students took time to watch the children play at the present center. They observed the behavior of the children interacting with other children and with the surrounding environment. Ruehr said that students often asked many questions about the playground equipment and the needs of the children.

“The projects were very imaginative,” Aviles said. “The students took on a lot of responsibility with the research part.”

“After this project, you can really tell how much effort goes into planning a playground center. Swings and slides are not usually inviting to kids, they really enjoy exploring objects that look new and round,” said Mike McIntyre, a third-year landscape architecture major.

These projects were all critiqued last week by landscape architecture professors and ASI Children Center workers. The project was a class critique exercise, but the ideas generated by the students may be used in the construction of the new playground location, Ruehr said.

The student models and designs will be on display this Friday on the second floor of the University Union next to the ASI offices.

Farm ‘type thing, I think that would be pretty hard to see.”
There is a greater extent (of animal rights acceptance) in other countries. England and some of Europe have a great deal of animal rights acceptance,” Buyukmihci said. “I think it is true.”

“(Buyukmihci) thinks about the movement more globally, so he is optimistic,” Buyukmihci said that while he does not think the movement will succeed in his lifetime, he thinks it is eventually going to happen.

Though education Buyukmihci has been working to promote the idea that “non-human” animals are equal to “human” animals.

He said he supports the idea of putting animals on the same level of acceptance as people, but until this happens, there will not be equality.

“If you look at human beings, we are not equal,” he said. “For instance, take this woman here,” Buyukmihci pointed to a woman in the audience. “I couldn’t beat her on the head and take her money... Why is it wrong to harm her? Because she is a human being? Not really. It is because she is an individual who has needs in living a life, and the pursuit of those interests presumably gives her joy.
So, we have granted her individual rights.”

Buyukmihci said that he feels that most non-human animals have some 'natural' rights, and there should be granted rights as well. He said that animal research activities are killing millions of animals on his property, and the justification that has widely been accepted.

“If you look at non-human animals,” Buyukmihci said that they also have interests and a life.
Their interests may be simpler than ours. I’m not sure, but similarly some human animals live simple lives also.

“People look at animals as lesser intelligence, but I don’t know how to measure the intelligence of an animal,” he said.

“Intelligence of an animal,” he said.

“I think that turkeys are stupid, but what do you want them to be do allow to drive a car?” Buyukmihci added.

Until the time when animals are treated equally to humane, Buyukmihci has dedicated himself to the protection of the animals, both at his work and in his home.

“I have a little over 130 animals on my land at home,” he said. Most of these animals needed operations that the owner could not afford or did not want to pay for. So we took them in.

The animals are allowed to run relatively free on the 60 acres owned by Buyukmihci and his wife, and he said he tries to avoid a purse of a carnivore as much as possible in an effort to let them have a more natural life.

Buyukmihci also has worked at helping the animal rights movement at UC Davis as well, and said he often has come under scrutiny by many of his colleagues who use laboratory animals in their research.

While Buyukmihci said his help may seem small by comparison to the nationwide problem, he said it eventually may have meaning.

“As far as legal protection, we have the same problem of not enough protection,” he said.

“The law (says) that they must have food, water and shelter, and that stops at the laboratory door.
Once the animal is there, the law does nothing. Even those basic rights could be withheld in the laboratory,” Buyukmihci said that even if trout called derelict. Trout is prevalent in drug addicts, but can be found in people with all kinds of problems including skeptics.

We all know how repulsive it is when someone is discussing the national debt or gun control or abortion. I mean, it leaves me complaining about my own life and the size of my pole pockerto... Generally, this is why I never leave my mouth open for long periods of time. Evidently, I can notice that I am actually eating or talking, because the one thing that could send me into fetal fantasies is having somebody else’s spit fly into my own mouth. My own spit isn’t bad, but mostly because it is still warm, whereas somebody else’s cold spit is just too horrible to think about. Kissing is okay, if you can wash your mouth out with beer right after, but having cold spit land in your mouth with nothing to show for it, but a warrant of a conversation is not worth it.

So imagine all this spit collecing on a phone and drying, layer upon layer, month after month.
I used this aforementioned five-minute phone’s other end, and while I was nattering on, I had this scratchy feeling on my chin. “Hmm,” I thought, “I know I shaved this morning...
AAAAAARRGH!” Dried phone spit! I felt as the floor in fits.

This is no way to start the day. Doctors say a healthy breakfast is the most important meal, but only if it’s your own breakfast.
I saw a guy on the subway fall asleep moments after the train left the station. His mouth opened, and his head fell to one side.
Having nothing better to do, I watched the drool accumulating in his mouth. Last year’s Nobel Prize in Medicine was awarded to Pierre L’Hôte, who explained why people drowsed when they slept: The control valves on their spit mechanisms turn off to provide more energy for snoring.

