ELECTION '92

Preparation for today's elections.

By Marla R. Van Schuyver

Volunteers lined the streets and party headquarters buzzed with anticipation Monday in preparation for today's elections. Ross Perot supporters stood along downtown streets of San Luis Obispo Monday afternoon waving signs and soliciting honks from fellow Perot supporters. Perot supporter Ron Skow said he is "amazed" at the response from passersby.

"If the number of people honking translates in any way to the number of people who really are going to vote for him, he's going to carry this county," Skow said.

"When we first started coming out here with the signs, we were hoping, nothing in our wildest dreams on polls throughout the day and will have live updates from local election locations starting at 10 a.m.

Radio stations including KCPR, KVEC, KBXX will be talking about the election during the day, and presenting results throughout the evening.

According to KCPR News Director Stephen Tabala, the station will offer expanded newscasts at 8 a.m. and 8:30 p.m., a special noon update, live coverage every 30 minutes after 3 p.m., another expanded newscast at 5 p.m. and an election wrap-up at 10 p.m.

KVEC will have a call-in talk show for listeners to discuss their election views. From 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., KVEC will have reports from state, local and national elections, according to KVEC News Director Susan Vaughan.

KVEC will have election coverage beginning at 5 p.m. Linda Wertheimer will host a political analysis in President's Congressional and gubernatorial elections. Beginning at 7:30 p.m., Robert Siegel will host a national call-in segment (1-800-889-TALK). Later, KBXX will have updates, according to Gay Bath, election coverage coordinator.

"We need to elect leaders who don't believe in a woman's place, or a woman's privacy," Feinstein said. "And we need elected officials who are proud of the political ladder," said Ochoa, Democratic congressional candidate for the 22nd district.

"We don't just want to win by a small margin, either. We want to win by a landslide," Boxer said. "There is an excellent atmosphere among the Democrats that we haven't seen in decades. It's an exciting time for us."

All party headquarters will offer expanded coverage every 30 minutes after 3 p.m., another expanded newscast at 5 p.m. and an election wrap-up at 10 p.m., according to Guy Rathbun, election coverage coordinator.

"When we first started coming out here with the signs, we were only getting about 40 to 50 percent of the people honking, but I would guess at least 60 percent are now honking, nodding in their heads, saying "yes we care," said Mike Corey Daniel, Cal Poly representative to the Perot campaign.

"We've had some T-shirt sales and a lot of people asking for buttons to wear in support of him," Daniel said. "We've had a lot of people who said they like the Perot platform."
President Bush brandished pages from a 1987 congressional report on the Iran-Contra scandal, saying it confirms what he's always said about his role in the affair.

There's only one problem: Four years after that report was written, investigators found new evidence that suggests Bush knew about the arms-for-hostages deal all along.

The evidence — the notes of former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger — shows that in a Jan. 7, 1986, National Security Council meeting, Bush favored swapping 4,000 TOW antitank missiles for five American hostages. That's according to a new indictment of Weinberger handed up Friday.

Iran-Contra prosecutors found Weinberger's notes last year.

Here's what it says about the Jan. 7, 1986, meeting:

"Congress could not record that the vice president expressed any views on the proposal of delivery of the 4,000 TOWs.
- President Reagan and his top aides discussed "hostages as one of the motivating factors for selling arms to Iran.
- Bush and others from the Reagan administration have always emphasized that the main reason for the arms sales was to bring about a more moderate government in Iran.
- "I have said over and over again that the original proposal was not presented as an arms-for-hostages swap," Bush said in 1988. He repeated that over the weekend, insisting that "the whole thing was to encourage moderates and yes, if the hostages came out, fine."
- But Weinberger's note states: "President decided to go with Israeli-Iranian offer to release our 5 hostages in return for sale of 4,000 TOWs to Iran."
- Bill Casey, Ed Meese - VP favored - as did Poindexter."

Bush cost doubt on the accuracy of Weinberger's note, saying Reagan to this day doesn't regard the Iran initiative as dealing arms for hostages.

Bush says that "in retrospect, I'd have to say" it "probably was" arms for hostages, but insists that he didn't recognize that on Jan. 7, 1986.

Reagan twice has changed his position on whether he engaged in arm-for-hostages deals with Iran. On Nov. 13, 1986, he told a national television audience that "we did not - repeat - did not trade weapons or anything else for hostages, nor will we."

Reagan repeated four months later after the report of his Tower Board concluded the opposite. He reversed four months later after he reverted to his original denial of an arms-for-hostages scheme in the 1996 trial of his former national security adviser, John Poindexter.

One Tower Board member, Edmund Muskie, said Bush's "repeated claims of ignorance of the arms-for-hostages deal now conflict directly" with the newly revealed Weinberger notes.

"President Bush owes the American people a forthright explanation," Muskie said Saturday night.

But another Tower Board member — Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft — criticized Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh as "political" for bringing the Weinberger indictment just four days before the election.

The former defense secretary is charged with five counts of lying to Con­gress and Iran-Contra prosecutors.

UC Berkeley crime calls double

University of California police say have boosted security around the campus because of an increasing number of calls for assistance.

