Event to celebrate University Union

Pride of the Union Week will focus on U.U. services
By Monique McCarty
Staff Writer

The tenants of the University Union are sponsoring a celebration of the annual Pride of the Union Week today through Wednesday. "The whole purpose of the event is to get as many people, faculty, staff and students to the Union as possible to see the many services the Union provides," said Scott Blumin, Union Executive Committee member a and political science senior. "The students have already paid for the Union. It is not like they have to come and pay. It is an open house."

Due to the location of classes for some students, many find it inconvenient to visit the U.U. Pride of the Union Week welcomes and encourages all students to see what the U.U. can offer.

With this year's theme, "Grand Union Station," the entire U.U. will be transformed into a train station. Each area within the U.U. has selected a country to represent.

SLO police report drop in crime rate
By Carissa Wreden
Staff Writer

The San Luis Obispo Police Department says crime in the city is down. "This is welcome news after last year's 12 percent increase in major offenses. Police Chief Jim Gardiner isn't surprised at the decrease. "On any given year we may be up or down. It's part of a cycle."

"Basically, if you look at the long range it's been pretty much the same," he said.

Despite the overall decrease in the city's crime, a significant increase was seen in the incidence of arsons. It was up 350 percent this year with 27 cases reported compared to six in 1990. According to the Police Department report, these figures are misleading because of a reporting error in the 1990 report.

The 1991 report states, "the actual number of arsons was closer to 25. However, we do not have the data to provide an exact count."

Gardiner did say that the number of arsons committed included "trash can burns and those types of things. These aren't homes that are being torched or businesses. It includes every type of arson."

Euro Disneyland opens despite many hurdles

MARNE-LA-VALLEE, France (AP) — With greetings from a bilingual Mickey Mouse, Euro Disneyland opened Sunday despite a nearby bombing, a rail strike and a taste of chilly weather that could be the new park's biggest handicap.

Trumpeters in medieval costumes blared fanfares, doves were released and a children's chorus sang "It's A Small World" opening day to avoid traffic jams. Even with authorities urged people to stay away from the parking lots did not fill.

Disney officials proclaimed the opening a success but refused to give attendance figures. Waits at most rides were short and the parking lots did not fill.

R.I. fugitive banker surrenders to police

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A fugitive banker accused of embezzling $13 million and setting off Rhode Island's banking collapse surrendered early Sunday after 17 months on the run.

Joseph Mollicone Jr., 48, gave himself up at the home of attorney Thomas DiLuglio Sr., whose nephew is married to the banker's daughter, Attorney General James O'Neil said.

"I frankly do not know where he was," O'Neil said. "We perceive him as someone who had arrived from afar."

Mollicone vanished shortly after auditors questioned him about $13 million in loans that were never entered in his Heritage Loan & Investment Bank's computer system.

UCSB plan to use rain forest wood draws fire

GOLETA, Calif. (AP) — A plan to use wood found in tropical rain forests to build a trellis at the University of California, Santa Barbara, has come under fire from environmentalists and a state lawmaker.

An institution of higher education has a responsibility to set an example in protecting tropical rain forests, Pamela Wallner of Rainforest Action Network wrote in a letter to UCSB Chancellor Barbara Ehling.

"It is really worth adding to the destruction of the world's tropical rain forests in order to have a trellis covered with vegetation?" the letter from the San Francisco-based group asked.

Campus officials say the Honduran mahogany for an ornamental trellis on the proposed $6.7 million Institute for Theoretical Physics building would be supplied from a managed forest or plantation.

"We're not threatening the survival of the species," Ehling said. "We have handled this as responsibly as we can and are satisfied with our decision."

Chronic halitosis (the medical term for bad breath) is a common symptom usually resulting from poor oral hygiene or decayed teeth. Other causes resulting in bad breath include throat infections, canker sores, gum disease and postnasal drip. If bad breath is persistent it may be a symptom of a mouth infection, sinusitis or certain lung disorders, such as bronchiectasis.

Most of us know that factors such as smoking, alcoholic drinks and certain foods such as garlic and onion can cause bad breath. Other causes include certain medications, such as antibiotics, tranquilizers, decongestants and sedatives.

