Mass murderer ‘spooked’ Poly students

Class sketched gunman days before his rampage

Multiple murderer Lynwood Drake III was employed within the last two weeks as a nude model in Cal Poly art classes.

Drake, 34, shot six people in Morro Bay and Paso Robles last weekend before committing suicide. A note found in Drake’s pocket said he killed three of his six victims “because they took my wife, family and daughter from me.”

“Damn the American family to hell,” he wrote. “God forgive me.”

Drake was mostly unemployed, earning money from card winnings and odd jobs. Drake called upon professor Robert Densham looking for a job.

Densham was a model in Cal Poly art classes. The last two weeks as a model were payments of $500.

A State Department official dismissed by President Bush said Wednesday she had done nothing "wrong or inappropriate" and had merely tried to make sure the department acted properly in pursuing media requests for information from Bill Clinton's passport records.

Berkeley, CA

The University of California's "Naked Guy" may be seeking redress following a stern warning from administrators Wednesday: No clothes, no classes.

The core issue in the controversy is whether Tamposi and her colleagues in the Consular Affairs bureau attempted to bolster Bush's re-election campaign by trying to dig up dirt on his opponents under the cover of Freedom of Information Act requests.

Council cuts heavy from city’s budget

By Liz Weber

The San Luis Obispo City Council voted unanimously to cut annual operating expenditures by $1.48 million Tuesday night.

The cuts were recommended by City Administrator John Dunn and Finance Director William Wilkinson, who told the council cutting expenditures should play the leading role in combating the economic difficulties.

"We have learned, certainly, in the past few years that San Luis Obispo is not recession-proof," Dunn said.

The council made an across-the-board five percent cut to areas such as public safety, public utilities, transportation, community development and general government.

These cuts will not result in any layoffs, pay cuts or reductions in services, nor will they affect the construction of the Cal Poly Performing Arts Center, Dunn said.

The council also approved a 50 percent capital improvement expenditures reduction, which would mean less street repair, street cleaning and other maintenance for the city.

"We’re down to a bare-bones operation," Dunn said. "We’ve looked at this from many different perspectives. The simple truth of the matter is that there’s no further cuts possible without cutting services and cutting personnel."

Fire Captain Bob Wilkinson said most of the fire department’s budget goes to personnel and operating expenses. Because of this, any cuts affect the levels of service, he said.

Dunn said these cuts will force the fire department to "scrape the bottom of the barrel," but believes it will remain a viable service.

"There’s no doubt in my mind that with the current cuts we’ll maintain our effectiveness," Wilkinson said.

Council member Penny Rapp said the cuts are sending the wrong signal to businesses and the city should invest in economic recovery and stability. The recommendation also included raising recreation fees $120,000 annually.

Council member and mayor-elect Peg Pinard voted against these increases, saying they might force the children who can’t afford them out of the streets.

"If these kids are not playing in sports and involved in some activity... guess what these kids are going to be doing if they’re not involved in these programs," Pinard said.

Also at the Tuesday meeting:

Mayor Ron Dunin presented Council member Jerry Reese the California Smoke-Free Cities award for his work in "establishing 100 smoke-free restaurants and restricting cigarette sales through vending machines."

The council voted to rezone a 4.3-acre site near Orcutt Road from a manufacturing to a service-commercial classification. The telemarketing firm of Call America requested the change for the construction a fiber-optics plant.

SENATE

This department of home economics and engineering technology said in spring they had never consulted.

Botwin thought this unfair.

"The way due process works is that with the current cuts we’ll maintain our effectiveness," Botwin on creating a new process for a censure, but would work with Botwin to design a new process to follow.

Botwin agreed to work with Wilkinson. They were joined by Ryan asked that students not apply the new rules to new applicants.

Kirsten said he felt the Academic Senate was even left out of discussions.

Executive Senate member Charlie Andrews, who chaired the Academic Senate last year, said he saw no evidence of a violation of due process.

"If the program cuts) happened in spring then why are we doing this now?" Andrews asked. "This may be a cause for a disqualification, but not a cause for a censure."

Vilkitis said he would not sign a censure, but would work with Botwin on creating a new process to follow.

AID

There is no longer an application fee for what is now known as the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Ryan pointed out many students with parents whose income previously disqualified them from receiving aid would be eligible under the new rules.

"Everyone who needs aid should apply," she said. "The more serious assessment of family contribution should offset the change in status for many students."

Ryan said the adjusted gross income ceiling has been raised from $15,000 to $50,000.

Exceptions to the age rule in- clude orphans, wards of the court, graduate students, married students or those with dependents.

Ryan said she was amazed and disappointed that Congress decided not to allow students who have been declared inde- pendent to remain that way.

