Female students persevere in face of sexist comments

THE GENDER GAP
Today: Female students at Poly say they still face stereotypes as they enter male-dominated fields.
Tuesday: Women faculty members are still largely outnumbered at Poly.
Wednesday: One Cal Poly administrator’s story — she beat two sets of odds in her career.

The yearly event, a four-day celebration which showcased Cal Poly’s diversity, was canceled by President Warren Baker in 1990 after the May celebration evolved into two nights of drunken clashes between police and youths. Poly Royal had been the primary fund-raiser for most of the university’s clubs.

Now, Baker says reviving Poly Royal is up to both the university as well as San Luis Obispo. "The administration) would consider this if we were able to get some kind of joint venture with the community," he said at a recent meeting with Mustang Daily staff.

Student Biddle, 23, and David Vida, 20, were allegedly stabbed during a street fight with Jesus Gonzales, 18. Police found the victims in the street at 10:42 p.m.

Gonzales was being held in San Luis Obispo County Jail Sunday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. No bail had been posted.

According to police, Gonzales initiated a shoving match with Biddle. When the argument became physical, Gonzales slashed Biddle with a dagger, leaving him with a foot-long gash in his side, police said.

BIDENT said he and Vida were treated and released from Sierra Vista Regional Medi­cal Center.

Vida said Sunday afternoon he was "fine," and declined further comment.

"The key is to find a way to leave all the nice things and get rid of the bad aspects," All President Kristen Burn­n at said steps need to be taken to regain the credibility that Poly Royal once possessed.

"In my first two weeks of of­fice I pushed really hard to get Poly Royal back," Burnett said. "The administration said, 'No.' So I'm not going to spend the whole year banging my head against the door."

First lady carving out new role

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Never mind the flap over her hat or the heat over her headband or the fuss over her figure.

Her staff carries far more clout than did Barbara Bush's and her expected areas of influence include health care reform, one of the most complex and pressing issues on President Clinton's agenda.

Hillary Rodham Clinton is promising an activist role akin to that she played as Arkansas first lady, where she was deeply involved in education reform, children's issues and other policy matters.

Author Carl Sferrazza Anthony, who has written extensively about presidential wives, said many women have served as advisers to their president-husbands but there are two big differences with Mrs. Clinton:

She arrives with decades of experience in her own right, as a lawyer and advocate for children and families. Also, she's not hiding her likely influence.

"I don't think the military is the place to try a social experiment," the Indiana Republican said. But two Indiana congressmen were split over the proposal.

Sen. Dan Coats says he'll organize a coalition of senators opposed to President Clinton's plan to lift the military's ban on homosexuals because such a move could jeopardize military morale.

Coats, a member of the Armed Services Committee, said he was shocked by Clinton's plan and hopes to find others in the Senate who will oppose it.

"I said, 'Oh yes you can! It's cedled progressing — modernization,'" Smith said.

"Women work harder to prove themselves and they end up being bigger assets to the company," she said. "But there were days I'd get up and put on the boots and jeans and think, 'What am I doing? Do I really belong here?'"

"And I'd just think, 'Hey, I have enough people telling me this. I don't need to tell it to myself,'" she said. "That's what keeps me going."
My bike was stolen last year. Like many other unfortunate victims, I had stupidly assumed that a 1 1/4 hardened steel chain through the frame, wheels, and bike rack would be enough to deter any potential intruders. So much for that theory. I'm only slightly consoled by the fact that I had removed the seat and seat post before leaving the bike (which, by the way, was in plain sight in front of a whole row of apartment windows at the 61 Broad Street housing complex). I hope you had a comfortable ride home, you crook.

I called the cops, of course. I went through all the "proper channels." I'm 21 - but I need an ID to buy liquor. I'm 21 - but I need an ID to vote when I'm 25; I can drink when I'm 18; I can vote when I'm 21. I was robbed again on Jan. 1. It was gone so fast I didn't even have a chance to get it dirty.

I was robbed again on Jan. 1. This time there were no police officers watching me when I went through the door, so I can't even play detective on this one.

In January, Congress stole my education.

The sweeping strike of the pen, the Legislation enacted the Higher Education Financial Aid Act, which in essence limits financial aid for college students to those whose parents can afford it. The Act mandates that for the purposes of financial aid, citizens under the age of 24 are considered financially dependent on their parents, regardless of their previous status. For me, that means being financially dependent on parents who couldn't afford to put me through college in the first place. I became independent so that I could receive aid. Like many middle-class couples, my parents combined income might reach about $70,000 in a good year - of course, those same middle-class couples pay the bulk of taxes in these United States, meaning they might actually be left with around $50,000 to support not only themselves but also my brother who is also going to college.

And who is Congress to tell me I'm financially dependent? I can vote when I'm 18; I can drink when I'm 21 - but I need an allowance until I'm 24?

In January, Congress stole my education.

Gang members could see friends’ autopsies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gang members would watch the autopsies of slain comrades in a proposed county program designed to tarnish the glamour of gang life.

Supporters contend the program, tentatively scheduled to begin next month, would shock youngsters into giving up gang affiliation.

Gang violence took more than 800 lives in 1992.

"It is not a very glamorous or pleasant process," said Rob Garrott, who heads the county's Gang Diversion Task Force.

"You wouldn't want it to happen to your friends, and you certainly wouldn't want it to happen to yourself. It is very graphic."

Critics argue that the program will make gang members more callous to the effects of violence.

Los Angeles police Detective Bill Humphry, who leads an anti-gang unit in the San Fernando Valley, called autopsy visits "a terrible idea."

The Board of Supervisors still must give the program a final vote of approval. But the supervisors already have appropriated $50,000 for the first year, and approval is considered likely.

