PEDALING A POINT

Cyclists hit downtown SLO in show of solidarity

By Cecilia L. Wall
Daily Staff Writer

What was touted as a protest the week before turned out to be a peaceful bike ride through the streets of downtown San Luis Obispo on Friday afternoon.

Friday’s turnout of about 100 cyclists was “a demonstration to show our strength,” event organizer Pat Veesart told the crowd before the ride. “It’s your ride. Be vocal. And don’t run red lights. We should look at this ride as a celebration rather than a protest.”

By the smiles on many of the cyclists’ faces during the ride, it looked as though that goal was accomplished. Riders began in front of Linnea’s Cafe on Garden Street at 5:30 p.m. and proceeded to loop through Mission Park and the downtown area. When they finally arrived on Garden Street they had ridden a little more than two miles.

“The ride was a success,” Veesart said. “I was impressed at the behavior and the whole atmosphere of the ride. Veesart said he hopes the ride will become a tradition for San Luis Obispo cyclists. The gathering was a take-off of a San Francisco event called Critical Mass, a ride which spills the lanes of Market Street the last Friday of every month, Veesart said.

But other participants hoped for more radical action has been taken. At one point during the ride, a cyclist attempted to stop traffic on Mission Park, which is pretty difficult. Police officers told him to get on with the ride and keep it peaceful. The man took off, saying he was going to walk his own two wheels.

Bicycle lanes have become an increasingly controversial subject this year. A vigorous, occasionally emotional debate has flourished after a local man died on Johnson Avenue in May after being thrown from his bicycle. Since then, the

UCLA activists: School faltering on ethnic studies pledges

LOS ANGELES — Students and faculty members who staged a two-week fast last spring at the University of California, Los Angeles, to press UCLA to create a Chicano studies department have developed a sense of frustration and anger with the administration, said Valquina Collazo, a 25-year-old Chicano who was one of nine protesters who refused food for 14 days in May.

“I don’t know what they think — that the hunger strike and protests were just a one-time thing and once we got an agreement we would all go away and forget about it? Well, they better think twice,” Collazo said.

The nine staged the hunger strike to press UCLA to create a Chicano studies department. They ended the strike on June 7 when university administrators agreed to create a center of Chicano studies named after the late farm labor leader Cesar Chavez.

Enrollment slips again

By Mark A. Van Schyven
Daily Morning Editor

Cal Poly enrollment declined 4 percent this fall, leaving the campus with fewer back-to-schoolers for the third consecutive year, according to records officials confirmed last week.

Enrollment figures as of early last week show a peak enrollment of 17,785 in fall 1990. But while fewer students are attending Cal Poly this quarter, it does not necessarily mean classes are easier to get, according to records officials.

“Because of cutbacks in faculty and classes, there is a scrambling going on among students,” said Marlene Carter, associate director for academic records. “We’ve had a tremendous number of add slips.”

While the number of add slips being processed by records has increased this year, Cal Poly administration officials said classes are easier to get than they were just a few years ago. In addition, the decrease in enrollment is part of a long-term plan by the administration to decrease the time it takes to graduate, according to records officials.

Los Padres blaze flares up, advances

Staff and wire reports

SOLVANG — A hot autumn fire which seemed headed for containment at midday flared again late Sunday in hills southeast of San Luis Obispo.

The California Department of Forestry crews from San Luis Obispo County joined U.S. Forest Service crews to battle what by last night had become a 3,000-acre brush fire in the Los Padres National Forest.

The brush fire, fueled by warm temperatures, was partially contained Sunday, but it continued to spread through the area late Sunday.

“Firefighters battled the flames which had blackened 3,000 acres of dry grassland and chaparral by late Sunday night, said Earl Clayton, spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service.

The Forest Service said the fire was about 15 percent contained earlier in the day, but Juanita Frey, a spokeswoman, said firefighters lost ground by Sunday evening.

There were scattered ranches in the rural area, including some barns, equipment sheds and outbuildings, but no homes were threatened, Clayton said.

The area is about 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Study: Even with tap water, think before you drink

WASHINGTON — Federal and state officials are failing to protect millions of Americans who are exposed to contami­nants every time they drink a glass of tap water or take a shower, says a private environmental watchdog group.

Wastewater systems throughout the country routinely violate the federal Safe Drinking Water Act, but penalties are rare, according to "Think Before You Drink," a report released Sunday by the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The American Environmental Protection Agency logged 300,000 state and federal violations in 1991 and 1992, but only about 1 percent resulted in penalties, said Erik Olson, author of the report.

Most of the violations involved failure to regularly test water quality, report contamination, follow proper water treatment methods or notify the public of violations, Olsen said. The violations affected at least 100 million people.

