Stalking suspect may be cleared

By Francine Stewart
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly student suspected of stalking three women in the Kennedy Library probably will not be charged.

Public Safety Investigator Ray Berrett said he suspects the evidence won't be strong enough to charge the suspect. "It is more likely that charges won't be brought into which laws, if any, apply separately follow in the case," he said.

Berrett said he suspects that three women around the library in late July and early August. The three women identified the suspect in a photo lineup. Berrett said Public Safety is still investigating the case.

Because the suspect was a student, the case also was forwarded to the Judicial Affairs Director of Judicial Affairs Carl Wallace was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

There is still no suspect in the sexual misconduct case, Berrett said. On Aug. 3 a Cal Poly student was sleeping on the fifth floor of the library when a man ejaculated on her back.

The victim in this case was one of the women who reported being followed, Berrett said, but that has been the only connection made between the two cases.

Although a semen sample was taken at the scene, a semen sample was not taken from the stalking suspect to see if he was connected to the ejaculation case, Berrett said. He noted if a sample was to be taken from someone, it would be a blood sample, but "there is not enough probable cause to draw blood from anybody." Berrett said all a blood sample would do would be narrow down the percentage of the population that could be a match. He is also checking the legality of taking blood samples.

Six-plus ordinance gets legal criticism

By John Cristofano
Staff Writer

A San Luis Obispo law that requires a permit for rental houses with six or more unrelated tenants may be unconstitutional.

This was the message conveyed by the director of the state Department of Housing and Community Development, Timothy L. Coyle, in a letter to San Luis Obispo Mayor Ron Dunin.

In the July 27 letter, Coyle wrote, "The standard of 'six adults' probably is unconstitutional in that there is no rational relationship of that number to the end sought." Coyle also wrote that the ordinance "may also interfere with state constitutional rights of privacy."

Coyle explained in the letter that ordinances such as San Luis Obispo's may regulate "uses," such as limiting parking to certain hours or number of hours, but "generally may not regulate the 'users' number of persons in a family." Dunin said the ordinance was created to "relieve residents from the pressures they felt due to the lack of compatibility between their lifestyles and those of some students."

The ordinance, passed in October 1989, requires rental houses with six or more unrelated tenants to get a $50 permit. Dunin said the legal point to be made is that the ordinance may be unconstitutional on its face, or be more stringent than state law permits. "Our Legal Affairs Division has advised me that (the requirements of the ordinance) are explicitly contradictory to state housing and building codes," Dunin said.

"(The requirements of the ordinance) are explicitly contradictory to state housing and building codes," Coyle wrote.

Dunin said City Attorney Jeff Jorgensen is researching the legality of the ordinance.

"If the ordinance is unconstitutional, the constituent complained about San Luis Obispo's apparent intent not to develop additional affordable housing. Coyle wrote."

Coyle's letter explained that a constituent's concerns are what initially prompted the letter to Dunin.

Along with concern over the legality of the six-plus ordinance, the constituent complained about San Luis Obispo's apparent intent not to develop additional affordable housing. Coyle wrote.

"Coyle's letter explained that state and federal laws provide a number of means to encourage local governments to provide adequate affordable housing for all segments of the population."
U.N. general says he lacks enough troops to watch guns

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The head of the U.N. forces in the former Yugoslav federation warred Wednesday that he didn’t have enough troops to monitor an accord designed to spare Sarajevo from further shelling.

Gen. Satish Nambiar told a news conference at U.N. headquarters that the capital’s airport was likely to reopen Thursday after a two-day shutdown. Warring factions had assured him relief flights would not be halted, he said.

The airport closed Tuesday after militiamen locked radar onto a British Hercules transport plane and forced anti-aircraft machine guns. Nambiar said.

He said he did not know who fired at the plane, but that all sides had militias in the area. Privately, U.N. peacekeepers said they suspected only the Serbs had radar-aided guns.

Nambiar said an agreement to place all heavy weapons around the city under U.N. supervision was to be signed later in the day.

Allies threaten to shoot down Iraqi aircraft attacking Shiites

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N.-led allies have drawn up an ultimatum for Saddam Hussein, threatening to shoot down Iraqi warplanes and helicopter gunships unless attacks on Shiite Muslim rebels in the country’s south are halted.

