Baker: Charter fears premature

Unions concerned concept may threaten wages, benefits

By Len Arends
Cal Poly President Cheney Baker said Tuesday that en-campus labor organizations worried over the effects of the evolving charter university concept are prematurely alarmed.

"(We) still have to develop the principle and the process (for switching to charter university status)," Baker said.

A charter university would operate under its own set of rules — potentially independently from state laws currently applicable to all CSU campuses.

What that means, according to Wendy Raymond, chairwoman of the Cal Poly labor council — is the only laws a charter school would be obligated to follow are those of California's constitution and its own charter.

Organizations representing Cal Poly faculty and staff said they are concerned about the effect a proposed shift to charter university status might have on union contracts.

A July 14 memorandum from the Cal Poly Labor Council (CPLC) to Baker said the campus' state employee and faculty unions were concerned with a March 3 administration memo from Howard West, executive assistant to the president.

That memo listed state laws Cal Poly, as a charter university, may need to be exempted from "in order to operate more efficiently and effectively."

The proposed charter university concept was a compromise developed by the Cal Poly Faculty Association, according to Baker.

"This is a classic case of an administration trying to consolidate power," said Jim Conaway, president of the Cal Poly chapter of the California Faculty Association.

Baker said the administration memo which aroused the employee organizations' concerns see CHARTER, page 3.

Poly opens program to world's dairy industry

Professors teach foreign students latest technology

By Nicole Veteto

Students from countries around the world have come to California this summer to learn some helpful hints from the leading edge of nutrition and genetics, said Cal Poly professors. He said they are most lacking practical experience with dairy technology at this level, and the students can stay for whichever topics or weeks they choose.

The courses are similar to the ones offered to Cal Poly students in dairy science majors, but are less theory-oriented.

Heider Gonzales, who manages his four-generation, family dairy on Tercera Island, between the Azores and Madeira, is enrolled in these courses to learn new technologies.

"I enrolled in these courses to learn new technology related to dairy production, and the students can stay for whichever topics or weeks they choose," Gonzales said. "I came over here because no education opportunities like this program exist on my island."

Jordi Rafi, from Gerona, Spain, said his country doesn't offer a program like this either.

"I f e e l s t r u c t u r e wants to find out about dairy technology at this level, they must attend a program like the one at Cal Poly," Rafi said.

With the help of two veterinarians, the five-week program is taught by dairy science faculty.

Each of the five weeks is spent exploring different topics of dairy production, and the students can stay for whichever topics or weeks they choose.

The courses are similar to the ones offered to Cal Poly students in dairy science majors, but are less theory-oriented.

Most of the international students have worked in the dairy industry and understand the theories, said Les Ferreira, program director and dairy science professor. He said they are most lacking practical experience with new technologies.

The first week, which started July 12, centered on dairy cow nutrition. The topic seemed to be one of the major interests of most of the students who work for dairies in their own countries.

Poly picks six inductees for Hall of Fame

By Joy Nieman

The glass case that holds plaques of those six individuals who will be inducted into the 1993 Athletic Hall of Fame on Friday evening is empty.

Cal Poly athletics officials announced last Wednesday the names of six individuals who will be inducted into the 1993 Athletic Hall of Fame this October.

Don Morris, chairman of the nine-member Hall of Fame selection committee, said this year's inductees will join 35 previously honored Hall of Fame members, who also include former major league pitcher Mike Krukow and former U.S. Olympic Team swimming coach Pete Cutino.

The only great names in the history of the university have been inducted in the past or will be in the future," Morris said.

He said Hall of Fame nominees must have been out of school for five years and done something exceptional in athletics, through participation or coaching. This year's inductees range from an Olympian to a Super Bowl player.

The inductees are as follows:

- Mohinder Gill was a triple jumper during his Cal Poly track career from 1968-71, winning three Division II titles and three Division I championships. He set a standing Cal Poly record at the 1971 West Coast Relays with a jump of 55-11/4", and completed in the 1972 Olympics for his homeland, India.
- Norm Games, a former wrestler and coach, placed third and fourth at the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul.

Fire station closure stresses Public Safety

Funds needed to boost campus patrols

By Heather Lynch

One month after the elimination of the campus fire station, Public Safety is finding itself struggling to shoulder new responsibilities as Cal Poly's sole emergency services department.

Joe Risser, director of Public Safety, said campus police have had to take on a difficult role following the fire station's closure.

"Public Safety now has primary responsibility for emergency calls," Risser said.

"Right now we cannot order a police officer on duty at a time.

"We're hoping to find funding to hire more patrol officers," he said. "Hopefully it will happen in the near future, because it's definitely something we need."