Proper oral care can help prevent chronic halitosis.

K CPR news staff dominates CIPA broadcast honors

By Joe Tarica

Attendance this weekend's California Intercollegiate Press Association for the newsmakers division this year has made a lasting impression by taking the best of the best in on-site awards, including first-place honors.

K CPR News Director Staffan Tubbs led the field, taking first place in the on-site broadcast news writing category.

Back up Tubbs were three KCPR reporters who took three out of six awards in the two remaining categories — feature and sports broadcast.

On-air talent leader Leisa Brug-Smith took first place for best feature broadcast. Saman ta Guerra, also a journalism senior, took second in the same category.

For best sports broadcast, journalism senior Trevor Slavick took third to round out the sta tus.

Journalism department head Nishan Havandjian said he was impressed with the staff's perfor mance, especially in light of the competition, which included es tablished broadcast schools like Cal State Fullerton and San Jose State.

Seven universities from throughout California participated in the on-site competi tion.

A mail-in competition was also held, but the KCPR news staff dominated it.

Our vote: Kristin Burnett.

Kristin Burnett has earned the respect of the Cal Poly community, not only because of her leadership skills, but also because of her dedication to ensuring the success of our community.

The normal rate of hard drinking, meaning an average of two or more drinks per day, among college students is approximately 20 percent. If Cal Poly students reflect this, one out of four of these students may become problem drinkers. Alcohol abuse is never a benign activity. Research has shown that a variety of stresses and social pressures can play a major role in the development of alcohol abuse or dependence.

Much of our information about the dangers of alcohol use is directed by deceptions, dares and pressures to avoid feelings of stress or boredom. It may soon become the means of leaving emotional regulation difficult. They also inhibit the analysis and integration of emotional reactions and behaviors into a self-potential level.

For alcoholics at Poly — there is help

By Dale Thomas

This reliance on outside stimuli to avoid boredom or to relieve full stress is a sign of addiction.

Reducing Risk With Social Support

Social support has proven to be the major factor in preventing controlled drinking from becoming a problem. The presence of social support provides protection against stress and gives the resources needed to analyze and solve crises and abstinence will not magically take them away.

Support groups made up of alcoholics are one of the most effective means of helping individuals avoid alcohol abuse. Support groups help them deal with the crises and traumas they have all experienced, and to put the blame on alcohol, not the childhood reactions to it.

Individual therapy is also helpful for getting rid of the feelings of powerlessness and frustration that were imposed by parental abuse and examine and make drinking seem so attractive in a crisis. Where these feelings were denied and blocked out, therapy may be required to help individuals integrate these undercontrolled parts of their personality into more adaptive adult behavior patterns.

A support group or therapy can also teach individuals regulatory skills that allow them to react to stress of boredom by using less intensities, anxiety — not by inhibiting "extra energy" to overwhelm problems.

This gives them a much better chance of gaining the coping skills needed to integrate drinking into their lives in a controlled manner — as one way to some times feel good — and not progress into dependency. This also helps them to recognize when genetic predispositions to alcoholism may require abstinence.

Why Wait for "Rock Bottom?"

Clinical research has revealed that social pressure is the most common reason for problem drinkers deciding to make a commitment to reducing drinking. Warren Baker has taken on this issue.

The common belief that you must be totally burned out before you can decide to quit is wrong. It has been proven true. In fact, early intervention can improve the chances of successfully maintaining a controlled drinking.

Social support and social pressure can be effective in changing attitudes toward alcohol. At the end of this article is a list of support groups that can help resolve drinking problems. If you know someone who is at risk for problem drinking, or who you think already has a problem, simply making them aware of your concerns and of the existence of these resources can help them change their attitude toward alcohol.

If you think you may have a problem or are in an at-risk group, you can actively seek support using the following resources list (all of the following classes are confidential, free and deal with alcohol-related problems).

Mustangs hurdle foes in dual meet

Men post easy wins, national qualifying marks

By David Voros
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men’s track and field team put on quite a show for the hometown crowd.