The warning by Britain, France and the United States, described by diplomatic sources on Tuesday, comes as tensions rise over difficulties Iraq has given U.N. weapons inspectors and reports of a stepped-up Iraqi campaign against the Shiite rebels.

A series of attacks on Westerners working in the safe haven established for ethnic Kurds in northern Iraq, including the wounding of a U.N. worker this week, has also angered the allies.

Prime Minister John Major of Britain on Tuesday accused Saddam of "systematic murder" and "genocide" in his campaign against lightly armed Shiite rebels in the marshes of southern Iraq.

Wang files for bankruptcy, announces major layoffs

BOSTON (AP) — Wang Laboratories Inc. on Tuesday filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

The computer maker announced it'll lay off 38 percent of its work force, having failed to keep up with rapid technological changes such as the rise of personal computers.

It was the latest in a series of blows to a region that led the nation into recession in the late 1980s but has yet to emerge from its steep downturn.

"Stuff generally seems in limbo," said Lynn Brown, a research director at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

Frederick Breimyer, president of the New England Economic Project, a forecasting group, said the economy had been expected to stop declining in 1992 and start growing in 1993.

But with Wang's bankruptcy, fellow Massachusetts computer maker Digital Equipment Corp. planning deep cuts and the sluggish economy, the forecast needs to be revised, Breimyer said.

College student allegedly reveals credit fraud ring

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A teen-ager arrested for credit card fraud allegedly told police he headed a 25-member ring that used a computer program to re-encode the numbers on the magnetic strips of lost or stolen credit cards.

Police said the ring was responsible for $100,000 in illegal purchases.

Ali Mojaddam, 19, who lives with his parents in sub-urban Brea, was arrested Tuesday and booked for investigation of possessing equipment used to alter credit cards, said Detective Julio Nuiez.

He was freed on $6,000 bail pending arraignment Sept. 11.

"Mr. Ali had a closet full of swags. He would have made Imelda Marcos proud," Nuiez said. "We found expensive stereo equipment, expensive TVs, computer equipment, boom boxes. There was a box full of tape recorders in the closet."

College Book Company Presents

TEXTBOOK

In front of El Corral Bookstore

Aug 31 - Sep 4, 8:00 am - 3:30 pm

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Pete Wilson's $57 billion state budget proposal was tentatively rejected today by the Assembly on a partisan vote, as Democrats maneuvered for another vote on their once-defeated alternative spending plan.

After nearly 2½ hours of debate, a parliamentary maneuver to bring the Republican governor's budget to a vote on a 31-46 vote, but the minority Republicans held the roll call open into the afternoon.

The Assembly debate rebounded disagreements that have divided the Republican governor and the Democratic leadership of the Legislature all year. Democrats condemned Wilson's plan for taking too much from schools and Republicans said the Democratic alternative would cut too much from local law enforcement.

Both measures were also pending in the Senate, but the upper house delayed action waiting to see how the more sharply divided and contentious Assembly voted.

STATE

PARTISAN VOTE IN ASSEMBLY REJECTS WILSON'S BUDGET PLAN

SUMMER MUSTANG
Sonic fears legislation may force rate hikes

Michael Sheats
Staff Writer

Legislation recently passed in the House of Representatives could lead to higher rates for Sonic Cable subscribers, according to Steve Burrell, Sonic General Manager.

The bill, which passed on July 23, calls for cable companies to offer basic service under a price formula set by the Federal Communications Commission and sets standards for quality of service.

The Senate approved another cable bill in January. The two bills will now go to a conference committee which will reconcile them into one bill for the president's approval. Although proponents of the bills say they are designed to help customers by regulating local cable monopolies, Burrell said the bills are not what they're made out to be.

"Both bills, in our mind, are not consumer bills," he said. "They may even increase rates."

City councilman Bill Realman said he is not sure how the legislation will affect the cable industry, but he said San Luis Obispo City Council should take "a hard line" with Sonic on the new cable rates and regulative negotiations which have already begun.