UC police said they have added more foot patrols since Oct. 21, when 20-year-old John Mastny, an undergraduate, was killed in downtown Berkeley.

Police are still trying to solve the February murder of Grace Baskin Atkinson. She was found stabbed to death in a fifth-floor campus office.

South Africa considers joint rule

The African National Congress is considering a plan to govern South Africa jointly with President F.W. de Klerk's National Party, an ANC official said Sunday.

The disclosure came a day after ANC leader Nelson Mandela announced the organization would meet with government leaders on Nov. 22 for further talks on en­gaging the opposition.

Stoffel van der Merwe, national chairman of the ANC, said the party is considering calling for joint rule.

A report in the Sunday Times newspaper said a draft document on the power-sharing plan was distributed last week.

The National Council of Churches for Africa said it would not comment on the draft until the ANC and its allies have had a chance to see it.

Dead guitar 'looking healthy'

Jerry Garcia is not. On Halloween, a lively and slimmed-down Garcia led to rest greatly exaggerated reports of his demise when he gave his first performance since he fell ill in August, suffering fast-moving rumors among his fans that he was dead.

"He's a lean, mean guitar-pickin' machine," said Grier McCurdy, 27, who staked out a front row spot for The Jerry Garcia Band's sold-out show at the Oakland Coliseum Sunday night.

The partly, 50-year-old rock star has been adhering to a strict nutrition and exercise program since his bout with exhaustion and other health problems forced the Grateful Dead to cancel a fall tour.

The Grateful Dead is the most popular concert act in the United States. It earned $30 million in concert ticket sales last year.

Garcia has a history of health problems that have caused breaks in the Dead's grueling concert schedules. In 1986, he entered the hospital in a diabetic coma. He also has admitted past drug use.

MEChA unites in statewide cultural conference
By Cynthia Nelson
Staff Writer

Chicano students met at Cal Poly over the weekend to participate in a statewide conference hosted by the campus chapter of Movimiento Estudiantil Chicoano de Aztlán.

The conference was held to educate Chicano students on their heritage and to discuss some of the problems they face. "It is beautiful to see so many brown faces at Cal Poly," said Arroyo said. "It only takes you to believe in yourself as an individual."

To motivate students, Osuna displayed slides depicting the horror the indigenous people suffered when Christopher Columbus and the Spanish Conquistadores arrived.

Osuna told stories of massacres, mutilations and widespread disease among his ancestors. "You cannot tie to a people about their history and not expect them to react, even violently when they find out the truth," Osuna said.

He reminded the students not to be angry at the European descendants for what their ancestors did, but to work to remove the 500 years of oppression.

Students then attended seminars pertinent to rebuilding the foundation of the Chicano people. Seminar subjects included date rape, AIDE, alcoholism, homophobia, Chicano history and how to organize on campus.

Nearly 75 students filed into a classroom led by Carlos Montez of Cal State University Dominquez Hills, who challenged students to organize.

To start, Montez said they must stop talking among themselves, make a plan, involve others and set out to accomplish the goal.

"The key to organizing is doing one issue at a time," he said.

Once a group is organized and completes their tasks successfully, they gain power, he added.

A second series of workshops continued into the afternoon. They focused on the Los Angeles riots, indigenous thought and culture, the free trade agreement, the history of the Chicano student movement and a law suit involving Chicanos in Santa Maria.

Former Cal Poly lecturer Jorge Aguilaris, and Joe Tolgan of the Committee for the Betterment of Santa Maria Valley, discussed the current political atmosphere in Santa Maria.

The two described a lawsuit currently being brought against the city by members of the Mexican-American community, who were outraged by a controversial statement made by Mayor George Habib in 1990.

The plaintiffs are asking that Santa Maria be divided into seven districts, with each electing its own representative to the City Council.

Tolgan said, should the case be won, it will set a precedent for state politics. "If you sit around and wait for someone to come out, it's not going to happen," Tolgan said.

Tolgan added the suit could have dramatic impact on state politics, as 80 percent of the cities in California are estimated to have the same problem of underrepresentation.

The weekend of events was a success, according to Pedro Arroyo and Fernando de Alba, MEChA's president and second vice president at Cal Poly.

Arroyo said the conference served as an example that Chicano students can come together.

"It reinforces everything we stand for, everything we have been fighting for in the last 20 years," Arroyo said. "Events like this give us hope, direction and strength."

This is your direct line of communication to the President (whoever he turns out to be). Miss out on voting for this one and you may as well move to the Sahara and put your head in the sand. You'll have to fight through the mudslinging, but you can still make an educated choice.

Taking back the airwaves

By Peter Hartlauf

12.35mm film bought at Dis­neyland.

An interesting note; while Sonic Cable is now ranked number four in the really, really bad deals this century, two of the other top twelve picks could be purchased on Sonic Cable. But enough with lists, let's get down to figures.

Sonic Cable rates are now $23.75 per month (not to mention a plethora of obscene fees) and according to Sonic Cable manager Steve Burrell in an Oct. 7 Mustang Daily article that with recent cable regulations coming from the federal government, they will soon go up $2 to $4 per month. That's a possible $29.75 a month for 29 channels. You now pay 81 cents per channel and could soon pay more than a dollar.