The men won their three-way meet against Cal State Los Angeles and Cal State Bakersfield on Saturday at the Cal Poly track.

Poly placed first with a team score of 142. Bakersfield was second with 107 points and Los Angeles was third finishing with 75 points.

The team of Jerry and Chris Edwards again provided the 1-3 punch in the 110-meter high hurdles. Jerry backed up last week’s win at Fresno with another first place finish in a time of 14.48 seconds.

“I was happy with the start,” Jerry Edwards said. “I hit a lot of hurdles, especially the last two, but it wasn’t really affecting me.”

Chris Edwards was third with a time of 14.08 seconds.

In the 1,500 meters, only three runners raced.

Poly sophomore Allen Llanetta took advantage of the situation to win in a time of 4:15.12 seconds. Nathan Cotter placed third with a 4:14.40 second-place finish in the long jump with a 7.08 meter jump. Llanetta was also third in the 200 meters with a time of 23.92.

Cal Poly Head Coach Tom Henderson was pleased with the performance of Chris Carter in the hammer throw. Carter placed second in the shot put with throw of 54 feet, 9 inches and third in the hammer throw with a distance of 168 feet.

“Chris Carter in the shot put was a big bonus,” Henderson said. “He has an automatic qualifying mark in the shot, a provisional mark in the hammer.”

Highlanders battle Poly twice in big showdown

By Gregory Rieber
Staff Writer

In a pair of real nail-biters, the No. 6-ranked Cal Poly Mustangs Saturday came up short once and then rallied for a split in a doubleheader with No. 3-ranked UC Riverside.

In the first game of Saturday afternoon’s doubleheader, Cal Poly failed to execute a hurt in the bottom of the ninth inning and took a narrow 7-6 loss at Sinsheimer Stadium.

However, Mustang starting pitcher Eric Hill silenced the Highlander hitters in the second game allowing only three hits and striking out seven in Poly’s 1-0 victory.

Poly took two of the three games in the crucial series that matched up the California Collegiate Athletic Association’s top two teams. The Mustangs secured second place in the CCAA and improved its league record to 10-5. Riverside, who remains in first place, fell to 13-4 in league.

With the score 7-5 and runners on first and second base with no outs in the opening game, Cal Poly’s Juan Rojo bunted back to first and momentarily stranded the runners, who then broke Brent Simionich out at third base.

Although first baseman Mike Oakland later came up and delivered a two-out single which drove in one run, infielder Duke Dod-
Candidates for ASI Board of Directors

Editor's note: the following statements were submitted by the candidates for the ASI Board of Directors from Cal Poly's seven schools.

Engineering

Tyler S. Robbins

Athletics. Gay rights. Fee increases. Issues we have all felt strongly about. Probably we have all complained about them. These are the types of issues our ASI Board of Directors deals with every week. It is your prerogative to elect an ASI board that you feel represents you.

Representing over 4,000 engineers with varied opinions is not easy. I, along with two other candidates, have two choices: vote how you feel because you are part owner of the ASI or vote how you feel because you elected you.

I believe strongly in the latter, representative role as a board member. As an ASI representative I just that, a representative to voice the concerns of other people's opinions. As engineers, we make up a quarter of the student population at Cal Poly, and we need that strong voice. I want to represent all 4,000 of you, so that when the issues are at stake, each one of you feels that your opinion has been heard.

Jon Cristobal

Leadership can be viewed from a different perspective. Not only must a leader be vocal and dictate responsibility, but a good leader must also be an example and follow others, as well as be a part of the student body at an equal level. As a director, I believe in these qualities. Talking with my fellow engineering students, listening to their concerns, taking their interests to heart and voicing them is an imperative role as a board member.

As education director for the Philippine Cultural Exchange, my experience communicating with members of different cultures needs as Poly students would be an asset to the board. This background in dealing with active participation in extracurricular organizations will enable me not only to lead but also to follow. But the decision is up to you, the engineering students, to choose your leader.

Steve Schram

As a civil engineering student with experience in my field, I know the needs of engineering students at Cal Poly.

