Petersen lags in funding
Poly candidate trails leaders by nearly $9,000; Settle criticizes big spenders

In a political race where one of his competitors has received over $9,000 in monetary contributions, how can Cal Poly's Brett Petersen successfully campaign with less than $4,000?

Reports released Tuesday by the San Luis Obispo City Clerk's office show that candidate David Romero has received the most money to date, with $9,227. Some of his contributors include SB Brewing Co., San Luis Donuts and Felton Ferrini, a San Luis Obispo investor. For, D. Williams followed with $8,796. Also received contributions from San Luis Obispo businesses.

As part of the $394 Petersen claimed as monetary contributions, he received a $100 contribution from his mother, Cathy Petersen, and a $100 contribution from polySCOP.

Petersen also loaned himself $600.

Candidate Allen Settle, a Cal political science professor, did not receive any contributions from businesses for his City Council campaign and criticized those who had.

"Once again, I am amazed at the amount of money that has been raised by special interest groups," Settle said. "This is primarily development interest money. These people are not going to be the true candidates."

"These interests are going to come in front of the council and these individuals are going to expect a return on their investment," Settle said.

"Are these people's own personal interests that they receive such a large volume of special interest, defined as real estate development interest money?" he said.

Cable TV bill override could result in $6 monthly hike for local subscribers

Cable television rates will be going up as a result of the Congressional override of President Bush's veto, according to Sonie Cable TV General Manager Steve Burrell.

"This whole strong support for the bill was deep public sentiment against cable television companies, who supporters of the bill argued have raised charges to consumers at a pace three times the rate of inflation."

Sene. Strom Thurmond, R.S.C.

Federal Communications Commission has 180 days to lay down formal rules. Burrell estimates an increase of anywhere from $2 to $6 a month.

The cable regulation bill vetoed enough votes to become the first Congressional override of Bush's 35 vetoes.

President Bush called the new law a "complete victory."

Guerrillas who opposed Pinochet turning to crime

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's leftist guerrillas still praise Marx and the revolution, but they are also robbing banks and kidnapping for money.

Isolated in a newly restored democratic rule and shaken by severe police blows, the urban guerrillas that sprang up to fight the former military regime of Gen. Augusto Pinochet have turned to common crime to survive, authorities say.

"Terrorist organizations are disintegrating and their members are turning to common crime," said Hugo Fruhling, secretary of the government's Security Council.

"It's increasingly harder for them to recruit people, and desertions happen all the time," he said. "The fighters realize that under democracy there's no justification for armed struggle and thus their fight has no viability."

More than 270 members of the two guerrilla organizations — the Lautaro Front and the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front — have been arrested since President Patricio Aylwin, an elected civilian, succeeded Pinochet in 1990.

Fruhling insists "very, very few" guerrillas are still active in the two groups. Police say the same, but concede they have no way of knowing the exact number.

Both groups arose in the mid-1980s to fight the Pinochet regime. They claimed responsibility for scores of attacks, including an attempt on Pinochet's life in 1986 that killed five of his bodyguards.

After Aylwin's inauguration, the Manuel Rodriguez Front said it was abandoning armed struggle to become a legal political party. But a hard-core faction balked at the decision and continued to make attacks.

The Lautaro Front vowed to continue its violent campaign "for the installation of a popular fartherland."

Despite Monday's rebound, it was the Dow average's lowest level in nine months.

"It's wrong to believe that they are going through a transition," said Dennis E. Jarrett, chief market analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co.

In Tokyo trading this morning, stocks were slightly lower amid relief that the Dow rebounded.

The low in the morning was particularly worrisome because of a 53.76-point decline on Friday. Many saw Wall Street as sending a message to policy-makers to lower interest rates one more time to stimulate economic recovery.

Lower interest rates can make stocks seem more valuable in comparison to investments such as savings accounts and money market funds.

Whether the Federal Reserve got the message from Wall Street as sending a message to policy-makers to lower interest rates again.

While a barrage of cuts have left interest rates at their lowest levels in 20 years, they have not succeeded in encouraging consumers and companies to borrow and spend enough to lift the economy from its doldrums.

"All indications point to inevitable growth in student demand into the next century. Not to plan for that would jeopardize our traditional commitment to the young people of this state," he said.

The site selection group also recommended that regents drop consideration of a third site, near Highway 41 in southern Madera County.

That didn't surprise Madera's UC committee members because they had been unable to reach an agreement with the property owner.

"Getting a site was really the problem we had all along," he said. "It's pretty obvious that you can't move ahead without a site," said Sally Frazier, co-chairwoman of the university's long-range plans for a 10th campus.