Anyway, this guy got a mouth full of drool, and I was sure that as soon as it leaked out and hit his chin, he would wake up.
He didn’t.
The commuter slowly reached the final lounge to his shoulder, where it hung on for dear life. I scanned the subway and caught 30 pairs of eyes riveted to this drama.

“People look at animals as intelligent of an animal,” he said.

“Intelligence of an animal,” he said.

“Intelligence of an animal,” he said.

“Intelligence of an animal,” he said.

“We can not deny that the sweet and blood of black slaves built roads in the South either,” he said. “Despite the fact they were used and there was some gain does not justify it... It is in humane get rid of it, even if you can’t replace it. Do not wait for an alternative to do away with animal research... the same way you wouldn’t have waited to find new road builders.”

Brumfield said that he felt Alfred Nobel almost completely with Buyukmihci’s statements and that there seemed to be very few audience members who disagreed.

“There are very few things that he said that we (APAR
f) would totally back up,” he said. “We were familiar with his view of where we came down of course, but we were really impressed with him.”

Students spend 100 days seeing world on floating university

By Alison Sherrill

For students wanting to acquire some sea legs or who are willing to cope with a few days of seasickness, the Semester at Sea program offers a unique variation to the usual study abroad programs. The Semester at Sea program is a 100-day ship voyage which takes 500 students, most of whom are from the United States, around the world each fall and spring. For the current fall program, the students are visiting Japan, India, the Soviet Union, Turkey and Morocco, among others.

The students take daily classes while the ship is at sea. The classes, said Arlette Comunale, administrative assistant for Semester at Sea, are mostly taken from a liberal arts curriculum. Students may choose from 50 different classes, she said, ranging from anthropology or theater arts to money and banking.

The program is academically sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh, and class credits are fully transferrable.

When the ship is in port, the students can take part in a variety of travel opportunities. Comunale said that the program organizes trips at every port, but many students make their own travel plans. Either way, she said, students see a lot of sights.

The students, Comunale said, get to meet and talk with students from many different cultures. For example, she said past students got to talk with students involved in the Tiananmen Square uprising.

The political situation of different countries always has affected the path of the program, she said. The first voyage of the Semester at Sea was in 1970 but was not continued because of various wars and tension between different countries. The program has had to change its current itinerary because of the problems in the Middle East.

The countries the spring 1991 voyage will visit include Venezuela, Brazil, Kenya, India and Japan.

Craig Straub, a Cal Poly business senior who participated in the program in the fall of 1988, said he found the visit to the Soviet Union intriguing, especially meeting the young people there.

Cried by the green ribbon group for illegal drug use was "awfully loud.

"Smoking marijuana is much better for your health than smoking cigarettes," Kellner said. "Besides, nobody could smoke two packs of marijuana cigarettes a day."

But Nash said he treats several Cal Poly students who smoke four or five marijuana joints daily. They often suffer from depression and thoughts of suicide, he said.

The green ribbon group "has a legitimate point," Nash said. "But when they push that these things (illegal drugs) are harmless, that's ridiculous."

Schneiter said he is not a proponent of hard drug use, but that by legalizing drugs, their use would actually decline.

"Tobacco (use) is in decline because people are becoming informed about the dangers — hard drugs would be the same," he said.

If people were free to get information and experiment with drugs, the interest in using drugs would diminish, Schneiter said.

"In Holland, since the legalization of marijuana, drug use has dropped 30 percent," he said.

Schneiter said the violence involved with drugs would be all but eliminated by drug legalization. "People wouldn't have to rob and kill to get drugs anymore," he said. "When it became illegal in the 1920s, the violence problem came up."

Computer science junior Phil Bollo said the group's open advocacy of drug legalization had not upset anyone on campus.

"Nobody has given us any flack yet," he said. Bollo said he was not worried about getting a bad reputation among his teachers. "We have been getting more support from professors — they understand what we are trying to accomplish."

When asked whether they use drugs, none of the green ribbon activists chose to answer. "Whether I do or not is beyond the point," Kellner said. "What we are saying is drug use is a personal choice."

Schneiter said he had tried cocaine. "I don't like it at all, it's a waste of time and money. But if they want to ruin their lives with it, it's up to them."

Biological sciences senior Steve Pryor accepted a green ribbon from the protestors and pinned it to his chest.

"Our society is already on drugs, only it's in the closet," Pryor said. "I don't do drugs, but I don't want to tell someone else not to."

Bollo said the group handed out more than 30 green ribbons Thursday. It seemed as if nobody chose to debate the issue with the green ribbon committee because of the blasting rock music.

OH, DEAR. I NEED A BREAK AND I AM SO HUNGRY ...BUT WHERE SHOULD I GO?

HEY, I’M STARVING! HOW ’BOUT SOME PIZZA?!

NOT ME. I WANT A GIANT SALAD... OR MAYBE CHINESE.