In my past academic year, I have observed the diverse modes of leadership by the ASI Board of Directors, and I feel that the representatives of the School of Engineering must be improved. It is my desire to improve representation of my school and the student body as a whole and to bring about progressive change to the Board of Directors.

Kevin Shey

I am running for ASI Board of Directors because I have seen in the past that the voice of the student body was often not heard or simply ignored by ASI and the Cal Poly administration. Therefore, if I am elected, my primary goal would be to encourage and increase student ASI involvement. We will be heard loud and clear on any issues that might arise in the future.

Finally, I feel that I am qualified for this position because of my long history of past involvement in various ASI leadership positions. I am confident to say that those experiences will enable me to excel on the ASI Board of Directors.

Esmond M. Licad

As a member of the Administrative Committee as well as the Engineering Council, I am familiar with how ASI works. This knowledge will help me become an effective Board member.

Although discussing the importance of communication between individuals is common, I feel it is a vital factor for representing the engineering students. Being a minority student and a member of the Filipino Cultural Exchange allows me to understand the issues that minority individuals might have as well. Each person's concerns are important, and I will not be afraid to voice them out. If an effective liaison between the students and ASI is established, we will see an improvement within the school in the future.

John Allen Fischer

Having been a student in the School of Engineering for the past three years, I have a good grasp for what the students in the largest school at Cal Poly need and want. Through my involvement in other campus organizations, I have obtained a good understanding of concerns ASI. The primary reason I wish to be on the Board of Directors is to represent the concerns and opinions of my fellow engineering students. I think my maturity and experience in having been a part of other organizations will enable me to represent the interest of Engineering in a positive and professional manner.

Cindy Summerson

I am tired of being on the outside looking in when it comes to student government. Through my involvement in other campus organizations, I have obtained a good understanding of concerns ASI. Professionals Studies

Julie Collart

Now more than ever, School of Professional Studies students need effective representation in ASI. Our majors are strong and will continue to thrive as we enter new schools next fall.

Your voice is important, and your opinion should be reflected in ASI decisions. As a board member, I sincerely promise to be an active leader and to encourage and increase student ASI involvement.

Because much of Poly's success is dependent on active student involvement, I am committed to making a difference at Cal Poly, I have served on the School of Professional Studies Council for two years. My responsibilities as an alternate director, secretary, and Academic Commission representative have taught me the experience in the way ASI works.

Albiani emphasizes experience

By Carol Boosembark

ASI Presidential Candidate Dennis Albiani says experience makes the difference.

"I can get the most done because of my experience," Albiani said.

Having seen the many facets of ASI from the several different positions he's held, Albiani said his level of experience far exceeds the competition.

Albiani's campaign chairman Jennifer Felder, and ASI director for the School of Business, said his experience helps him to realize what the students want.

Lori Roland

In the upcoming year, beginning in fall 1992, the School of Professional Studies will cease to exist. The transition for existing majors to several new schools will require an extra amount of time and commitment from the new board members. I am not only willing, but excited to work toward a smooth realignment for all students so that their voices will continue to be heard.

Being able to work well with others as a team is, to me, the most important skill for success in this job. My past experience working with the ASI Administrative Committee, the School of Professional Studies Council, and several other campus clubs and organizations has

Agriculture

David H. Long

I am determined to run for the Board of Directors to prevent the School of Agriculture from being held captive to the narrow-mindedness of its current Board of Directors, which I have no faith in. I am also running for the Board of Directors to prove that the School of Agriculture has a future, and that it needs a strong leader to grow with the times. I am running for the Board of Directors to prevent the School of Agriculture from being held captive to the narrow-mindedness of its current Board of Directors, which I have no faith in. I am also running for the Board of Directors to prove that the School of Agriculture has a future, and that it needs a strong leader to grow with the times.

Robert Todd Houdling

In my three years here at Cal Poly, I have come to know a wide spectrum of people in the arts and business. In meeting these various people, I have also learned from their points of view on many agricultural issues. My active membership in Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity has provided me with a large pool of agricultural knowledge upon which to draw. I have previously held leadership positions in other agricultural organizations as well. I feel that through these relations and knowledge I am qualified to represent the views of the students from the School of Agriculture.