"A lot of people in this community think they should be getting a lot more for their money," he said.

According to Burrell, President Ronald Reagan will veto the bill. However, because it is an election year and the bill is very popular with consumers, there is a chance it could pass, he said.

"Because it's an election year your politicians want to come across as consumer-friendly," Burrell said. "And consumers are always going to think the price of things are too high and say 'yes' to regulation."

Christine Trol, a small business major, believes cable regulation is necessary in cities such as San Luis Obispo.

"It's (regulation) feasible in a town like San Luis where we don't have a choice of cable companies," she said. "If you want cable, like most students do, you'll pay almost any price."

Burrell said the problem in the cable industry that has led to this push for regulation is the few companies who don't give quality service.

"If cable gets more regulated, then you won't see companies investing in new technology and it (the technology) will get slower. Everyone gets punished for the deeds of a few."

People need to keep cable prices in perspective and realize what they're getting, Burrell said.

"People can't say I pay twice as much for cable as I used to. If you're also getting a lot more channels."

"You also can't say, 'In Nebraska they only pay $15 and in San Luis we pay $19.' You have to look at what goes into it."

Poly bus riders help set record

SLO Transit reports higher ridership, increased efficiency

Michael Sheats
Staff Writer

Cal Poly students are taking advantage of SLO Transit's free bus rides more than ever, according to Harry Watson, SLO Transit manager. Watson said people need to keep cable prices in perspective and realize what they're getting, Burrell said.

"People can't say I pay twice as much for cable as I used to. If you're also getting a lot more channels."

"You also can't say, 'In Nebraska they only pay $15 and in San Luis we pay $19.' You have to look at what goes into it."

Watson attributes the increase in Poly ridership to an added tandem service, which brings an additional 12 hours on to campus, and the loss of several of the campus' major parking lots due to construction projects.

"Students would rather get picked up and dropped off by their classmates than walk all the way from the swine unit," he said. "We're all pretty lazy."

The city is able to provide the free service to students by negotiating a contract with the university each year that calls for SLO Transit to receive a percentage of the campus parking tickets. Last year SLO Transit received $170,000 from the school, Watson said.

"Everything someone gets on something on their window, I get a few pennies," he said.

Joe Rosier, former director of Housing and Conference Services and a member of the campus' mass transit committee, said the increase in bus ridership is also helpful to the campus and relieves the crowdedness of the skyway and the parking lot.

"We're all pretty lazy."

"What happens is the bus counts noses and bills us for how many students use the service. The money just comes from ticket sales."

"The bottom line is students, faculty and administrators are going to have to walk, bike, and carpool if we're really going to have an impact on air quality."

CATCH THE WAVE, AT WOODSTOCK'S

Flyin' Free Delivery!

Lunch
Specials: All you can eat & drink
M-F 11am-3pm

$3.99
plus tax

$8.99
per pizza

FOR ANY LARGE 16' ONE TOPPING PIZZA
not valid with any other offer

1000 Higuera SLO 541-4420

RAY CESAR SANCHEZ/Summer Mustang

Poly bus riders help set record

SLO Transit reports higher ridership, increased efficiency

Michael Sheats
Staff Writer

Cal Poly students are taking advantage of SLO Transit's free bus rides more than ever, according to Harry Watson, SLO Transit manager. Watson said people need to keep cable prices in perspective and realize what they're getting, Burrell said.

"People can't say I pay twice as much for cable as I used to. If you're also getting a lot more channels."

"You also can't say, 'In Nebraska they only pay $15 and in San Luis we pay $19.' You have to look at what goes into it."

Watson attributes the increase in Poly ridership to an added tandem service, which brings an additional 12 hours on to campus, and the loss of several of the campus' major parking lots due to construction projects.

"Students would rather get picked up and dropped off by their classmates than walk all the way from the swine unit," he said. "We're all pretty lazy."

The city is able to provide the free service to students by negotiating a contract with the university each year that calls for SLO Transit to receive a percentage of the campus parking tickets. Last year SLO Transit received $170,000 from the school, Watson said.

"Everything someone gets on something on their window, I get a few pennies," he said.