UC's new president, Jack W. Peltason, now will review the task force report and is expected to make his recommendation to the regents for action at their Nov. 19-20 meeting at the University of California, San Francisco.
Shuttle simulator approaching ‘liftoff’

By Julia Greenberg
Staff Writer

If Leonard Nimoy were dead, he’d be turning in his grave.

A fully equipped Extended Duration Orbiter Complex, capable of uninterrupted shuttle missions, has been moved and permanently grounded.

Of course, it was built that way.

It’s the latest project by SPAN, a Cal Poly organization designed to provide services and assistance to NASA and provide the community a view of the aerospace industry.

The Society for the Promotion and Advancement of NASA has been active on campus since 1989. Although its first chapter is at Cal Poly, other SPAN affiliates are appearing across the country at other universities.

SPAN has just completed phase II of “SPEDO-C”, also known as “Resolution.” Resolution will be presented to NASA early next year as the only facility in the country capable of conducting simulations of full-duration shuttle missions.

“We decided to build Resolution after learning that NASA had no simulator capable of helping shuttle engineers conceptualize their experiments,” said R.C. Chhipwadia, a mechanical engineering junior and director of SPAN’s Cal Poly chapter.

He noted that NASA does have a simulator, but experiments using it are impossible to do because astronauts have it booked up for years in advance.

Scientists and marketers for products used in space have had no inexpensive screening process, until now.

“NASA and their contractors can use our simulator for, say, fit checks,” Chhipwadia said.

“There are strict space allowances for everything aboard. When a company or NASA wants to put a product on a real space shuttle mission, they have to make sure that product can fit precisely into a slot,” he said.

Just a few of the experiments SPAN is planning to do itself involve circular motion patterns (sleep patterns), waste management and survival training.

An experiment is being planned which studies how people from different ethnic groups relate to each other during extended periods of time.

Chhipwadia stresses community involvement as vital to Resolution, both before and after the project is completed.

“We’re really indebted to businesses in San Luis,” Chhipwadia said. “More than 75 percent of our materials were donated, and we had round-the-clock help from electricians and handymen.”

Chuck Ryan, president of SPAN’s headquarters, also located in San Luis Obispo, stresses community involvement as vital to Resolution, both before and after the project is completed.

“We’ve really indebted to businesses in San Luis,” Chhipwadia said. “More than 75 percent of our materials were donated, and we had round-the-clock help from electricians and handymen.”

Chhipwadia and Ryan both emphasized the need for community members and students of any major to become involved in the project.

Several of SPAN’s members who spent two or three consecutive summers at Houston Mission Control would train students to be crew members of, “the closest you can come to the real thing,” Chhipwadia said.

He explained that the simulator students would be rigorously instructed on NASA shuttle procedures, plus issues such as claustrophobia, parachute jumping and emergency fire procedures.

Crew members would actually stay aboard Resolution, and with permission from teachers, would have their lectures videotaped and piped in and their homework faxed out.

Ryan agreed this was a tall order from Cal Poly professors.

“But hey,” he said, “this is an unparalleled learning experience for any major.”

Shuttle simulator is loaded onto flatbed truck bound for an undisclosed location in San Luis Obispo

As you know, spreading across the country is a wave of religious right-wing fanaticism. Stay calm, this extreme fanaticism is nothing new. What is new is that we must now identify these insidious demagogues who are attempting to permeate every level of American life. If American artists who do not resemble them to themselves as God-loving people, but in fact they are tyrants who do not tolerate freedom of choice or thought. Their sole aim is to convert every living American to their own ideas and image. Such self-centered behavior has assailed many Americans across the country, and have sent chills throughout the land. The religious fanaticism emanating from a belief in the Republican party has infected many Americans to take a realistic stand against such ignominious attitudes. In my view, the Republican party lately has been more of a nuisance and menace to contemporary society; in other words, phoniness is evident by some in the Republican party echoes sounds of coercive innuendos to convince the American people that they are the party that would guarantee them a problem-free future. Such self-centered behavior has assailed many Americans across the country, and have sent chills throughout the land. In my view, the Republican party lately has been more of a nuisance and menace to contemporary society; in other words, phoniness is evident by some in the Republican party.

The language of the Republican party is evident by some in the Republican Party. A number of African-Americans came to this country as slaves. The white man believed that, in order for slavery to work, it was important to get blacks to conform to his religious ideologies and other depredations.

For example, it was important to break and make the Negro believe that he, the white man, was his God and savior; and if the Negro was going to survive, he must depend on him for his spiritual being than the human one. The white man found it necessary to get Negroes to conform to this doctrine, especially if he wanted his plantation to prosper. As you know, African-Americans are still fighting such demagoguery today, even in supposedly contemporary America. African-Americans have always stood against heterodoxy. When even we were slaves without arms. The religious fanaticism that one sees today is just another extension of the slave masters during slavery.

