Accused flasher pleads not guilty

By John Hubbell

A former Cal Poly student has pleaded not guilty to counts of committing a lewd act and indecent exposure in the Robert E. Kennedy Library during the past summer.

Amir Servat Rao, 28, of San Luis Obispo, entered not guilty pleas through his attorney at an Oct. 19 arraignment in San Luis Obispo Municipal Court.

A hearing for Rao will be held in Division B of Municipal Court on Nov. 9 at 1:30 p.m.

The charges against Rao stem from several reports by Cal Poly Public Safety investigators made public at Rao’s arraignment. They show campus police suspect he is the man who allegedly harassed five women during late July and August in the library.

According to police documents, the initial report was made by a woman who said a man sat in front of her and began masturbating while she sat studying on the library’s fifth floor before awaking to “a sticky substance” on the back of her T-shirt.

The report indicates that the woman believed the substance to be semen.

While she reported to police that she “saw no one in the area just prior to falling asleep, she did tell... of a subject who has been watching her.”

The subject’s description matches other descriptions in the police reports.

The misdemeanor criminal charges are derived from the these alleged incidents, according to Jeff Steen, Rao’s attorney. However, Rao was also the subject of three other complaints filed during summer quarter.

Records further show that police — acting on a description supplied by students — put Rao under surveillance in the library on Aug. 5. Investigators Mike Kennedy and Ray Barrett reported finding Rao and that he agreed to be photographed for use in a lineup.

Days later, Rao was identified in the lineup by three women who claimed he had harassed them, the reports say.

Rao has no criminal record and is no longer enrolled at Cal Poly, according to Steen.

Clinton plays to GOP stronghold

By Carolyn Nielsen

“This sign is brighter than Dan Quayle.”

Pacific Amphitheatre in Costa Mesa, 20 Bush supporters raised bright orange “Bush Country” posters and chants of “Four more years!” Those en route to the Memoriandauly Thursday night retorted: “Twelve more days!”

A lone Perot supporter stood on the corner across the street handing out flyers while passing cars honked support.

By 6 p.m., the amphitheatre was at maximum capacity.

The bus of about 45 supporters from San Luis Obispo’s Democratic Headquarters found itself stuck in traffic at 6:30 p.m.

They had to listen to the rally from the parking lot.

Two enterprising interns for Gloria Ochoa, political science senior Kim Medvin and Elise St. John found a way in.

“We drove there and we were going to get in,” Medvin said. “We walked all around the place and found this roped-off entrance where people were getting in.

There were a bunch of senators in line there. When we told the guard how we were from Cal Poly and had driven all this way to see Clinton, he handed us special guest tickets.”

Some supporters, who had come as far north as Monterey and as far south as San Diego had to listen to the event from the library where they were denied entry.

Gloria Ochoa, political science professor Allen Settle serving as master of ceremonies, spoke about both national and state issues.

Costa Mesa is located in Orange County — one of the most Republican-dominated counties in the nation.

“She told your friends it won’t kill vote for a Democrat because they like what they see,” Clinton said.

Up went a “Quayle: Just say no!” poster.

There were a bunch of senators and local candidates, Clinton spoke about both national and state issues.

“Imagine what would happen if everyone who wanted to go to college could go,” Clinton said.

“We could solve the problem from the grass roots up. We can edu­cate a whole new generation.”

Up went a “Quayle: Just say no!” poster.

It was about then when a man near the stage, directly in front of the microphone, stood up and began waving orange “Bush Country” signs. He was also wearing a Clinton/Gore T-shirt.

People sat down around the man and began booing and pushing him.

“Don’t boo that poor boy,” Clinton said. “Why are you giving him any attention at all? There are 20,000 of us and one of them. Blow it off. It’s the other...”

Eastern Germany sees fifth night of right wing violence

BONN, Germany (AP) — A demonstration against neo-Nazism by about 250 foreign students and their supports turned violent early Sunday in the fifth night of unrest in the northeastern city of Greifswald.

