Baker house gets new fence
President says he needs $10,000 addition for privacy

Michael Sheats
Staff Writer

Facility Services has completed construction on a $10,000 backyard fence at President Warren Baker's campus home.

"We could have put a cheaper fence up, but we need to make sure it lasts and we don't have to come back," said Ed Naretto, director of Facility Services. "That original fence had probably been there 20 or 30 years."

Naretto said the new fence, which is almost complete, was actually built out in front of the old fence which began falling down late in spring quarter. He said 30 extra feet of fence were added in order to surround an electrical box and keep the Bakers' dog from getting out.

President Baker said the original fence required a lot of maintenance so both he and facility services "jointly" agreed it needed to be replaced.

"The backyard is also the only outside privacy we have," Baker said. "We're required to live here, but we're not required to give up our privacy."

Warren Baker, Cal Poly President

We're required to live here, but we're not required to give up our privacy.

"Dr. Baker's house is a state facility and we maintain state funded," said Baker. "Any request is reasonable and we can do it, we will do it."

Naretto said Facility Services doesn't have any set budget for the Baker's house.

"There is no budget for the president's house just as there is no budget for any other state facility on campus," said Naretto. "When we make improvements on other buildings, you never hear much about it."

The improvement comes less than one year after the Bakers added a vanity mirror and space to a bedroom closet. These additions, made last fall, were met with some controversy in the face of budget cuts, and resulted in letters being sent to the Mustang Daily.

The improvement effort was "made as fast as possible in the face of budget cuts," said Slack and Allen attribute the increase in donations to the aggressive campaign the university has undertaken since the beginning of the year.

The fund-raising effort represents about 9 or 10 percent of the total budget at Cal Poly, and Allen said he would like to see that number increase.

We are in the process of finishing up a five-year plan for fund raising," Allen said. "By the end of that five-year period, we would like to see our students taking a more active role in being motivated and academically successful in the university."

Slack and Allen attribute the increase in donations to the aggressive campaign the university has undertaken since the budget cuts first hit Cal Poly.

"As the school (Cal Poly) becomes less of a state-supported school and more of a state-assisted school, it is important for us to generate more private funding," Slack said.

Honecker flies to Germany to face criminal charges

BERLIN (AP) — Former East German leader Erich Honecker returned to his homeland Wednesday to face charges that he was responsible for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Germans who tried to escape his hard-line communist dictatorship.

An Aeroflot plane carrying Honecker from Moscow landed at Tegel Airport in western Berlin shortly after 8 p.m. (2 a.m. EDT).

The arrival was shown live on national ARD television. Several people carrying old East German flags demonstrated outside the airport, demanding that Honecker be freed.

Several officials boarded the plane, and Honecker did not immediately emerge. Honecker, 79, was to be arrested immediately.

Honecker, who led East Germany for 18 years until his government was toppled by pro-democracy protests in 1989, is accused of ordering border guards to shoot to kill anyone trying to flee his Communist country.

"Just justice can take its course," said federal Justice Minister Sabine Leutheusser-Schnarrenberger in a statement issued in Bonn after Honecker left Moscow.

"Mr. Honecker will receive a fair trial in Germany under the rule of law.

"In the criminal trial against Mr. Honecker, it is not a matter of revenge but rather the attempt to satisfy justice under the rule of law," she said.

The trial of East German leaders was seen as necessary in the ongoing investigating process of working out the past.

Honecker was designated as he left the Berlin Opera in Moscow earlier Wednesday. He raised his right fist in an old East German salute before stepping into the back seat of the Berlinese ambassador's blue sedan. Tires squealing, it sped to Moscow's Vnukovo-2 airport for his return flight to Germany.

In Chile on Wednesday, Foreign Minister Enrique Silva said Honecker agreed to leave the embassy after having the right to state his position to Russian courts.

In 1989, is accused of ordering border guards to shoot to kill anyone trying to flee his Communist country.

"If you listen to Martin Fitzwater, you'd think that politics starts at the water's edge," said Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos.