The program is based loosely on Scared Straight, a 1970s program in which teen-agers were shown the worst of prison life by inmates of New Jersey's Raheyun State Prison.

Some opponents, including Humphry, suggested that gang members instead be shown a lifesaving operation or be required to work with people paralyzed by gang gunfire.

Some gang members say the program would work, but only on young children who haven't already joined a gang.

One gang member, who identified himself only by his moniker, "Evil," said children should be brought into the program before the age of 10.

"Thirteen years old and they've already watched their brothers and cousins, and they're excited — they like the power, the girls, the glamour."

Cal Poly's Wendy Bruse, center, beats two Chapman players to a loose ball in Saturday night's 88-49 win.

Poly stays unbeaten in CCAA

By Brad Hamilton
Senior Staff Writer

By way of their own doing and some help from two other teams, Cal Poly sits in first-place in the California Collegiate Athletic Association women's basketball race.

Cal Poly was one of three CCAA teams to remain unbeaten after Saturday's games as the Mustangs posted an 88-49 win at home over Chapman.

By winning and improving its record to 3-0, Cal Poly sits atop the CCAA as both Cal Poly Pomona and Cal State Dominguez Hills lost Saturday.

Pomona, the ninth-ranked team in NCAA Division II, fell to 2-1 with a 60-53 loss at UC Riverside. Dominguez Hills also dropped to 2-1 with its 70-64 defeat to Cal State San Bernardino.

Cal Poly (6-7 overall) will trade baskets with Pomona (14-2) on Thursday in Mott Gym at 7:30 p.m.

Poly overcomes winds, Broncos

Despite horrible conditions caused by gusty winds, Cal Poly earned a 6-0 home victory over Santa Clara University in women's tennis Sunday.

"The (wind) conditions were the worst I've ever seen in a college tennis match," said Cal Poly coach Chris Eppright.

The Mustangs won all six singles matches as no doubles matches were contested.

Straight set winners for Cal Poly included Julie Ciccaro (6-3, 6-4), Sherr Holmes (6-1, 6-0), Michelle Berkowitz (6-3, 6-1), Alissa Bailey (6-3, 6-4) and Emily Schub (6-7, 6-0).

Cal Poly won its season opener Friday when Cal Lutheran forfeited.

The Mustangs host Westminster on Thursday.

Swimmers split meet

Cal Poly swimmers were washed away in Cal State Bakersfield's wake before getting revenge by soaking Pomona Pittzer at Cal State Bakersfield on Saturday.

Bakersfield, which has won the last seven NCAA Division II men's swimming titles, beat Cal Poly's men 163-57. Jeff Simpson took first-place in the 200 breaststroke to give Cal Poly's men their lone victory.

Prior to the meet, Cal Poly turned around to defeat Pomona Pittzer 134-88. The Mustangs were led by Sean Smith, who recorded a pair of firsts in the 1000 free and 500 free.

Despite win, Pomona Pittzer fell 145-85 against Bakersfield despite wins from Anne Oberg in the 200 free, Steph Keller in the 200 individual medley and Jen Fricker in the 200 breast.

Cal Poly defeated Pomona Pittzer 150-44 as Oberg, Jody Campbell and Maria Slicht each won two events.

Cal Poly next hosts UC Davis on Friday at 3 p.m.

CCAA opponents beat up on Poly

Mustangs blown out twice on road

By Cam Iszman
Sports Editor

What a long, miserable trip it was.

Cal Poly's conference record dived to 1-5 after an 18-point loss Friday at Cal Poly Pomona and a 23-point defeat to Cal State Los Angeles on Saturday.

On Saturday night, the Mustangs could not defend Los Angeles' 6-foot-8 Anthony McGee, who scored 25 points in the teams' first meeting.

Cal Poly's inferior inside game also factored into the Mustangs' 77-59 loss to Pomona on Friday.

The two blowouts illustrate Cal Poly's inability to control the paint as the center position remains undefined in the Mustangs' lineup.

"We are outmanned at this point, pretty severely," said Cal Poly head coach Steve Beason.

Such was the case Saturday where the taller Golden Eagles used the talents of McGee, the California Collegiate Athletic Association's leading scorer.

McGee made 10 of 17 field goal attempts and was 3 for 4 from the free throw line to finish among six Los Angeles players in double figures.

Cal Poly (7-11 overall) was held to 51 points as Pomona (4-2, 12-4) through the opening half and trailed only 55-50 with 12:33 remaining in the game.

While Los Angeles was winning the game in the paint, Cal Poly tried relying on its most lethal weapon: the three-pointer.

The Mustangs, however, sunk only 4 of 19 three-point attempts in the second half, a key stat Beason said contributed to the defeat.

"We were trying to get back in it all at once," Beason said of the three-pointers. "That's both youth, inexperience and poor decision making."

The three-point attempt usually is the mainstay for the Mustangs. But on a weekend like this, the three would not fall.

"Woolill did not to be denied.

Falrill was selected to the All-Conference with a 5-2 record and a 6-4 decision over BYU's Scott Roll.

Also winning for the Mustangs was Pat Morrissey and Eric Schwartz. Morrissey posted a 2-1 win in the 142-pound class while Schwartz won 5-6 at 177-pounds.

Jake Gaeir lost a close 3-2 decision and Mike Contreras grappled to a 5-5 tie against the Cougars.

Against Boise State, Cal Poly received wins from only Danny, Gazzl and Woodill.

Despite losing his opponent 24-8, Gazzl earned a 2-1 victory and Woodill capped the meet with a victory over Idaho's Mike Camarillo.

The Mustang's next match is Wednesday at 7 p.m. against Bucknell University at Mott Gym.