Police said the protest was peaceful until right-wing "provocateurs" infiltrated the group and attacked police and a youth club believed to be a hangout for right-wing extremists who shave their heads.

Attacks on foreigners and refugee centers have been reported in six cities throughout western and eastern Germany over the weekend, and neo-Nazis have continued to attack Jewish memorials and graveyards.

The number of protests has also grown recently. Many Germans are upset by the right-wing extremism and continued to attack Jewish memorials and graveyards.

Workers protest British Coal closures, potential job loss

LONDON (AP) — At least 100,000 people, including miners, some wearing head lamps and orange work suits, marched through heavy rain Sunday to protest the government's proposed coal industry cutbacks.

British Coal, a nationalized company, announced Oct. 13 that it would stop production at 31 pits, eliminating 30,000 jobs.

But Prime Minister John Major bowed to pressure from rebel lawmakers in his own Conservative Party and announced a three-month review of the plans last week.

If the government ignores this protest the only axing for a living," Perot said, ridiculing Clinton's efforts to expand the job base during his 12 years as governor of Arkansas, which has become a center for chicken processing.

Perot quoted his daughter as saying, "The wedding's over, get back into the race." Mr. Perot said he didn't tell her why he quit the race until she returned from her honeymoon.

"I don't want everybody in America plucking chickens for a living," Perot said, recalling Clinton's efforts to expand the job base during his 12 years as governor of Arkansas, which has become a center for chicken processing.

Perot talked about character issue to fans at speedway

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP) — Ross Perot began to campaign in person on Sunday and joined the debate over character for the first time, casting himself as more relatable than President Bush or Bill Clinton.

Perot made the first face-to-face appearance of his revived campaign before an enthusiastic crowd of tens of thousands at a stock car track.

"All three candidates go over to your house one night and want to borrow money from you. Which one would you lend money to?" he asked.

"Which one of the three candidates as young men would you want your daughter to marry?" Perot said.

Perot asked what he called Republican dirty tricks by saying he dropped out of the race July 16 when he learned that GOP operatives planned to distribute a fake photograph of his daughter, Carolyn, "to smear her before the wedding an actually disrupt the wedding ceremony."

Perot said he didn't tell her why he quit the race until she returned from her honeymoon.

Overall crime rate declines; increase in reported rapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of crime reported to police declined 2 percent in the first half of 1992 compared to the same period the previous year, the FBI said Sunday.

By contrast the number of reported forcible rapes increased in the FBI survey. Some experts suggested that women, in the wake of the Anita Hill-Clarence Thomas sex harassment case, may be more willing to report rapes.

It is believed that less than 40 percent of major crimes are reported.

The FBI report showed a 3 percent drop in reported rapes.

The FBI said burglary dropped 4 percent, larceny-theft 3 percent and car theft 2 percent. Arson increased 6 percent.

Los Angeles Angelos Ablaze

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A tanker-truck driver burned to death Sunday in an accident that sent burning fuel streaming onto Los Angeles River Sunday, authorities said.

The 9,000-gallon tanker was carrying an unknown amount of gasoline or diesel fuel when it overturned and exploded at around 7 a.m. in Boyle Heights, said Kevin Larkin of the Fire Department.

The accident took place near a state Highway 101 transition road to the southern Interstate 5, said Officer Louis Borunda of the California Highway Patrol.

The driver was in the cab and apparently burned to death, he said.

No other vehicles were involved.

Burning fuel poured into storm drains and made a quarter-mile strip of fire in the concrete Los Angeles River, Borunda said.

Firefighters doused the flames in about 1½ hours and set out booms to prevent spilled fuel from reaching the ocean, he said.

The accident snarled traffic at the East Los Angeles interchange for hours.

Gasoline prices drop overall but increase on West Coast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retail gasoline prices dipped about a third of a cent overall during the past two weeks but rose slightly in some regions, an industry analyst said Sunday.

Prices rose slightly on the East and West coasts, regions with large population centers where demand is highest, but nationwide the average cost of gasoline was 119.22 cents per gallon on Friday, down .28 cents from Oct. 9, Trilby Lundberg said.