Congressional leaders met with Bush on the Iraqi showdown Tuesday and emerged vowing to lay politics aside to deal with Saddam Hussein.

"We only want to see these workers able to exercise their right to "peaceably and lawfully picket" and strike for a living wage," said Robert A. Cantore, representing the drywallers, also hand-delivered a separate letter to the U.S. Department of Labor stating his firm was refused asylum-avoidance action for non-payment of overtime.

The letter asked the department to investigate.

The complaint filed Tuesday listed Kathryn G. Thompson of Thompson Dry Wall, Mesa Homes in Temecula; Kaufman and Broad in Los Angeles; Hunt Enterprises in Shadow Hills, and the subdivision of Vista del Este in Corona; and Rick Roger Drywall in Redlands.

Michael Rafferty, president of Thompson Development, disagreed that the company violated workers' rights.

"All it does is limit the areas where they can picket so it can be done pailably," he said.

It will take at least 30 days for the NLRB to investigate the charges and make a ruling.

Border Patrol agents seize $4 million in pot after chase

DULZURA, Calif. (AP) — Border Patrol agents seized 2,033 pounds of marijuana with an estimated street value of over $4 million Monday morning resulting from a 30-mile high speed chase near the international border Wednesday morning, authorities said.

Agents from the Campo station who were on routine patrol spotted a northbound pickup on a dirt road leading from the border. When agents attempted to stop the truck, it failed to yield and turned south on the road that is frequented by illegal aliens and smugglers.

About two miles north of the border, the truck pulled over and the driver and passenger fled on foot. Agents apprehended the driver, a 26-year-old man from Mexico whose name was not released pending further investigation. The passenger escaped into dense brush and rugged hills surrounding the area.

The agents discovered the marijuana in individually wrapped plastic packages in the back of the truck.

It was the second marijuana seizure exceeding 2,000 pounds made by the San Diego sector this week. On Sunday, agents seized 2,032 pounds in the Boulevard area in eastern San Diego County. No one was arrested in that seizure.

Wednesday's seizure brings the San Diego sector's total for fiscal year 1992 to more than 37,400 pounds.

Drywallers file unfair labor charges against developers

Los Angeles (AP) — Striking drywallers filed federal unfair labor practice complaints against some Southern California developers and contractors who allegedly blocked their right to strike.

The complaints accused the companies of intimidating workers by taking legal action, and threatening arrest and deportation.

Attorney Robert A. Cantore, representing the drywallers, also hand-delivered a separate letter to the U.S. Department of Labor stating his firm was refused asylum-avoidance action for non-payment of overtime.

The letter asked the department to investigate.

About 4,000 Southern California drywallers and tapers, many of them Mexican immigrants, went on strike June 1 to demand health benefits and higher wages.

Builders have complained that strikers have resorted to violence to block construction workers' entry into work sites. Charges against 67 strikers were subsequently dropped, while 59 others pleaded guilty to misdemeanors for disturbing the peace to assault. Nineteen cases are pending.

The complaint filed Tuesday listed Kathryn G. Thompson of Thompson Dry Wall, Mesa Homes in Temecula; Kaufman and Broad in Los Angeles; Hunt Enterprises in Shadow Hills, and the subdivision of Vista del Este in Corona; and Rick Roger Drywall in Redlands.

Michael Rafferty, president of Thompson Development, disagreed that the company violated workers' rights.

"All it does is limit the areas where they can picket so it can be done pailably," he said.

It will take at least 30 days for the NLRB to investigate the charges and make a ruling.

Camp shows kids new people to care
By Romina Vitols

They came. They saw. They were amazed. And they hope they will take positive experiences back home.

They are 25 students from South Central Los Angeles, and Koger is the man responsible for their five-day stay in San Luis Obispo. On Saturday, June 13, Koger, a resident of San Luis Obispo since 1977, said he thought something needed to be done for Los Angeles residents in the aftermath of the Los Angeles riot which began on April 29. He decided to immediately begin putting a plan into action.