Joe Rosier, former director of Housing and Conference Services and a member of the campus' mass transit committee, said the increase in bus ridership is also helpful to the campus and relieves the crowdedness of the skyway and the parking lot.

"We're all pretty lazy."

"What happens is the bus counts noses and bills us for how many students use the service. The money just comes from ticket sales."

"The bottom line is students, faculty and administrators are going to have to walk, bike, and carpool if we're really going to have an impact on air quality."
The defense attorney and his client joking about bringing back a 10-year-old Mexican woman bothered me. It bothered me that they were laughing about local gang activity when the defendant was allegedly involved in gang activity. Come to think of it, the entire court proceedings bothered me. I was left to ponder the motives of the trial attorneys.

From day one of the jury selection, I realized the defense attorney smiled politely at each of the potential jurors.

I don't think he ever stopped smiling. I got the impression that he wanted everyone noticed. He was a bit too sure, I think. "Gee, he is sure is Mr. Nice Guy. I'll bet the man he's defending isn't guilty!"

And I guess there are people who would say that's precisely what he gets paid big bucks to do. So be it, but there's something about seeing these professionals in action that makes me uneasy.

Once the jury was selected, Mr. Nice Guy flashed those almost-perfectly-white-at-the-jawline...and so did the defendant.

They both smiled at the 13-year-old girl as she swore to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, to help her God.

As she testified, the defense attorney's eyes scanned the faces of the jurors. If one of them happened to look his way, he flashed a smile. What was going on? All I could make out was the little kid kissing up to the men and women who would determine his client's fate. It was all most disgusting!

When, upon cross-examination, the attorney asked her questions about her testimony in the minds of the jurors. It was completely disgusting when, upon cross-examination, the attorney asked her questions about her testimony in the minds of the jurors.

"The girl didn't see the man who stands accused for the crime. Maybe she saw someone else, someone who dressed differently. Or maybe she was lying for some strange reason.

At any rate, as I watched the courtroom drama unfold, I was both in awe of it and embarrassed by it. This was Truth, Justice, and the American Way. Or was it?

These lawyers get paid big money. We all know that. But that makes me wonder about their motives.

Do they really want to give every man and woman a fair trial because they believe it's the Right thing to do, or because it's a huge paycheck?

Perhaps lawyers' salaries should be lowered?

Yes, their jobs are important. Yes, they have the power to help put murderers and rapists and other "nasties" behind bars. But they also have the power to do just the opposite. To put the "nasties" back on the street because of a procedural error or a discredited witness.

It's hard to promote truth and honesty when a bigger paycheck hangs over the head of the lawyer who wins. In some of my psychology classes I've heard of the same types of experiments, and they point to one conclusion: the more money a person is paid to act in a certain way, the less self-justification he or she needs to do it.

For instance, several people are asked to write essays taking a stand against an issue that, in reality, they strongly support. If their monetary compensation is little or nothing, many may refuse to write the essay, or will feel guilty— at the very least— about writing it. On the other hand, if they receive what they perceive to be a significant sum of money, the overwhelming majority of them have no problem arguing a point and taking a stance that is IN DIRECT CONFLICT WITH their true beliefs!

Because when a person receives great external rewards (money), it gives them justification for their actions. When the external justification is low, people need to find internal justification, something that might be a bit harder to come by to this leads me to wonder, if the average salary of lawyers was suddenly drastically cut, how many would stay in the profession? How many would feel the presence of internal conflict and the need to justify their actions to themselves?

How many lawyers are in courtrooms because they believe their client deserves a fair trial, and how many simply SAY they believe in the concept of a fair trial to get the pay-off?

Somehow courts of law are viewed as awesome castles in which monumental decisions are made.

I think they're more like theaters with live entertainment, and the actor who pulls off the best performance steals the show...and the healthy paycheck.
Abracadabra on the Cal Poly stage

World-touring magician performs to benefit new elementary school

By Romina Vitols
Staff Writer

He once made a 38-foot diesel truck appear on stage," said Janine Barasch, co-chair for this weekend's event. "He's amazing." Barasch said Lewin loves to interact with his audiences.