Marc Haywood

My plans when starting Cal Poly in fall 1990 were to get a feel for school before I became involved with any student government positions. Now that I've been here for over a year, and have been active as a member of Alpha Gamma Rho, I feel I am ready to become involved on campus. Hopefully now I can be elected to represent the School of Agriculture through the Board of Directors and the School of Agriculture is the strongest on campus and should be represented this way.

Rick Adams

I am running for a Board of Directors position to represent the School of Agriculture with a strong voice in the decisions made affecting the university, and have a desire to become more involved with the ASI. I have had positive experiences in the School of Agriculture as Alpha Zeta's Ag Council Representative (two years), an active member of the Los Lacheras Dairy Club and a charter member of Farm Home Fraternity. I am qualified to fill this position because I have been following a project in the end, and enjoy activities with people. The enhancement of the School of Agriculture and the university. I realize the time and energy required for this position is substantial, but I am prepared for this responsibility and time commitment.

Sean Corcoran

A characteristic that sets me apart from the other candidates is motivation. While I have the experience and knowledge that this position requires, I am at a disadvantage in this election. This is because my name will not be on the ballots and the voters will have to write in my name on the side. While this could be an obstacle, it has helped me to strive harder to become a director. It has enabled me to campaign more and meet several people in the School of Liberal Arts. This has given me a unique opportunity to become more aware of my school, and the many faces that it is made up of. In addition to my experience on the Liberal Arts Student Council and as an ASI executive committee, I feel the combination of my knowledge and experience makes me the best candidate.

DeAnna Cruickshank

As an ag business junior, I am involved with many aspects of Poly. I began my involvement with ASI as an alternate director. This has given me an opportunity to set high standards for myself, work with all ASI students' opinions and concerns on the board.

Business

Janine Marie Hauke

I am running for a seat on the Board of Directors representing the School of Business because I feel that the students here need a new board of directors that is interested in the concerns of all of the students. I believe in the importance of the student voice and I want to make sure that the students are represented in the Board of Directors.

Hunt C. Turner

As a member of the Board of Directors, my main objective is to provide a constant flow of information between ASI and the campus. Communication of this type must be conveyed by someone who is unbiased and open-minded, qualities which I possess. My current involvement includes the area of the Cal Poly men's tennis team and as a member of the executive board of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. My experiences and others on off-campus have taught me the importance of dedication to one's work, and teamwork when striving toward a common goal. If elected, I will utilize my past experiences and enthusiasm in order to represent the entire School of Business as an unbiased, objective leader on the 1992-1993 Board of Directors.

Kevin Brennan

My involvement at Cal Poly has not been limited to the classroom. I have participated in a number of campus and community activities, but the bulk of my extracurricular involvement has been with ASI. I am currently serving as the Student Government Commission as Chairman of the Poly Canyon and Poly Theatre subcommittees. I am also the student representative to the Foundation Advisory Committee. Representing the School of Business in the Board of Directors, however, has been my ultimate goal. I have always been interested in involving ASI with ASI. Although I have had experiences in other campus positions, the inner workings of ASI, what is paramount is my understanding and respect for the student's concerns. It is imperative that the School of Business elects a representative that understands that ASI; is an organization run for the good of all students. ASI does not and should not control the students. I would welcome the opportunity to serve on the Board of Directors.

Cal Poly's School of Business is undergoing significant physical changes. Next year, our building will be better than ever. To keep up with these external improvements, our school needs dedicated, innovative leaders that represent the students' interests and are non-biased and open-minded. My past experiences and other community activities have taught me the importance of dedication to a common goal. If elected, I will utilize my past experiences and enthusiasm in order to represent the entire School of Business as an unbiased, objective leader on the 1992-1993 Board of Directors.

Burnett said she plans to produce a questionnaire, giving students the chance to rate ASI. "It would just give students that voice, that someone in ASI is listening to them," she said.

In addition to the ASI evaluations, Burnett said she would like to add a new position to the Executive Staff "to work as a liaison between the students and the athletic department so that the concerns of the students about the athletic department are clearly articulated."

Burnett also said she will hold office hours next year.