Koger’s plan was to bring students to the Center for Marine Molecular Research, 110 South Central L.A. to San Luis Obispo to give them a taste of the “SLO life.”

“If I decided I would do anything, then I would do a program together,” Koger said. “It needed to be done, and I did it.”

With the help of friends and community members, Koger organized “Koger Camp” in a matter of weeks.

While Koger expected support from locals, Gloria Velazquez, a fellow organizer of the camp and a Cal Poly student, said they were surprised by the number of responses they got.

“The kids were really excited to see one that really cared,” Velazquez said. “Being involved with the camp has been quite rewarding and worthwhile experiences. I’ve had in San Luis Obispo.”

While donations came in from F. McIntock’s, Lucky supermarkets, Williams Briscoe, SLO Maid, and many other sources, Koger said there were community members who showed concern about the program.

“There were people who had reservations about a group of black kids coming to San Luis Obispo living here,” Koger said. “But to tell the truth, they were better behaved than a lot of college students, definitely better than the Poly Royal students.”

In the presence of the visitors gained media attention on Thursday, June 11, Mayor Ron Dunin welcomed the campers. “It’s good hands-on experience that I’ll definitely remember,” Tim Richards, a Cal Poly biology professor, said that the students will learn about cells and their normal and abnormal functions in their biology class. Then they will type their own blood and even bring out some cadavers.

“Although they aren’t graded,” Richards said, “hopefully they will be motivated to keep up with the material that is being tested on them.”

Richards said the program emphasized the need to work as a team. “They are good students, but if one starts to fall, he said, "the rest will pull him/her back up.”

“Then they are a pretty elite group,” Bishop said. “We received numerous applications and were able to pick and choose.”

Sonic Cable monopoly should be forced to its knees

By Brent Petersen

In 1984, Sonic Cable was unleashed by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to plunder the residents of San Luis Obispo with staggering rate increases for our basic cable service.

The move by the FCC was very typical of the 1980s with an American populace awestruck by the wonder and magic of private enterprise vs. a cumbersome and inefficient government that was already unable to balance the federal checkbook.

In retrospect, deregulation has certainly been successful in some sectors of the economy such as telecommunications. After the FCC’s breakup and deregulation of AT&T, phone-happy students found they could call home for a lot less money.

So, why did we do with our big-buck phone savings? Make even more calls

No. Quite. For the next three years, we would see our cable rates climb 43 percent across the country.

So why did our phone rates fall and cable rates climb?

The answer is obvious. The deregulation of AT&T included competition from Sprint and MCI, while the cable industry was left with no such competition (unless you consider over-the-air KSBY).

Let’s see. No competition and Sonic is allowed greater flexibility to charge what it wants.

It doesn’t take an economist to predict that cable rates might rise, and rise they did. Here in San Luis Obispo, cable television fees are significantly higher than the national average, even though the county has the highest per capita cable subscription in the nation!

In fact, UC Santa Barbara students pay 35 percent less than those of us at Cal Poly.

With a national average of $4.85 per channel, why the heck are we paying $7.50 per channel?

You might think that with so many subscribers to Sonic our rates should be lower.

You might expect that with over half of San Luis Obispo in the business of academia, the premier educational tool, C-SHIN, would be offered.

And you might wonder what in the world was the FCC and Congress thinking when they deregulated cable without challenging them with competition?

Fortunately, after eight years, our newly enlightened regulators have begun to offer the necessary panaceas of competition.

Yes, the day may soon arrive when Sonic will compete against TV over the telephone. The new phone lines necessary to prove the quality of the sound of our phones, increase the speed and accuracy of communications between computer monitors, as well as open up our homes to a whole new range of services that today are not possible.

This bodes especially well for broadening the communication base from the smaller, typically rural counties such as San Luis Obispo which have many more miles of telephone line than a cable hookup.

As if acting in unison with the national government and rising disgust in many rural areas, the City of San Luis Obispo has hired a special consultant to provide competition to much of the nearly 15-year franchise with Sonic Cable.