"It reflects the sluggish economy, and the fact that gasoline is a very seasonal product." she said.

"The downturn is not very likely to pick up pace or be sustained for long," she added.

The price drop, which followed a similar reduction earlier this month, probably will end because refiners must use additives to meet new federal environmental regulations aimed at reducing carbon monoxide, she said.

Gasoline prices at self-service stations, including taxes, were 113.52 cents per gallon for regular unleaded; 120.94 for mid-grade unleaded; 130.96 for premium unleaded; and 115.34 cents for leaded, Lundberg said.

Full-service prices were 139.45 cents for regular unleaded; 146.22 for mid-grade unleaded; 154.21 for premium unleaded, and 149.05 for leaded.

They speak of 'antagonism,' need for Pol representation in city

By Julia Greenberg
Staff Writer

"Balance" was the primary topic Thursday night when members from all sectors of the community met to hear political candidates discuss their platforms. Residents for Quality Neighborhoods hosted the meeting at the downtown City/County Library as the first of a long string of activities designed to bring students and the community together.

Candidates for mayor and City Council discussed what they hoped to do for all citizens of San Luis Obispo.

"The quality of life starts in the home," said Allen Settle, a Cal Poly political science professor and council candidate. "I want to investigate the SNAP program to help bridge the gap between the college community and the community as a whole, so we can all feel good about where we live." Settle added that everyone needs to work together to keep San Luis Obispo financially and environmentally secure.

"Economics is critical," he said. "We have to have a competitive business community, but at the same time, we can't afford to lose our resources.

Council candidate David Romero said he would implement a standing committee between Cal Poly, the City Council and neighborhoods.

"City Council has distanced itself from other government agencies over the past few years," Romero said. "We've antagonized Cal Poly, the City Council and neighborhoods.

"We are a lot of friction between the city and students. That can only be improved by a new start in City Council."

Council candidate David Jeffrey said he thinks city government should hold Cal Poly a larger alien of the decision-making pie.

"Our community has to realize that Cal Poly brings in more than $90 million a year to this city, yet they basically have no say in city government," he said.

Mayoral candidate Jerry Beas called Cal Poly "our city's sleeping political and economic giant." He said because of this, Cal Poly needs to be included in the fight for quality of life in San Luis Obispo.

Cal Poly student and council candidate Brent Petersen outlined his plan of action if he's elected.

"The environment and the community have got to be the central focus of our lives," he said. "Like a lot of young people these days, I'm concerned about our scarce resources. We're pulling the environment down and becoming masters of it instead of working with it.

Petersen said he wants to see the community come together in a "balance between all sides."

"If you want the good life, you have to take care of what's around you," he said. "If we do that we'll find the prosperity that we deserve."

"We have to have a competitive business community, but can't afford to lose our resources."

‘Phase II’ of affirmative action

By Martin E. Kaliski

I am a political liberal. There, I said it. Born and bred as a Jew in New York City in the 1950s, one might say that I had little choice in the matter. In most matters I am far to the left (at least compared to the norm in these parts) that one might almost use the term ‘radical’ to describe me. My order for ACLU colleagues. Since this is a bit disconcerting, I never imagine myself voting for a gun or outlived its usefulness. It has been grounds is testimony to its success. I do not believe that it is time to sacrifice affirmative action for its own sake, nor do I wish to embark on ‘Phase II’ of the program. Phase II has outlined its usefulness. It has become as fraught with hyperbole and divisiveness, that it is time to move on.

The original goals of affirmative action were indeed noble. They believed in the early successes in the real quest for ethnic equality. The basic dividing line between rich and poor, the rich with no other ingredient than money, the poor with no other ingredient than skin color. Here are a few of its features:

- There are too many hypercritical in public office; they must be replaced with people who are truly committed to racial equality and diversity. For far too many, political equality is sort of like a state prison - it’s needed, but not in "my" back yard. It’s a politically correct buzzword, but they would sooner die than have one of their children marry an "ethnic minority." Yet they "support" affirmative action. They believe in the phrase of the early successes in the real quest for ethnic equality. Men's soccer wins in pressure situation

By John Cristofano
Staff Writer

The situation: Facing the pressure that it must win, if not all, of its remaining five games to have a chance at the playoffs, the Cal Poly men's soccer team beat Cal State San Bernardino Saturday night at Mustang Stadium.