Yes, there is no question that you are being ripped off to what extreme?

To look at the magnitude with which we are being shafted, we should have some sort of basis of comparison.

I looked at a recent listing of the cities in California with the highest average citizen income and called the cable companies that service them. The results were interesting.

Viasat Cable, which serves Marin, charges $20.69 for 28 channels. That's 73 cents per channel.

Pacific Cable, which serves Hillsborough, charges $24.50 for 42 channels. That's 57 cents per channel.

And the cable company that serves Beverly Hills says it can give me 49 channels for $22.95.

That's 55 cents per channel.

Yes, it's true, Luke, Dylan and Brenda are paying less for cable than you are.

I've hypothesized that the rules at Sonic for rate increases are really quite simple. Anything can be an excuse. If Congress doesn't regulate cable — your rates go up. If it does regulate it — your rates go up. If there's a new movie — your rates go up.

Taco Bell introduces a new formula for its nacho sauce — your rates go up.

So what's the solution?

As far as I'm concerned, two things have come out of Los Angeles in the last century — Jim Morrison and the proper way to deal with a plethora of obtuse fees.

Now don't get me wrong. I'm not specifically instructing you to bribe your local Sonic Cable repairman. I'm not telling you to get a neighbor to pretend their cable isn't working and when the guy comes to connect the aerial slip him a hundred to do some "unscheduled" work. And I'm definitely not telling you to go to Radio Shack and get a hybrid splitter combination (costs $15-141.75 in the fall 1992 catalog) make an incision in your neighbor's cable wire and hook it up your way.

That would be illegal. But it would be illegal in a beautiful, patriotic Boston Tea Party kind of way. Everyone wins. You get cable at a relatively cheap one-time rate and some poor working guy gets to buy his kids the Beebo Pump smackers they've been wanting for Christmas.

My household took the cowardly way out. Presently I am a martyr who suffers without the Simpsons and SportsCenter. Yes, I wallow in visual enter­tainment poverty. But even if I can't obtain my present television needs, I want my kids to have all the advantages I had when I was their age.

So when it comes to cable, boycott it, buy it, borrow it or steal it.

Don't just pay for it.

Because it's time to take back the airwaves.

"I've bought a .44 magnum it was solid steel cast." And in the blessed name of Elvis: well I just let it blast 'til my TV lay in pieces there at my feet. And they haunted me for disturb the almighty peace."

There is no place in elections for automatic endorsements

The Issue: The automatic endorsement of Brent Petersen as a City Council candidate in the polySCOPE caucus before voting by student clubs actually began. The endorsement itself was voted in by an undisclosed number of student organizations on campus. The organization informing them was the same one that endorsed Petersen and then choose one other candidate for the two open council spots.

The Decision: Cal Poly students should be able to endorse candidates freely, with no limitations, restrictions or recommendations.

Like the feelings created by fingernails on a chalkboard, a chill should rise in the spine of any American who has a vote forced upon them.

So when polySCOPE approached campus clubs with the idea of a mandatory endorsement of the only Cal Poly candidate, it is surprising that a great deal of protest did not erupt.

The implementation of a mandatory vote was a serious mis­take.

This isn't a shot on Brent Petersen. In fact, he's the victim. It is probable that his qualifications would have garnered him a strong endorsement on his own. He should have had the op­portunity to achieve this in a valid and interesting campaign.

Petersen is a talented candidate who deserves to be en­dorsed by a fair process. The automatic endorsement discredits him, polySCOPE and the school.

Petersen has said himself that, if elected, he would be a city representative first and a student second. There is no basis for him to be separated from the other candidates in any forum.

PolySCOPE's decision may have been well-intentioned in concept, but was hideous distribute in practice.

Controlling a candidate and telling people who to vote for may be acceptable in some Third World countries, but these practices are nothing but dangerous on a college campus.

Getting a great deal of students involved in a school endor­sement is a noble idea. The whole process, however, is tainted as soon as any restriction is applied.

Fortunately, an endorsement is only a recommendation and has limited impact on the real thing. Hopefully, we will all be redeemed by a huge turnout today.

So get out and vote.

And this time, hopefully, nobody will tell you how to do it.

A pregnancy test you don't have to be a Chem Major to use.

The First Response 1-Step Pregnancy Test requires just one easy step — no cup.

So leave the test tube and complicated procedures in your chemistry lab. This one-step, one-use pregnancy test is as easy to test as ever made. Just hold the absorbent end of the tester in your urine stream. Within three minutes you'll know. If a pink line appears in the result window, you're pregnant. If it remains white, you're not. Even if it's your first time using a home pregnancy test, First Response 1-Step is so easy to use, it's virtually mistake-proof.

THE SOLUTION

THE PROBLEMS we face today both at the social and individual level are truly awesome: At the national and international level the issues are human rights, poverty, and war. At the individual level, people are searching for identity, self-worth, acceptance, and love. We believe the solution to all these problems is Jesus Christ. And we are available to talk to students and colleagues about the Solution.