Josh Eaton is a political science sophomore and co-campaign manager. He said Burnett's ability to motivate others to get the student-teacher evaluations rolling "is just one example of her persistence."

If elected, one of the most significant issues facing Burnett is ASI's budget. "I think the most challenging issue will be the ASI budget, in that we are facing across-the-board cuts," Burnett said.

The problems caused by scaling back funding for clubs is a great concern, Burnett said.

"When you have scarce resources and a lot of people going after them, situations become deep in conflict, and I have to make sure that conflict doesn't end up causing a rift in the student body," she said. "I need to clearly articulate, why some decisions are made."

Burnett plans to use advertising revenue and outside sources to help fund the ASI newsletter and student-teacher evaluations.

Here is a summary of Burnett's views on other issues.

• The IRA Opinion Poll Although Burnett is an exile and has said she favors the IRA referendum, she said she has worked hard to keep an open mind on the issue. However, because the administration has said it will not change its mind, Burnett refuses to promise big changes after the opinion poll results.

• The Noise Ordinance Amendment "I am lercy that it could be discriminatory," Burnett said. "They don't use official decibel readings."

Because there are so many levels to a loud party, Burnett said she questions the lack of uniformity used to implement the law.

However, students should be sympathetic to the community's needs, Burnett said.

• The Gay Rights Ordinance "I am disappointed that it failed," Burnett said. "Just because a person has a particular lifestyle doesn't mean that they are unworthy of fair and equal treatment."

Burnett agrees, however, that Board of Directors decisions to support the ordinance may have been hasty.

• Ethnic Studies "I think we need an ethnic studies program on this campus," Burnett said. "It would benefit each and every person. It should be a part of our general education and breadth, as an option to take."

Furthermore, Burnett said next year's ASI president needs to recruit from the ethnic clubs for positions on the Executive Staff and committees.

• PolySCOPE Calling PolySCOPE (the Students' Coalition for Organized Political Equality) a "gem of an idea," Burnett said she is excited about fielding a candidate for City Council.

Currently Albani, a senior in engineering business, is the Chairman of the Board and is participating in the selection of a new dean for the School of Agriculture.

"I have good relationships with several deans on campus," Albani said. He feels these ties are necessary for the ASI president.

Albani's experience in community relations is another area in which he feels confident.

Recently San Luis Obispo Police Chief Jim Gardiner went to Albani for help.

Gardiner needed a few extra people to help with parking and clean up for Blazing Saddles, a theatrical production scheduled for May 9 in Chumash Auditorium.

Albani said that was not the first time he was turned to for help.

When the recently rejected gay rights ordinance was at issue, Jan Perez, member of Gay Lesbians Bisexual United, contacted Albani for assistance.

Perez wanted to get this issue on the agenda for the Board of Directors.

Albani outlined the signatures and steps needed to get the issue presented to the board.

That (the gay rights ordinance) is an example of my accessibility," he said.

Also, he said, "I have these communication skills and I can call the people up, I have already demonstrated these relationships."

Albani said.

As for next year, Students' Coalition for Organized Political Equality, is weighted heavily on Albani's agenda.

"(PolySCOPE) is probably one of the most important things to happen in 10 years, and it could change his mind, Albani said.

Regarding the upcoming IRA opinion poll, Albani said, "If it fails, say 65 percent/35 percent, that's a big majority. I believe we need to take that, the voice of the students to President Baker," Albani said.

Although he doubts Baker will change his mind, Albani hopes to use the opinion poll to get his message out.

Albani also said he would like to see ethnic studies classes as alternatives to some general education requirements.

"We are all talking the same platforms, but when it comes down to it I have done a little bit with all of those issues," Albani said.

1,500 meters. "Hand said, "I don't do the 800 (meters) that often. I have a little better endurance over speed."

Poly's Dina Mores was third in the 800 meters with a personal-best time of 2:10.6. In the 400-meter hurdles, Poly senior Gina Albanese, defending national champion, was the first to cross the finish line with a 60.46-second performance.

Shannon Miller was second with a season best of 60.90 seconds. Miller's time automatically qualified her for the national championships in May. Albanese qualified earlier this season.