The result: The Mustangs came out fired up, scored early and ultimately blanked the Coyotes, 3-0.

"I've had games like this in the past," said Burt. "I'd say we played clever and it was aasive, but we were fired up. We came out tough. It was a great win."

"That's got to be the worst game-winning PK I've kicked in my life," said Jerulin.

It was an ugly and cruel way to lose to the Mustangs.

Although Cal Poly got the ball back with nine seconds left, Cal Poly quarterback David Slantyko only got off two desperation passes, the second intercepted by Northridge's Ralph Henderson at the 20-yard line.

Outplayed by Cal Poly in the first half, Northridge overcame a 19-0 halftime deficit with a ferocious offensive attack in the second half.

Matador running back Jamal Fisher said of the second half: "It was a panic situation as a pro scout, proceeded on a two-yard run to cap off the first series of the second half.

Cal Poly's Brian Fitz fumbled five minutes into the second half and Northridge recovered at the Mustang 18.

Five plays later, Farmer tried diving over his linemen from one yard out. "I intended to get a first down," said Burt. "I had a guy in mind to give a first down to Cal Poly with 42 left in the third quarter.

"I'm really happy with our defense, which has switched to a more run-oriented attack, could get that misfortune. But Bob Thomas once again met Farmer in mid-air to force a fumble and get the ball back to Cal Poly with 42 left in the third quarter.

The game, Northridge's WFC opener, was played before a homecoming crowd of 6,217.

The Mustangs next face U.C. Santa Barbara Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Mustang Stadium.

Women's soccer wins despite sluggish start

By Kristie McCall

The Cal Poly women's soccer team dominated in two victories over the weekend despite missing three starters.

After a sluggish start, the Mustangs defeated Cal State Hayward 4-0 at Mustang Stadium on Sunday.

Coach Alex Crozier said his team played "flat" in the first half, "but in the second half we played well with Cal Poly's second half performance.

"We came out with a little more intensity in the second half," said Crozier. "We held them to two shots-on-goal in the whole game.

The victory was important for Cal Poly's playoff hopes because it's a member of the Regional Selection Committee - the group that determines which teams make the NCAA playoffs.

Sophomore Kellie Kasins, who scored all three goals in Saturday's 3-0 victory over San Francisco State, said on Sunday, "It was good to see."

"That's got to be the worst game-winning PK I've kicked in my life," said Jerulin.

Poly's dreams again erased in final minute

If Cal Poly's football team would leave the stadium with a winning record and a berth in the playoffs, odds are that the Mustangs would walk away happy.

Cal Poly suffered yet another heartbreaking ending to a football season Saturday night.

Only this one will have the Mustangs treading and turning in their beds more than the others. You, others. This isn't the first final minute flub for the Mustangs.

The score, 3 - Sonoma State kicks a 32-yard field goal with four seconds left to beat the Mustangs 36-35.

Oct. 10 - Cal Poly scores a touchdown with 45 seconds left to tie U.C. Davis at 31-31 and the Mustangs had a chance to win the last-minute misfortunes. But Bob Thomas missed the extra-point attempt and the game stayed tied.

Oct. 24 - Northridge's Chris Fergus made a 53-yard touch-down pass with 17 seconds left and game plan with 14 seconds left to Joe Fisher. "It's a shame we didn't drive through the center of the Mustangs' defense," said Northridge's Chris Fergus once again.

This year was no different. Poly's extra-point attempt to tear out Cal Poly's heart once again.

"That's got to be the worst game-winning PK I've kicked in my life," said Jerulin.

It was an ugly and cruel way to lose to the Mustangs.
"Sometimes the ball goes one way and sometimes it goes the other way. It seems like it's been going against us all year."