Public Safety hopes to expand its offices and interviewing rooms by converting the old fire station in September, Risser said.

Cal Poly fire trucks and equipment will be sold to the highest bidder, which may help pay for the renovation, he said.

The closure of Cal Poly Fire has resulted in dozens of changes, as well.

Of the three full-time Cal Poly firefighters on duty at the time of the station's demise, two have been laid off and the third will continue in the fall as a liaison to the San Luis Obispo Fire Department, which has been contracted by Cal Poly to provide fire protection services to the campus.

Move to Division I competition attracts quality athletic recruits

Cal Poly Wrestling, track and field teams sign new talent

By Nicole Veteto
Staff Writer

Cal Poly athletic's future move to Division I competition, scheduled for the 1994-95 season, has helped Cal Poly coaches snag more higher-quality recruits, as shown by the new batch of talent signed recently by Cal Poly's track and field and wrestling teams.

Since the switch to Division I began two years ago, university coaches have found an increase in the quality and quantity of recruits, said Eric McDowell, Cal Poly's sports information director.

"We not only have the school, the area and the academics to offer to the athletes," McDowell said, "we also have the fact that we are now Division I."

McDowell said Cal Poly has received letters of intent from eight new wrestlers, each holding an impressive list of athletic achievements.

The new Mustang matmen include Tyson Rondoff, whose wrestling resume features a 117-7-1 record with 89 pins for his Shadow Mountain High School in Phoenix, Ariz. He was a three-time state champion in the 105-lb. weight class and an All-American honors. McCool competed for the Central Arizona Interscholastic Federation (CIF) Most Valuable Wrestler award in 1993.

The other new Mustang wrestlers include Bobby Bal-lancy, Tim Cano and Clark Conover.

In the past few years, the number of new athletes on the track and field and cross country teams averaged two to three per year. This year, there are 30 new recruits, said Brooks Johnson, Cal Poly's track and field director.

"We have seen a new quality of athletes, thanks to the change to Division I," Johnson said. "Division I attracts more athletes and better student-athletes."

Some of the outstanding new recruits include Melanie Hand, Robert Baldwin and Will Bowser.

Baldwin ran middle distance and cross country for Fallbrook High School in Fallbrook, Calif. During her high school career she ranked in the top 15 in the nation in the 800-meters. She also was a CIF finalist in cross country.

Baldwin finished third in state in the pole vault, and he captured a league championship for Capital High School in Olympia, Wash.

Bower earned the Central Coast Conference Championship for Hartnell Junior College in the steeplechase.

Although the same Cal Poly sports programs, such as wrestling, already compete at the Division I level, most teams will have one year of Division II experience before encountering a higher-caliber Division I program.

Johnson said she is relieved her first year will be spent competing mostly in Division II.

"I'm glad for the slow change to Division I," she said. "It will make it easier to adjust to the new situation."

Joe Risser, director of Public Safety, said the department will need funding to provide response services once handled by Cal Poly Fire.

Although the loss of the campus fire department has more detrimental to safety, there are benefits to having the city cover the campus' fire protection needs, Risser said.

"The San Luis Obispo Fire Department) has more capabilities in the way of equipment," he said.

The city fire department will not use any of the campus equipment or facilities, according to San Luis Obispo Fire Chief Bob Neumann.

Neumann said he will not need to hire any additional employees, either, to handle the additional responsibility.

The city fire department has taken an active role to familiarize its staff with the campus.

"We've broken the campus down into sections, and we're touring everywhere, concentrating on the high-risk areas," Neumann said.

These include high-traffic, "life-safety" areas, such as the dorms and hazardous material storage areas.

"Life-safety" areas, such as the dorms and hazardous material storage areas.

"We not only have the school, the area and the academics to offer to the athletes, we also have the fact that we are now Division I."
The SLO Birds, a group of vacationing senior citizens living in Mustang Village, have asked to be flown home to Arizona early this summer.

"The management says the complex is overbooked and they want the SLO Birds to leave," said Mina Cuker, a SLO Bird member who has spent each of the last four summers in the San Luis Obispo housing complex.

"We feel that management is using high-handed tactics and trying to force us to leave by intimidating us," Cuker said. "They have told us that we have to leave."

In a memo written to residents on July 26, Robert Grant, marketing director of Capstone Real Estate Services, said it was necessary to end the summer program on Sept. 15 because Capstone oversees the management of Mustang Village.

"We realize that many residents have arranged space until Sept. 12, but to satisfy the space requirement needed for the Cal Poly student housing, circum­stances necessitate early move-outs on all units occupied by the SLO Bird program," Grant said in the memo.

Mustang Village wants to have the apartments cleaned and repaired for students moving in for Week of Welcome, Grant said.