Cal Poly Assistant Coach Andy Frokjer was very pleased with Miller's effort. "She's been getting progressively faster every week," Frokjer said. "It was an exceptional race for her at this point in the season."

Miller was also third in the 100-meter hurdles with time of 15.03 seconds. Julie Tingle was second at 14.72.

Cal Poly won the 1,600-meter relay with the team of Albionne, Miller, Gabby Mackenzie and Karla Campbell. Poly's Jenniffer Lacoara ran a strong 3,000-meter race from the start to outpace the field in 9:57.42.

In the high jump, Poly's Robin Campana had a season-best jump of 5 feet, 7 inches to win. "For Robin, it's a breakthrough jump," Frokjer said. "I think within a week or two she'll be ready to go 6'0" and qualify for the nationals."

Cal Poly swept the triple jump event unechanted. Loni Larson took first.

Buffy Sexton got third place in the javelin with a toss of 141-8 inches.

Jennifer Peters was third in the discus with a toss of 144-5 inches.

a horrible person." Sexton said her recovery was very painful. "It just seemed like it was never going to get better."

After three months, she said she began to lose hope and thought she wouldn't be able to come back.

The turning point came when she was able to get her leg to bend enough to ride a stationary bike.

Sexton said assistant coach Kathy Devaney, the Mustangs' throw coach, served as an inspirational role model to her.

Devaney suffered through the same injury as Sexton and has the same scars on her knee to prove it.

"She handled it beautifully," Devaney said. She said that Sexton has a strong support system of friends and family that has enabled her to cope well with the injury.

Sexton has had a tough recovery. Devaney said that Sexton has experienced a lot of tightness in the knee and the scarring has caused complications, physically and emotionally.

"I was bitten for the first year," Sexton said. "Why did this have to happen to me?"

She had a large source of her identity. "I'm not the person I used to be," she said. "Throwing-wise my body's not the same it used to be, but I'm happy with what I'm doing. I'm more in touch with reality now."

Sexton is completely recovered and will attempt to qualify for the national meet, which will be held in May in San Antonio, Texas.

"We feel she's ready," Devaney said. "She said that Sexton has regained the competitive edge and that she's hungry."

Sexton said the injury has given her a new sense of seriousness and reality that she didn't have before.

Devaney agrees with Sexton.

"She's more serious, more mature," she said. "It has changed your body for two years without it having some impact on your personality."

Sexton said the injury has changed her.

"I'm not the person I used to be," she said. "Throwing-wise my knee's not the same it used to be, but I'm happy with what I'm doing. I'm more in touch with reality now."

POLY splits matches at tournament

The Cal Poly women's tennis team found itself near the top of a heap of nationally-ranked Division II teams this weekend in the Xenia Anastasia Tournament hosted by Cal Poly Pomona.

The Mustangs assured themselves of at least a fourth-place finish in the tournament named after Pomona's former national champion who was killed in a car accident three years ago.

The No. 1-ranked Mustangs squeaked into the semifinals by defeating No. 8-ranked Florida Southern, 5-4.

The Mustangs were ahead after the singles matches, 4-2. Florida Southern won the top two seeded doubles matches and threatened to sweep for the victory.

However, the Mustangs' third doubles, No. 4-seeded Sherry Holmes and No. 6-seeded Allison Bailey, both freshmen, won their match and sealed the victory.

In the semifinals, the Mustangs fell, 9-0, to the top-ranked Cal Poly Pomona Broncos, who advanced to the semifinals with a 9-0 sweep over No. 16-ranked Sonoma State.

"Even though today's (Saturday) match looked bad on paper, the match against SLO was tough," said Cal Poly Pomona Head Coach Ann Lebedeff. "It was the match that had it all, last so many things that happen. All the teams are so close, it just depends on the day you play them."

The Mustangs played Abilene Christian on Sunday for third place in the tournament and for a shot at improving their chances to get into the Division II National Championships.