"I can’t believe they expect students who have been supporting themselves for two and three years to go ask their parents for help," she said. "I had really hoped we would be allowed to grandfather students through to the end of their program, within a reasonable time frame and apply the new rules to new applicants." Ryan said 33 affected students will be informed of their eligibility for a special override allowing them to retain independent status. She said overrides may also be eligible, but are required to present documentation of "serious and compelling reasons" for the exemption.

Ryan asked that students not call her office with questions. Instead, she encouraged them to make an appointment after the first of the year or attend one of the financial aid workshops that will be offered beginning in January.

Very soon, you will be receiving this free calendar in the mail from the County of San Luis Obispo and PG&E. Unlike other calendars, this one contains a special Emergency Planning section for the Diablo Canyon Power Plant. So you’ll know what to do in case of an emergency.

For example, the calendar tells you that if you heard a steady three to five minute siren, you should do the following: turn off your radio to any participating Emergency Broadcast System station and listen for further announcements.

The calendar is an easy way to keep emergency preparedness information nearby so you can refer to it easily.

This message is brought to you by the County of San Luis Obispo Office of Emergency Services and PG&E.

- A gun can be used for self-defense.

Guns don't kill people. People kill people.

There should be some kind of people could you give for owning a gun?

What if my attacker has a baseball bat or a good-sized brick. I don't know of anyone, no matter how massive they are, who would be able to pursue someone after having a few well-placed swings land on them.

What if my attacker has a car, and says you? Then you are truly in deep trouble, say I, but it is not in the least bit likely that fencing yourself with a gun as well will provide any sort of defense.

The construction of firearms is such that they are inherently offensive. I defy anyone to show me any gun that throws up some sort of defensive screen that will keep the bearer from being shot and if you know of one, don't waste time showing it to me — hand for the Pentagon, they're looking for new job opportunities lately.

And if you have armed yourself offensively against an attacker, whose reasonable, what possible reason could you give for being a gun? An attempt was made earlier in the week to advance the idea that Constitutional rights were being violated at Cal Poly by dint of the fact weapons are not allowed on campus.

That claim may or may not be valid; the extent of jurisdiction by state authorities over "private" housing (student dorm-rooms, bathrooms, students own private property) on campuses such as Cal Poly has always been a blurry line at best. However, several reasons were also given as blanket justifications for the possession of guns by the general public, which to my mind were full of more holes than a paper target at a turkey-shoot. To let these go unaddressed is an insult to those who read Monday's paper.

- A gun can be used for hunting.

Hunting what? Indians? There are very few free-ranging bison or deer left, and to pursue any other animal when prepackaged cow parts (I'll admit to being "liberal" but I am definite ly not vegetarian) are readily available seems to me kind of gullies.

I know my way around a rifle well enough to shoot myself in the foot, and personally, I think there's very little challenge in going out and blasting away at an animal who has no means of escape. I won't even go into the ludicrous practice of hunting a person — an assault rifle or a hand-gun.

You need "real" satisfaction from the realization that a certain number ofligators with a knife or same kind of defensive screen that will keep the bearer from being shot and if you know of one, don't waste time showing it to me — hand for the Pentagon, they're looking for new job opportunities lately.

Target practice.

This is too much. Again, where's the challenge? I should think you'd have to be really bored to go out and blast away at a target that does nothing other than catch the slugs you throw its way. Why not take up spear fishing or baseball?

And why don't they check out guns at the shooting range? It's done with bowling shoes why not?..

"Defense." (Mustang Daily, Nov. 9) come across as arrogant and sniveling.

"It seems to me, you don't know who Alexander Hamilton, James Madison and John Adams are."

Matthew Stanley's gripes about gun control at Cal Poly (Mustang Daily, Nov. 9) come across as arrogant and sniveling. Your arrogance, Mr. Stanley, shows up in your condescending assumption that those of us with a public school education don't know who Alexander Hamilton, James Madison and John Adams are.

My public school background helped me earn a B on the Advanced Placement U.S. History Exam. Who are you to assume that I don't know my history?

Simply because you do not agree with the man does not give you the right to arm bears.

The right to arm bears is prevalent in our society today. If I tell someone about Jesus' death on the cross and his atonement for our sins, it is because I care about them, and it is not because I am a religious zealot or a psycho.

As for the author of the article, I think he knows enough about the existence of God and who he is. I can see that he has a resentment against Jesus and not just against the people who saw a young black girl die in tim ate love-affair with bullet. I think there's very little challenge in going out and blasting away at an animal who has no means of escape. I won't even go into the ludicrous practice of hunting a person — an assault rifle or a hand-gun.

People with guns kill more people. They are more than willing to sell their arms.

America has had a long and interesting history with firearms, the passion which has been the main ingredient of the Constitution (which, right enough at the time, guaranteed the right to bear them). Put any daily metropolitan publication and you can plainly see evidence of the growing number of proud small-arm owners throughout the United States who are more than willing to show off the lethal accuracy of an Uzi or assault rifle.