But even the city admits it “…can only suggest, not require, the cable company to carry specific programming.” Furthermore, the city will not be able to regulate rates.

In the past, Sonic’s quasi-public status has insulated it well from outside competition and even the franchise negotiation process.

As we have seen, strong competition, especially from Sprint, has changed the industry and lowered the price of voice over the Internet.

In a world that is increasingly interactive and laptop-connected, companies all around the world that once could only suggest now have the ability to provide services to the masses.

Here in San Luis Obispo, the competition may be limited, but the potential is there. Sonic Cable is already beginning to carry specific programming.

Sonic Cable has set a bad example of an older, less efficient technology versus a new, more efficient, and modern technology.

It doesn’t take an economist to know that competition will greatly increase the choices available at a much lower price. In fact, UC Santa Barbara students pay 35 percent less than those of us at Cal Poly.

It doesn’t take an economist to know that competition is a good thing and that we should be allowed to make the choices that fit our needs and lifestyles. That is true for both the name of the jobs provided by communication or television companies.

Our society is becoming more and more connected to the outside world through the medium of television. More competition will help us decide on what kind of communication we want.

In summary, competition is coming, whether we like it or not. Sonic Cable might give in to the competition, or it may not. Only time will tell.

Brent Petersen is a political science major at Cal Poly and a candidate for City Council.

Arcade area remodeling, renaming, regaming

By Kali Blomstrom

The University Union Games Area is changing. New video games are arriving rapidly, four new pool tables will soon appear and a new floor is being installed.

Games Area manager Steve Goldie said the rapid turnover of video games is due to the fact that the Games Area is no longer getting them through a vendor.

This means the Games Area will now decide when video games will change, Goldie said. This will likely be once a month, he said, because of the inconsistent form in which games are received.

The Games Area purchased the cabinets for the video games and then separately purchased the games kits. Goldie said with these kits it is easy to wire a new area.

The University Union Games Area has spent the summer making improvements and additions to their facilities. Assistant Manager Brian Bieller said they have already received about 2,000 people coming through daily. During the regular school year, Goldie said that number increases to 3,000.

For the summer, the Craft Center offers a children's camp for kids of Cal Poly staff, faculty, or students. The camp runs two four-hour classes daily and lasts for two weeks. There are two more sessions.

The previous vendor was dropped June 12, although nine of their games are still left in the area, Goldie said. The Games Area currently has 30 of its own games and that number will be raised to 35 shortly.

The remodling being done in the Games Area is to replace the video game area. New video game machines are expected within a month, Goldie said. Eight pool tables will fit in the area, so the old ones being replaced will be auctioned off.

The University Union Craft Center has spent the summer making improvements and additions to their facilities. Assistant Manager Brian Bieller said they have added a bicycle work room, a children's camp, a great deal of equipment, and expansion in the clay area.

Bieller said the bicycle work room has been dedicated to the memory of Mark Wingren, Laura Pluma, and Kris Evans who died in an April boating accident. All three students were affiliated with the Craft Center and worked to get the room started.

They have already received about 2,000 people coming through daily. During the regular school year, Goldie said that number increases to 3,000.

And there is one last change in the Games Area: the name. Goldie said a contest will be held during fall quarter to rename the area.

Craft Center uses summer lull to improve, expand services

He said the new stands in the room make bicycle maintenance much easier. Kaufman said he likes to come to the Craft Center because, "They have all the tools I need, and I don't have to buy or store them."

Local photographers looking for a little exposure will get just that opportunity with the completion of the 1993 San Luis Obispo County Emergency Information Calendar.

The contest is open to both amateur and professional photographers, but Kornreich wants to make sure that no one is disengaged.

"Very often, amateurs' photographs are selected," she said.

Winners receive $100, a photo credit and a single-sentence description to accompany the photograph.

All entries must be 8-by-10-inch black-and-white, un-mounted prints with the photographer's name, address, phone number and the location of the photograph.