Setencich said at first that he didn't see any difference between Saturday's loss and the others.

"Later, he said, 'We've had games like this before. Right now, I don't remember them. I'll remember this one tonight."

As to whether he has grown used to feeling the way he did following Northridge's win, Setencich said: "Nope, you never get used to them."

It appeared that Setencich could tell what fortune would use to feeling the way he did following Northridge's win, Setencich said: "I'm not expecting another last-minute mishap, right?"

That dream, however, was probably appear as a nightmare for Mustang defensive back Steve Lombardi, who was covering Fregeau on the play. Lombardi lay face first on the goal line as Northridge players celebrated around him.

What made things worse was that Cal Poly had to suffer through two celebrations by Northridge, which stormed the field both before and after Jesulin's game-winning kick. "I think a game like that is the kind of game you have to win if you want to be a good football team," Northridge coach Bob Fregeau said after the game.

Does that mean Cal Poly is a bad football team? Let's just say Saturday's game opened in the last-minute. It all ended in the city where it began a few days ago with a flag flap. And, Toronto's big win resulted in an even bigger loss for the Blue Jays — their label as big-game losers.

The Braves, meanwhile, became the first team to lose consecutive World Series since the 1977-78 Los Angeles Dodgers, and for the second straight year last but despite ousting their AL opponent. Atlanta lost 10-0 in Game 7 to Minnesota last year and, last all four games in this Series by one run.

The 11th inning came down to a battle for atonement between Winfield, still hounded by his l-for-22 performance in the 1981 World Series, against Charlie Leibrandt, who gave up one hit in 13 lifetime at-bats against the Blue Jays. Fregeau on the play. Lombardi lay face first on the goal line as Northridge players celebrated around him.

Leibrandt took the loss in his first Series appearance and Jimmy Key was in relief. Key allowed a run in the 11th on a single by Jeff Blauser, an error by shortstop Alfredo Griffin and a RBI-grounder by pinch-hitter Brian Hunter.

Otis Nixon bunted on a left to the right side of the mound and reliever Mike Timmons made the play calmly for the final out, setting off Toronto's celebration on the field.

It was Nixon's two-out single in the ninth that got the Braves to extra innings. His hit broke a record string of 15-3 consecutive years by Toronto's bullpen in the Series.

Boxer, Herschensohn talk defense, abortion on TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democrat Barbara Boxer agreed that her 143 bounced checks on the congressional bank damaged her U.S. Senate campaign, and Republican Bruce Herschensohn repeated his opposition to defense cuts in nationally televised interviews Sunday.

The rivals for the Senate seat of retiring incumbent Alan Cranston both repeated positions on which their differences are sharpest in separate back-to-back interviews from Los Angeles on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" program.

Herschensohn, a conservative former Los Angeles television commentator, said that despite the end of the Cold War and the breakup of the Soviet Union, he still opposes cutting the defense budget, while Boxer, who would have been in Congress when the system was created, said that despite the Constitution.

He said things that were just cut out and Falsehoods on television...I don't have a million dollar pension," Boxer said.

"I've been very honest with the people. I said I'm not perfect. I didn't pay enough attention to my checkbook," Boxer said.

For scientists, professionals, our exciting R&D environment and current drug discovery programs represent the opportunity to make a significant contribution. Join us in one of the following areas.

RESEARCH BIOLOGISTS

MOLECULAR BIOLOGY
You will be working with a team of scientists in our Aptamer Group. The individual will participate in research projects involving the use of protein engineering techniques to identify functional regions in proteins and the application of novel screening techniques to identify novel therapeutic compounds. This position requires a BS, or M.S. in Biochemistry, Molecular Biology, or similar with 8-10 years laboratory experience in one of the described areas.