"One of his favorite things to do is leap into the audience and ask for two people's wedding bands," she said. "Then he links them together on stage...and those rings are solid gold!"

Lewin combines his magical talents with comedy for a successful combination.

Barasch said Lewin had to be booked for the show months in advance, despite the fact that he lives near on the Central Coast. "This is only the Central Coast's second or third opportunity to see (Lewin)," Barasch said. "He basically performs at the largest showrooms in Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, Atlantic City, London and Los Angeles."

Lewin was born in London. He began his career at 16, when he lied about his age to get a job as a magician on a cruise ship. He has since been around the world five times performing his magic.

Also listed on Lewin's magic resume is an acting career.

He has appeared in the television movie, "The Gambler," starring Kenny Rogers (it was Lewin's hands - not Rogers' - that audiences saw shuffling and handling the cards). He has also appeared in Steven Spielberg's "Amazing Stories" and has entertained viewers of "Comic Strip Live" and "Caroline's World of Comedy."

Lewin also "coached" Magic Johnson through some tricky maneuvers for a 7-Up commercial.

So what does Lewin have up his sleeve for this weekend's performance?

"He plans to levitate his daughter." Barasch said proceeds from this weekend's show will benefit Greenhills school, a private elementary school in San Luis Obispo, of which Barasch is the director.

Nick Lewin performs at 8 p.m. on Saturday at the Cal Poly Theatre. Tickets are $12.50 for adults, $7 for children under 15. For details call 545-5909.

Soap stars, media go to bat for General Hospital

Softball Sizzler to raise money for threatened facility

By Jackie Jones
Staff Writer

ABC TV's "General Hospital" soap opera cast hopes that the crowd catches their message to save San Luis Obispo's General Hospital - only this time the message isn't coming over the airwaves, but in the form of a softball.

Twenty "General Hospital" cast members are participating in a softball game against 25 local media personalities in the first annual Soap Star Softball Sizzler Saturday at San Luis Obispo's Sinsheimer Baseball Stadium.

The game will be followed by an autograph session, and then later that evening fans can "Dine with the Stars" at Arno's Winery in Paso Robles. Fans will have a chance to enjoy a "Santa Maria-style" barbeque, live music, and assortments of white, blush, and red wines.

The purpose of the softball game and dinner is to raise funds for the Coalition to save General Hospital.

"We need money to get educational materials out to the public, so they can be informed when they vote," said Trina Vosti, employee of Governor General Hospital and co-chairman of the Coalition.

The vote referred to will occur this fall when voters will decide whether or not to pass Measure F. The measure would add an estimated $1.50 to one's utility bill every $100,000 in property tax.

The money would be used to rebuild General Hospital and bring it up to earthquake safety standards.

If measure F is not passed, building will not be possible, and General Hospital will be closed.

"General Hospital is like a safety net," Vosti said. "It's a safe place to go when you need medical attention."

Vosti added that San Luis Obispo County is unique in that other counties such as Santa Barbara have several community-owned hospitals. San Luis Obispo has only one - General Hospital. The rest are privately owned by people who do not even live in this area.

"This can be really scary for students," Vosti said.

Once students graduate from college many of them do not have insurance until they are employed.

Vosti said that a community hospital is probably more concerned about its patients so that, if something was to happen to someone with out insurance, a community hospital could help out the patient before a non-community hospital would.

The idea behind this event came from Diane Timmermann, coalition co-chair.

"The idea seemed a natural one," she said. "I was always a soap opera fan. I knew if we needed a fund-raiser, including General Hospital would be a great idea."

Timmermann contacted the "General Hospital" studio, and within a few days she had 15 cast members willing to help.

Together, the coalition and "General Hospital" individual cast members decided on a softball game and dinner.

Eric Shade, from KSLL radio worked on the other team. He contacted local media personalities, gathering media participants from print, radio, and broadcast organizations for the event.

The Soap Star Softball Sizzler begins at 2:30 p.m. at Sinsheimer Stadium, 900 Southwood Dr. Adult tickets are available in advance for $12.50 and at the door for $15. Children 8 and under are free. The dinner begins at 6 p.m., and tickets are $35. Both tickets can be purchased at Mary Anne's Hallmark shop or at the coalition. For details, call 545-1832.