Five, six years is average stay at Poly

First-time freshmen planning on graduating from Cal Poly in four years may be in for a quite a surprise, according to Elaine Doyle, associate director of Institutional Studies.

A report released by Institutional Studies this May indicates that the majority of students will take at least five years to graduate from the colleges of Business, Liberal Arts, Engineering, and Professional Studies. In the College of Architecture, the majority of students will graduate in six years. An almost equal number of students will graduate in five and six years in the colleges of Agriculture and Science and Math.

But Doyle said that attending a university for more than four years is unusual. "I think it may be commonplace to be at any CSU school for five years," said Doyle. "(The graduation rate) seems to just keep getting longer because they (the CSU) keep adding requirements."

According to the report, which studies the incoming classes of 1980 through 1989, the schools of Business, Liberal Arts, and Professional Studies all graduated more than 10 percent of their students within four years in 1980 and 1981. Since the 1984 class, however, no school has had double-digit graduation rates.

Doyle said she found the biggest surprise of the report to be the four-year graduation rate of 6.6 percent for the incoming class of 1983 falling to 3.9 percent for the incoming class of 1984. She attributes this decline to the adoption of new general education requirements in 1984 which forced students to compete for more of the same limited classes and resources.

items of the camp this summer, but it will not continue into the fall, Bieller said. It will return next summer.

Bieller said the center offers a full range of facilities, where people can do "anything from tie-dye to paper-maché." They have facilities for ceramics and clay work, woodworking, photography, stained glass, and poster-making.

The Craft Center also has a store for the purchase of bicycle parts and supplies such as grease and tubes. Letters and wooden paddles for Greek activities can be purchased there also.

The Craft Center is open to "everyone in the Cal Poly community."

Bieller said it serves from 50 to 100 people daily in the summer and per 200 during the school year.

Craft Center manager Rusty Lemon hinted at more changes to come and urged students to keep their eyes open for some "surprises" this fall.

Koger agreed that it is necessary for people of different races to interact, and that there is no time like the present to get it going.

"Racism hasn't changed," Koger said, "and it's not the politicians' job (to change it). It's something we, as individuals, need to do."

Doyle said that despite the low four-year graduation rate, the study indicates Cal Poly currently has the third fastest graduation rate of any CSU school (behind Chico and Pres.-Mont.), which begins its sixth year at Cal Poly this fall, the lengthy graduation rate was a surprise.

"I didn't think it would take me six years to graduate and a half," Doyle said. "Montano said the main reason (for the long university stay) is getting classes at the right times."

Most students, such as engineering freshman Randy Schultz, expect to stay in school longer than the traditional four years.

"Most students and their parents think in this day and age it's going to take longer than four years," Schultz said. "There's more to know and more to do."

Calvin and Hobbes by Bill Watterson

I HAVE A QUESTION, DAD.

SOME WHICH EXACTLY ARE THE HALIFAX DAYS OF MY YOUTH? IS SATURDAY ONE?

I BELIEVE THEY'RE AWARDED RETROSPECTIVELY WHEN YOU'RE GROWN UP.

HALIFAX IS RELATIVE.

IT'S TOO HOT TO SLEEP WITH YOU IN THE BED. YOU'RE BLOCKING THE BREEZE AND YOU TAKEN UP ONLY ROOM!

OPENING THE WINDOW MORE ISN'T GOING TO HELP. THE PROBLEM IS YOUR BIG, FAT BODY!

HEY, LESGO! IT DOESN'T MEAN IT, NOT IM COMFORTABLE REALLY!

AND MOM CAN'T IMAGINE HOW MY PAJAMAS GET SO GRAY!

HOW'S BUSINESS?

THAT'S HARD TO BELIEVE.

I CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT.

EVERYBODY I KNOW NEEDS WHAT I'M SELLING!

WHEN YOU'RE AS LONG AS THE POOL, SWIMMING A LAP IN ZERO SECONDS ISN'T A RECORD!