I am a representative on the Engineering Council and began attending the ASI Board of Directors meetings as a concerned observer. Being very active in several student organizations, I realize the potential we students have in making a positive impact on our community. The School of Engineering contains 26 percent of the student body and carries a large amount of weight in ASI. Being past president and vice-president of the Eta Kappa Nu Honor Society, I know the importance of working well with others. Being an engineering student, I am quite familiar with hard work and perseverance.

My extensive past involvement in 4-H as well as my current activities have given me a great opportunity to serve as a director, and to use my skills and experience to benefit the students in the School of Agriculture.

CRIME

On another front, the city is experiencing increases in citations for lewd conduct and noise. Both of these increases are due to a more enforcement-oriented approach.

The increase in lewd conduct can be attributed to more enforcement in problem areas. Gardiner says Laguna Lake has been a traditional problem area for this kind of offense. He said his officers go "where we get the complaints."

Gardiner said that the department has tried many different approaches to the noise problem. "We've done everything — working with the university and the college, student groups, WOW, and SLO Days at Cuesta. We've done the regulation side with the high-occupancy ordinance, and they could receive misdemeanor charges if they are unable to control repeatedly rowdy tenants."

Despite these efforts, the city has seen a steady climb in the number of noise citation issues. "In the first quarter of 1992," Gardiner said, "noise complaints are up another 24 percent, and we've increased citations 100 percent."

He added, "If we can't get it done any other way, we'll have to do it with enforcement."

To combat the problem, the department supports the noise abatement ordinance which was passed by the City Council on Tuesday night.

The ordinance would make landlords ultimately responsible for the actions of their tenants, and they could receive misdemeanor charges if they are unable to control repeatedly rowdy tenants.

In light of the lowered crime rate, Gardiner is optimistic about 1992.

The department has recently added four new positions to its staff. This is the first staffing increase the department has experienced in eight years. Gardiner said, "They're already making an impact in the area of arrests."

The four new positions, a sergeant and three officers, went to the Situation Oriented Response Team, which is designed to respond to problem areas.

"In their first two months of operation, they were making about 40 arrests a month, many of them for narcotics offenses. We've been making a number of heroin arrests that a lot of people don't think of in San Luis Obispo. It's here, and we're working on it," Gardiner said.

The team should help the department get to areas they haven't been able to get to in the past, he said.

"In the second month they were working they made an arrest of a drug dealer on the campus at the high school," Gardiner said. "We would never have had a chance to work that without the additional people."

Although Gardiner emphasizes SORT is not a narcotics unit, he said narcotics enforcement will be emphasized in 1992 with the help of the SORT team. "It is an area I think is of concern, particularly as it relates to the high school and the youngsters," he said.

by with Schultz on his campaign.

"He's in touch with the people," Kirkham said.

Schultz estimates that one in every three students knows who he is and what his political platform consists of.

"I will continue to approach students and let them know who I am," Schultz said.

As ASI president, Schultz would endorse the proposed increases in tuition by the CSU Board of Trustees.

"I feel that the 40 percent increase is important to retain the current level of education," Schultz said.

"I question whether it is legal, but I see the necessity of it to maintain the quality of education," Schultz said.

Turning to the ASI budget, Schultz is the only candidate to advocate club funding based on the clubs' contributions to the community.

"I'd like to see the clubs budget... directly related to type of community involvement and the general good of mankind that they produce," Schultz said.

To measure the worth a club produces, Schultz said he plans to "work out a formula" based on the numbers of hours, who benefits and how they benefit.

When speaking of the IRA athletic referendum, Schultz said he will "represent the will and voice for the students."

In looking toward relations with the city of San Luis Obispo, Schultz has taken a stance on the amendment noise ordinance and the gay rights ordinance.

When asked if he supported the amendment to the noise ordinance, Schultz said he would have approved it.

"I feel that as students, we need to remember that we are members of the community," Schultz said.

However, the gay rights ordinance is not looked on as favorably by Schultz.

"Any unhinged hatred for any group is wrong, but I don't see a need for special legislation to protect one interest group," Schultz said. "They have rights, and they are already protected."

Among the issues already brought to Schultz's attention is the problem of the lights on the basketball courts going out while people are playing.

"That would be one of the first problems I'd want to address," Schultz said.