"Students are the nuts and bolts of the property," Grant said. "While the SLO Birds are very important to us, it is our standard policy to fulfill the needs of students first."

"We don't enjoy trying to solicit 113 residents to leave early," Grant said. "It isn't our intent to kick anyone out. No one will be pushed onto the streets."

Mustang Village is allowing those residents who cannot leave early to stay in their apartments, Grant said. The complex is reimbursing remaining rent money to anyone who vacates between Sept. 1 and Sept. 15.

Despite management's assurances, Cuker said the news comes as a shock to many SLO Birds.

"People got upset and went to bed upset," Cuker said. "A lot of the elderly can't handle this kind of stress and worry." Grant said there are some "grum­bled" vacationers who are upset about being asked to volunteer to leave, but he said most people are very patient and understanding to the needs of the college students.

"It's all a complete misunderstanding," said a SLO Bird who did not wish to be identified. "The office staff is young, and our worlds just didn't meet."

"They originally tried to handle it like a board meeting — bang, bang, bang," she said. "Now they have realized that it can't be handled that way and they are being nicer."

Mustang Village was foreclosed last April due to mismanagement, Grant said. Citimide, a subsidiary bank of Citicorp, has taken over over the complex and hired Capstone to manage the property.

The new management plans to upgrade the property to encourage an academic environment, Grant said.

"The seniors feel that the reputation of this complex was so bad and funds were so low, that the management brought us in to save the day," Cuker said.

Mustang Village is working to restructure the SLO Bird program so that conflicts do not occur next summer, Grant said. The new management company also aims to have more students living in the complex during the summer quarter.

Death. The very mention of the grandparent's death sent chills down many people's spines. Death strikes us as foreboding, dark and scary. We all wish sometimes that it would melt away and disappear amid the happiness and struggles of life. And for a time, it did. But then, it returns from nowhere and reasserts itself with a vengeance in our lives. Call it a reality check. A MAJOR reality check: Death is constant, just as foreboding, dark and scary. A reality check: Death is constant, just as foreboding, dark and scary.

I learned another lesson, however, only a few weeks ago when a friend of mine was killed in a car accident. This friend was even younger than I am. I showed me that death is also unexpected. One moment she was here and the next she was gone. This is reality.

We had been in the same WOW group. Though we were among the closest of friends, I still feel a bit of us in me. I remember her face, always with a smile on her face. Some mutual friends from WOW went to her funeral. I wish I could have, but I didn't find out until a month after the accident. Even then, it was a shock. I had wondered when death would claim a friend of mine. Now it has happened. I think about the people I have known who have died, and I am left thinking about the last time I saw them. What did I say? A part of me wishes that I could have treated all of them better in some way before their passing. But through all this gloom and sadness, there is an important fact or two. My grandparents and my friend may be gone, but they are in a better place because they are no longer with us. And we get our first taste of death. And we don't like it. Not at all.

Now we are in college. Our world has grown vastly, and our recognition of death has grown with it. Certainly, we have seen death firsthand. Death didn't intrude upon my life until age eighteen, when my grandfather died. He lived for the last few years of his life, walking along with arthritis. One day, he was home alone, and he needed help. I was upstairs, doing my homework. I went down and helped him. He was too old to have to call for help. He was young.

Italian guitarist returns to coast to perform classical folk music

By Suzanne Hook

Charm and eloquence will visit the Central Coast in the form of a steel-string guitarist named Peppino D’Agostino. The San Luis Obispo Folk Music Society (SLOFKOS) will host guitarist/singer D’Agostino at the Coastline Bookstore Chapel in Morro Bay on Aug. 6 and Big Music in San Luis Obispo on Aug. 9.

The two small performances mark the guitarist’s eighth visit to the Central Coast.

“San Luis Obispo is a great place to play,” D’Agostino said. “I like the energy of the audience, and the young population is very responsive to my music.”

“I make sure I come to San Luis Obispo once a year,” he said.

SLOFKOS coordinator Jody Ramalnd schedules one group per month to play ethnic, blues, bluegrass and traditional folk music at various venues around the county.

“Folk musicians are trying to make a living,” Ramalnd said. “We enjoy promoting them. And, the people on the Central Coast enjoy listening to musicians in an intimate setting.”

D’Agostino appreciates playing in the small facilities around San Luis Obispo County.

“When I play in the Central Coast, I don’t have to use amplification, so people can hear the real wood sound (of the guitar),” he said.

“One of the best things about having a CD is being able to design it, and that’s what we did,” Agha said.

“The director of the Photo Option Gallery, Cathy Vandenber, had an idea of what she wanted the CD to look like, and she had the CD designed and said it was very helpful to have my photos in the library.”