PROTEIN BIOCHEMISTRY
Working with a team of scientists in our Virology and Aptamer Group, you will be involved in HPLC and HFLC purification and analysis of recombinant proteins from both E. coli and mammalian cell culture. The ideal candidate must possess a BS, or M.S. in Biochemistry or a related field and at least one year laboratory experience. Candidate should also be proficient in such techniques such as SDS-PAGE, ELISA, binding, and enzymatic assays. Prior experience in amino acid analysis and/or protein sequencing also a plus.

RESEARCH CHEMISTS

We have several openings in our chemistry department where you will be working with a team of scientists devoted to the discovery and development of novel therapeutic agents.

Working in the area of nucleotide chemistry, you will be involved in the chemical synthesis of nucleotide analogs, for the incorporation into oligonucleotides. In our medicinal chemists group, you will be synthesizing a variety of compounds of pharmacological interest, working in our process development group, you will be involved in scale-up and pilot-scale production of candidate compounds. Successful candidates will possess a B.S. or M.S. degree with 0-5 years of experience. Familiarity with synthetic techniques and analytical and spectroscopic methods and relevant lab experience is required.

As an emerging force in the pharmaceutical industry, Gilead provides a comprehensive compensation and benefits package which reflects our leadership and commitment to our scientists. We invite you to look for us on campus to learn more about our exciting opportunities. Please check with your Career Planning Placement office for more details. If you are unable to attend, please send your CV to Human Resources, Gilead Sciences, 1201 Lakeside Drive, Foster City, CA 94404. An equal opportunity employer.

RALLY
Senate candidate Dianne Feinstein also spoke during the rally.

"I hear guys who don't believe in freedom of speech and you won't have to put up with them much longer. "California can recreate the American legacy of changing times when demand it," he added.

Afterwards, Clinton spoke with supporters and news media crushcd against the stage. "I'm a number of Orange County's gay rights movements, and Bill, we really need your support," one man said.

Clinton answered: "You can count on it."

During his speech, Clinton pointed out key planks in the platforms of California's Democratic senatorial candidates, who addressed the crowd before his speech.

Dianne Feinstein and Bob Bore Boxer both spoke with vigor about passing a Freedom of Choice Act to secure abortion rights. The largely partisan crowd gave on its feet and voiced loud support of the pro-choice issue.

After the rally, Clinton, Feinstein and Boxer went outside to address the supporters, who had listened to the four-hour presentation from the parking lot.

All three gave an impromptu presentation to the crowd and shook hands with many volunteers.

John Ashbaugh, the Democratic State Assembly candidate for the 33rd district, was seated on the stage behind Clinton. He said he was "very disappointed" his SLO volunteers couldn't get in. But he said the rally gave him a "new burst of energy."

"Clinton will clearly take California, and hopefully he will take the rest of us with him," Ashbaugh said. "(Clinton) is ready for the job. It's going to require all of us to commit ourselves to the same extent."

Each San Luis Obispo volunteer wore a red "Ashbaugh for State Assembly" sign through the parking lot to voice their support.

Many on the bus ride home were disappointed about not being able to get into the rally. But those who saw Clinton, Feinstein and Boxer afterward seemed to have their enthusiasm restored.

David Taylor, a biochemistry junior and secretary for Cal Poly's Young Democrats, made the five-hour bus journey to Costa Mesa. He said he was disappointed he couldn't get in, but he was still excited about casting his first vote for Clinton. "I'm excited about women senators getting elected," he added.

Taylor had stood outside with the Bush and Perot supporters. "I went and challenged them," he said, "essentially the anti-abortion ones."

José Henriques, a political science senior and member of Young Democrats, was disappointed he didn't get Clinton's autograph.

"I shook his hand," he said. "It was an electrifying experience. (The fact that) he took the time to acknowledge the people who couldn't get in shows real character."

Henriques is still a citizen of Salvador and cannot vote in the election.

"I find it shameful that people have the right and just throw it away," he said. "People die for this right in other countries."

Henriques said the protesters had "a right to express themselves. They weren't happy with my anti-Bush shirt," he said. "I'll take any Republicans on as long as it is civilized."

"I'm disappointed they don't support Bill Clinton," he added with a grin. "But some people never learn."