Wake up, people. The necessity of the public bearing arms, the militia, what possible reason could you give for owning a gun? An attempt was made earlier in the week to advance the idea that Constitutional rights were being violated at Cal Poly by dint of the fact weapons are not allowed on campus.

That claim may or may not be valid; the extent of jurisdiction by state authorities over "private" housing (student dorm-rooms, bathrooms, students own private property) on campuses such as Cal Poly has always been a blurry line at best. However, several reasons were also given as blanket justifications for the possession of guns by the general public, which to my mind were full of more holes than a paper target at a turkey-shoot. To let these go unaddressed is an insult to those who read Monday's paper.

I don't appreciate the Nov. 10 commentary by Peter Hartlaub. I find it quite disturbing. I don't see any humor in making fun of people who are afraid and, if I may say, frightened, and it cost God a great sacrifice.

I'm sorry if you feel like you've been assaulted by over-bearing, nasty Jesus-people. It's just too bad you're not the God we serve and the salvation He provides through grace and mercy (not through saying prayers and eating water).
The Rocky Horror Picture Show returns to Poly

By Jackie Jones

Big Purple Onion Productions provides a survival kit that guarantees the owner will live through the Friday the 13th showing of The Rocky Horror Picture Show at Chumash Auditorium.

"We had no objectives in mind," said Tracey Thomas, director of The Rocky Horror Picture Show. "It's just a cool thing.

Thomas said last spring quarter, she went to ASI Special Events to see if it could be done again. For the past six months Special Events and the cast, Big Purple Onion, have been working on the project.

According to Duane Kakazu, chairman of ASI Special Events, "The Rocky Horror Picture Show is probably the oddest, most off-the-wall cult film ever made."

'This kinky rock 'n roll, science fiction, horror satire is everybody's favorite midnight show," he added.

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show is about a couple who stumble into a castle inhabited by weirdos from the planet Transylvania including Dr. Frank 'n' Furter, a transvestite Frankenstein in rhinestone heels. The show also involves live actors performing on stage with the movie.

Kakazu describes the show as "a marvelous musical spoof that urges you to, 'Give yourself over to total pleasure.'"

Kakazu added that he is the 'sexually perverted man with all the stress. Kakazu said the fun and exciting stuff has been left up to the cast.

In order to encourage participation, the cast will provide a survival kit including toilet paper, hand, rice and party favors for $1.

Thomas said she wants the audience to get excited, be involved and have fun. She said she wants them to sing along if they know the songs. If the audience knows the parts, they can act them out, she added.

Thomas said there are no props or stage for the production. "We use the floor underneath the stage and we use air for props," she said.

Cotton can be heard on some of 'Muddy's best Chess cuts," according to the release, including "I Got My Mojo Working.," "Nineteen Years Old," and "Walking Through the Park," to name a few.

After leaving Water's band in 1966, Cotton is said to have been "moved with ease throughout popular music."

He influenced artists such as Stevie Miller and B.B. King and even toured a couple of times with Janis Joplin.

Cotton has three Grammy nominations under his belt, in both Best Contemporary Blues and Best Traditional Blues categories. Also, Cotton has received a W.C. Handy Award for Best Instrumentalist/Horn.

Cotton's star doesn't seem to have dimmed with the passing of time, either. The Blues Society recommends Cotton's latest release, "Mighty Mississippi," as a "must for any fan of great music."

It has equally high recommendations for Cotton's live performances. The Society says the live shows build a monument of sorts, according to the Blues Society. "We'll be with you for a mighty long time.

Tickets for the show will go on sale, $10 and $15 p.m. respectively. They will be $13 with a blazer and $15 for general public.

Thomas said Rocky Horror is produced just because the show is so 'magnificent and exciting stuff has been left up to the cast.

"There is no real way to improve. You just get crazy, and have fun," she said.

Thomas stressed that, "We want the audience to enjoy themselves. If they don't enjoy themselves, then we can't enjoy performing."

"But we are serious," she added. "If someone throws tomatoes, oranges, or squirts water, they will stop the movie, shine magma lights on them, embarrass them and just kick them out."

Thomas said they will check bags at the door.

Thomas said the Big Purple Onion Production cast was gathered by word of mouth.

"I put the word out and anyone who wanted to join could join," Thomas said. "The main characters came from the cast, while the live show brought in other actors performing on stage with the movie."

Cotton's latest release, "Mighty Mississippi," is said to have cast members from as far away as Berkeley, Santa Cruz and Lodi.

"We want the audience to enjoy themselves, then we can't enjoy performing."

"'The Rocky Horror Picture Show' will be held at Chumash Auditorium tonight at 9 p.m. and midnight. Tickets are $4 for students and $5 for the public.