This time around, the rightist movement promoted by the Republican Party. A number of African-Americans came to this country as slaves. The white man believed that in order for slavery to prosper, his plantation to prosper. In my case, if I had to choose between man and God to serve, I would rather serve God, because I believe that I would have a greater chance of having my sins forgiven by the spiritual being then the human one.

I believe this piece by Jane Taylor will sum up what I have been trying to say in this essay:

"Though a man thinking being is defined, you use the grand perspective of mind. How few think justly of the thinking fool. How many never think, who think they do." - Jane Taylor

Gender does not a candidate make

Ms. Hooper's commentary on women in politics has one glaring omission. Just because a woman is a candidate, do not assume that she is supportive of "women's issues."

There are two very good examples of this on our own bal. 9th District Supervisor candidate Wendy Nogle is one such woman. She was selected by the Republican party. A number of African-Americans came to this country as slaves. The white man believed that in order for slavery to prosper, his plantation to prosper. In my case, if I had to choose between man and God to serve, I would rather serve God, because I believe that I would have a greater chance of having my sins forgiven by the spiritual being then the human one.

Another such woman is Andrea Seastead. Seastead has one of the worst, if not the worst, voting records on environmental issues. She is not in as well as photographic. To print and distribute material that so obviously degrades women by displaying them in a purely sensual role naturally calls into question the amount of respect

That a man of Alpha Epsilon Pi has females. To take action against the behavior of women by participating in the Fraternity Escort Service while flaunting pictures of half-naked female women on flyers that has handled out all over campus is more than illegal — it's immoral. Behavior which contributes to the degradation of another human being in any sense should never be treated lightly.

If you are an Alpha Epsilon Pi member who does not hold this view of women, I would urge you to carefully examine the fraternal organization to which you belong, and to consider the types of activities and materials to which your name is attached.

Frat flyer found 'appealling'

I guess I should have felt privileged when an Alpha Epsilon Pi member handed me a flyer advertising their "African-American" event. I really felt privileged, however, when I looked at the flyer and saw pictures of the backsides of two women in prison bikinis. On the contrary, I was appalled at the amount of respect they have for the Negroes in their own society, which includes emotional, mental, and psychological respect, as well as physical. "The God syndrome"

The point to this essay is to create an awareness of people who are advocating religious fanaticism — a religious cult that says, "you are not the only, us." I say to keep our lives be dictated by dark views of the past. This is a new world, with new thinking. Why go backwards?

We must not fall into a trap of idealizing religious imposters, just because they are dressed in a navy-blue blazer and gray slacks. Well, who are these religious warlords? I will leave that up to you to think about and find out for yourselves.

I am not advocating that we all should be alike or serve the same God. It is not religion that is being criticized here, it is the exercising of religion. I believe religion has its place separate from government. In my case, if I had to choose between man and God to serve, I would rather serve God, because I believe that I would have a greater chance of having my sins forgiven by the spiritual being then the human one.

The legislation will give the Federal Communications Commission the power to set rates for basic service and installation, and to set service standards to ensure quality customer service. Within 10 years, cable companies will have to install decoding equipment in the homes of subscribers who wish to purchase premium channels such as HBO and The Disney Channel. Currently, Central Coast residents pay up to 78 cents per channel, or $28.75 a month for 29 channels. This is 30 cents per channel above the national average.

Burrell said Sonic has costs other stations don't because San Luis Obispo is so isolated from metropolitan areas. He said Sonic spent $1 million to update its signals so it could receive seven Los Angeles stations.

Supporters of the bill claim deregulation "sends a pretty strong signal that the American people deserve rate protection and more competition." Regulation supporters, which include vice presidential candidate Al Gore and the National Association of Broadcasters, say that cable rates have gone up three times faster than inflation. Gene Kimmelman of the Consumer Federation of America told the San Francisco Chronicle the Senate's affirming vote "sends a pretty strong signal that the American people deserve rate protection and more competition."

"Rhetoric," replied audience member Greg Jurnell. James Long, an electrical engineer, senior, said he was disappointed at the low turnout.

"How else do you know if you're going to vote for somebody if you don't hear them speak?" Long said.

Present at the forum were City Council candidates David Friend, David Jeffrey, John Lybarper, Brent Petersen, David Romero, Allen Settle, Richie Walker and Dodie Williams, as well as Mayoral candidates Cal Massey, Peg Pinard, Penny Rapps and Jerry Reiss.

"More mayoral candidates makes it a totally different race," she said.