Comedian/magician Nick Lewin will levitate his daughter to highlight Saturday's show at Cal Poly.

CALENDAR

Thursday, august 20
Q The Impalers perform at SLO Brewing Co. at 9:30 p.m. for a $2 cover.
Q The Dynatones play at T.A.'s Cantina at 9 p.m.
Q Loco Ranchero presents a free concert with Bare Naked Ladies at 9 p.m.

Friday, august 21
Q Rock Steady Paws performs at SLO Brewing Co. at 9:30 p.m. for a $3 cover.
Q The Skydogs play at SLO Brewing Co. at 8:30 p.m. for a $3 cover.

Saturday, august 22
Q The Glee Club presents at 8:30 p.m. at Paper Reeds in San Luis Obispo.
Q Mahem performs at T.A.'s Cantina at 9 p.m.
Q The Impalers perform at SLO Brewing Co. at 9:30 p.m. for a $2 cover.
Q The Dynatones play at T.A.'s Cantina at 9 p.m.

Sunday, august 23
Q T.A.'s Cantina at 9 p.m.

Monday, august 24
Q T.A.'s Cantina performs at 9 p.m.

Tuesday, august 25
Q T.A.'s Cantina and KCBX features Scott Henderson, Gary Willis and Tribal Tech at 8 p.m.
Educator extraordinaire
Professional Studies names 1992 Teacher of the Year

Brenda Lynn Mills
Staff Writer

A Cal Poly alumnus and graphic communication faculty member has been chosen by the College of Professional Studies as the 1992 Teacher of the Year. Henry "Red" Heesch, who has taught at Cal Poly since 1986, was selected by the school's dean, Harry Busselen, after Busselen reviewed the achievements of faculty members in each of the school's departments.

Heesch said he was extremely surprised he won the award and credited his teaching philosophy as a possible reason for his selection.

"The greatest challenge of teaching is to make the courses interesting enough so it inspires the students to attend class and learn the material," Heesch said. When they finish school, students should have an edge in one area of expertise, Heesch said.

The evaluation criteria included student evaluation of courses, personal mentoring and service to the school.

Heesch, 57, teaches courses from printing, bindery, and finishing to University Graphic Systems, marketing and sales.

Heesch said the key to his success lies behind his faculty management skills and his ability to put them to use in the classroom.

"It's important to understand how to deal with people and their individual personalities," Heesch said.

LYBARGER

From page 1 working together.

Lybarger said he can do a good job in office because he has the qualities it takes to get things done. He said, "I'm organized, and I use my time valuably."

He said he is economical and can "make things happen with some economy and hard work."

Lybarger lives with his wife, Abbie. The two run a family home day-care center, and watch six 2- to 3-year-olds in their home.

Lybarger said he walks to 100 houses every day to spread his message.

In his spare time, he writes, paints and is active in civil rights activities.

---

WE HAVE SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY'S LARGEST SELECTION OF MOUNTAIN & ROAD BIKES!

NISHIKI

BRIDGESTONE

SCHWINN

TREK

Kestrel
SPECIALIZED

Ultra Wheel Inline Skates

ART'S CYCLERY

- We accept our competitor's coupons!
- We have the best prices!
Bird ‘backs’ out after 13 glorious seasons

No more Larry Bird playing basketball like no one else can.

The visions flow swiftly like a dream come true. Finally, the wakeup call came: Bird, seemingly superhuman in his best days, really is just a mere mortal.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

Throughout his years, Bird was one of the best basketball players in the world. He defined the way a generation of players played the game.

Larry Bird has helped to define the way a generation of players played the game. He was a peerless passer who made his teammates better.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching heart. He had to give in to the painful truth.

For t
HELLO, INFORMATION?

WHAT WOULD IT TAKE TO MAKE THE WORLD A BETTER PLACE?

WHAT'S AN APPROPRIATE GIFT FOR A FRIEND?

WHAT'S THE SECRET TO A LONG, HAPPY LIFE?

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A BATTLE AND AN ACTUAL WAR?

WHAT'S THE POINT OFspa.png