Blues veteran to blow the reed in San Luis Obispo

By Carissa Wreden
Staff Writer

Lawrence Hoffman in "Living Blues" described him as "one of the few authentic bluesmen still working full time and one of the greatest harp players alive."

This Saturday, the San Luis Obispo Blues Society will bring James Cotton and his traditional blues harmony to the Veterans Memorial Building in San Luis Obispo for an 8:00 show.

According to press material, the first influence on Cotton's career may have been his mother, who played harmonica. Cotton began "to blow the reed" at the age of five.

As a youngster, Cotton listened to lunchtime blues broadcasts featuring Sonny Boy Williamson.

Cotton's start at Sun Records, Cotton was forced to hang out with talent scout Lawrence Hoffman in 1960, in Memphis, Arkansas, producer, a hit that, according to the release, in 1963.

In 1955, Muddy Waters traveled through Memphis in need of a harmonica player. Waters was pointed toward Cotton, marking the start of Cotton's 12 years with the band.

Cotton also spent some time in his teens. Cotton had his first influence on Cotton's 12 years with the band.

Cotton's stay at Sun Records was a good one for the blues.

They know the songs. If the audience knows the parts, they can act them out, she added.

Why stop at 10? Because, it's a number that will live in infamy with the Giants, 10, as in Nov. 10, 1989. The day National League owners said no to St. Pete.

Now we wait for Giants owner Bob Lurie to accept the $100 million offer made by San Francisco investors.

And before the Giants future is settled, the courts must sift through the lawsuits St. Petersburg has filed because it failed to get a team.

But, I've got a feeling the Giants will stay. And when I get that feeling, I'm always right.

The same feeling I felt it when I attended my first Giants game. I was 10-year-old, sitting in the bleachers at The Stick when Mike Ivie stepped up to the plate for the Giants. With the game wearing into the 16th inning and my life for baseball being impatient, I knew Ivie would do something good. He proceeded to hit a home run, putting into finishing the game.

The same feeling that came up when I was watching Joe Montana hike the ball on the first play of the game-winning drive in the 1989 Super Bowl.

The same feeling I got Tuesday when I tuned into ESPN's Sports Center. After sitting through a never-ending feature on Cy Young Award-winner Donnie Eckersly, the news finally came: the Giants weren't moving to Florida.

Ryan said the goal is for the owners, jobs and loans to provide more educational assistance and, simultaneously ensure those who need financial aid get it.

“Loan programs have been affected the most,” she said. “Anyone can get a loan now. The income ceiling has been removed. Not good with other offers; one coupon per pizza. expires 11/30/92.

"We will still serve people who just walk into the office," she said, "but it will be a big advantage to use the workshops because all the new regulations are going to slow things down considerably.

Ryan said she expects her office to be overworked and understaffed while everyone gets used to the new program. She said the reassurances touches nearly every portion of the financial aid process.

Mustangs have outside chance at title

By Cam Inman

John Charles is one player Cal Poly's football team has been dreaming to meet this season. Charles, Portland State's senior quarterback, threw for an NCAA record 592 yards and tossed eight touchdowns in last year's 55-35 Portland win over the Mustangs.

But fret not Cal Poly. Charles' record-setting arm will be on the sideline Saturday when the Mustangs play at Portland in a Western Football Conference finale.

If Charles, who broke his wrist in last week's Viking win over Cal State Northridge, was ranked first in NCAA Division II in total offense.

With Charles out, Cal Poly betters its chance at finishing in a five-way tie for the WFC crown.

A Mustang win combined with a Northridge victory over Cal State Sacramento would give a piece of the WFC title to all five teams in the conference.

Cal Poly coach Lyle Setencich said he didn't think Charles' absence would have much impact on Saturday's game.

"We played up there three or four years ago, knocked their starting quarterback out, knocked his back-up out and they still something like 17-3," Setencich added.

Cal Poly, which climbed back into the WFC race with a 17-14 win last week, has switched to a more run-oriented defense.

Brian Fitz leads Cal Poly rushers as he averages 5.1 yards per carry (138 rushes, 696 yards).

Cal Poly's women's volleyball team lost a costly one slip by Tuesday.

Mustang head coach Craig Cummings watched his team fall to Cal State Sacramento 21-0 on Saturday night's 7 p.m. home match against the Matadors.

Poly splashes into new year

Cal Poly's swim teams opened their seasons Wednesday in a three-team meet at Fresno State.

Cal Poly's men fell to the Bulldogs 58-52 and went on to lose to Alaska-Anchorage 51-44. The Mustang women lost to Fresno State 126-79.

Jeremy Braasen highlighted the Mustangs' individual performances. He won the 50 and 100 free in both meets and sawed on Cal Poly's winning 400 medley relay team against Alaska-Anchorage.