“KCPR plays a variety of music people can’t hear anywhere else, and the reconstructed guitar represents that different view of music,” she said.

Stegall agreed with the symbolism of the guitar and said it was used as a metaphor for alternative music.

“We put the guitar back together on an abstract, cubist style,” Agha said.

Stegall explained cubism as showing a series of viewpoints of an object combined together on one picture plane, simultaneously producing a one-dimensional image.

“Whether or not her next project is one-dimensional, Agha said she wants to continue designing covers for small music labels after she graduates in December.

“I’d rather work for a smaller label because I feel they are more interested in the music, whereas large labels are more concerned about making money,” she said.

“I want to work with musicians whom I respect, and with music I enjoy,” Agha said.
GUITARIST

"SLOFOKIS brings wonderful music to this country," Thomas said. "T'Agostino is considered one of the best guitarists in the country, if not the world," she said. "Plus, (he's) creezy with charm and his performances always well worth it," she said.

Big Music owner Bob O'Brien said his correspondence with SLOFOKIS the past few years has earned his store a reputation as a small acoustic venue. Monday's concert will be T'Agostino's third appearance at Big Music.

"SLOFOKIS shows usually bring in about 40 to 50 people to see the performance in our store," O'Brien said. "It's good exposure for the store, plus I get to see a free show."

T'Agostino engages in instrumental, classical folk play but will sometimes sing in his native tongue of Italian.

T'Agostino also tells some good stories, sharing anecdotes and tales about his past, O'Brien said.

T'Agostino's new album comes out mid-August. He'll play new compositions, as well as a few older pieces from his albums, "Acoustic Spirits" and "Sparks."

Tickets are $8 and are available at the Coulee Bookstore in Morro Bay and Big Music.

Intercollegiate Division I Tournament during his wrestling career in the late 1950s. A two-time Most Valuable Player for the Mustangs, Gomes also helped coach the wrestling team to an undefeated season in 1957-58.

Dan Lambert received All-American honors four times during his tennis career from 1971-74 and was a doubles All-American in 1971. Lambert was also a finalist in National Collegiate Athletic Association singles competition from 1973-74 and was a quarterfinalist his freshman season. Lambert's record stands at 10-16 in singles, including an 18-1 record in his senior year.

Ed Jorgensen coached men's basketball from 1966-69 and men's tennis from 1956-76. An instructor in the physical education department for 29 years, Jorgensen joins the Hall of Fame with two of his former players, 1987 inductee Hank Moraski, a former baseball player, and 1993 inductee Lambert.

"I've always felt the Hall of Fame was for the athletes, not the coaches," Jorgensen said. He nominated both Moraski and Lambert for the Hall of Fame.

Mel Kaufman received two Super Bowl rings during his eight-year career with the Washington Redskins. As a Mustard from 1976-1980, Kaufman helped lead Cal Poly to the 1980 NCAA Division II championship.

Eileen Kraemer Vukicevich competed in cross country from 1977-80 and track in 1978 and 1980-82. She said she was flattered to learn of her nomination.

"I'm ready to have a baby at any minute, and it's hard to believe I was in the shape I was then," Vukicevich said.

In 1981, the first year of women's competition in the NCAA, Vukicevich was the first woman to win an NCAA individual title when she won the Division II cross country championship. She capped off her final track season in 1982 with All-American honors and an NCAA Division II title in the women's 1,500 meters.

The inductees will be honored the weekend of Oct. 8 and 9, beginning with a cocktail recep­ tion Friday evening at the Cove Terrace at San Luis Bay Resort.

Formal inductions and speeches by the 1993 members will be held at a Hall of Fame brunch Oct. 9 at an undeter­ mined, on-campus locale.

The new inductees will also be intro­ duced that evening during halftime of the football game be­ tween the Mustangs and San Francisco State.

The six new members will bring to 41 the total of inductees awarded Hall of Fame honor since its inception in 1987.

From page 3 in Panama,” Barrera said. “The program is going to help a lot in management of dairy herds and especially nutrition.”

Ferreira said all the individual countries will benefit in one way or another.

“This program is good advertising for the United States because the students see our new physical technology and take their notes back to their country, leading to possible sales for the United States,” Ferreira said.

“It is also good for Cal Poly — because it can provide contacts for professors.”

Most of the students seem to be impressed at how practical the program training is, and how friendly and helpful people are, Ruff said.

“The courses are practical oriented,” Ruff said. “The university has good facilities, and people are friendly and kind. There are no barriers between the doctors and the students.”

Dairy science professors hope the program will continue, Ferreira said.

“This is a great program,” he said. “It is a lot of fun and the people enrolled are super.”