"What we need are strong rules and the tough cop on the beat," Olsen said.

Olsen said most water systems are complying with the environmental rules on the books and "there is no need for panic." Nevertheless, the report said some utilities are "capitalizing on consumer fate" that tap water is safe and lax government enforcement to let water quality slide.

"We realized that we should not be admitting students to another 4 percent, and still be in line with our budget numbers," Koob said.

able to get more of the classes they need without having to take as many filler courses."

While this quarter's enrollment is several hundred below low enrollment at this time last year, the number of students admitted was more or less equal to last year's new freshmen and transfer students, Koob said.

OFFICIALS WANT SAFEGUARDS BEFORE TROOPS HIT BOSNIA

WASHINGTON — If President Clinton decides to order U.S. soldiers into Bosnia on a U.N. peacekeeping mission, thousands of troops will enter Sarajevo in an airborne show of force that could be mounted within days, this report, military planners say.

But before U.S. troops go in, the Pentagon wants to see a peace accord that holds — with the combatants separated from one another, heavy artillery withdrawn and the free flow of humanitarian supplies assured, the planners said.

The initial deployment could grow to about 25,000 troops over a several-week period — bristling with enough heavy tanks, artillery and armed troop transports to defend themselves and ensure their mission is carried out.

Military planners spoke of their work on condition of anonymity.

Take another look at Pete Wilson, budget crisis

By Michelle Monta

Have you ever been blinded by ignorance, completely at the mercy of your friends' opinions? That is what happened to me.

Last year, I was very frustrated when the state raised fees for Cal Poly and many other state universities. The opinions I had regarding Governor Wilson and the state budget, however, were not valid, rational, or factual. Point blank—I was wrong.

It was evident to me that most students were extremely aggravated by the fee increases and they had decided to start at the top and work their way down when they wanted to blame someone. I did this as well.

After all, in 1990 I quite blindly voted for Pete Wilson for governor. At that time, I voted for him because my parents did, and next election I will understand the issues better.

Did you know that, even with your fee increases, California taxpayers are still paying 70 percent of the cost of your education? Commitment to education has been a tradition in California. Unfortunately, the severity of California's fiscal crisis has constrained the state's ability to maintain that commitment.

This year, even though the budget for higher education was reduced, the reduction is actually less than the reductions in the rest of the general budget.

You should also know that financial aid grants provided through the Student Aid Commission have not been reduced. The current budget provides a $51 million increase to the Cal Grant program. Gov. Wilson understands the need for financial assistance to students, and agrees school tuition should not be an unjust burden.

Attending college in California as compared to other states is definitely a bargain, especially considering the quality of education you are receiving. Our community college fees alone are the lowest in all of the United States.

I believe it is my duty to let you all in on a very well-kept secret. Last year, I formed my opinions listening only to the press. Unfortunately, the severity of California's fiscal crisis has constrained the state's ability to maintain that commitment.

This summer, I had the opportunity to learn first-hand what truly goes on in Sacramento, as I worked as an intern at the governor's Office of Child Development and Education.

"Wilson was being blamed by everyone for cutting programs for children, the blind and disabled, when in fact he was attempting to live within a budget, just as you and I must do.

What did we expect him to do?

Did we really think that as governor of the eight-largest economy in the world he would not take every step possible to stop the continued fiscal downturn in California?

What he did was take action! He froze cost-of-living increases, saving $5 billion each year for five years, and gave K-12 schools their fair share, which is nearly 40 percent of the state budget.

Wilson was being blamed by everyone for cutting programs to children, the blind and disabled, when in fact he was attempting to live within a budget..."

Health and welfare programs receive over 29 percent of the tax dollars, and higher education receives the third-largest share, 9.3 percent.

My main concern for all of you is that you don't judge a book by its cover. Discover the facts for yourself. Know the issues and problems the governor deals with every day. Think before you point an accusatory finger, because chances are you really don't know, as Paul Harvey says, "the rest of the story."

Grand Ave. roadwork running behind

By Jeffrey Jon, Daily Staff Writer

This summer, July 12, the reconstruction of Grand Avenue began, causing traffic to bottleneck frequently in front of Cal Poly.

"We are (correcting) a major problem on a major street," said Wayne Peterson, the city engineer in charge of the project. "We are going to have congestion problems. That's typical." The problem, according to Peterson, is that the street is in bad condition. The medians on the road do not have curbs around them and the pavement is in bad repair.

"The city of San Luis Obispo has been looking to improve the pavement," said Bob Kitamura, Cal Poly's director of facilities planning, is working with Peterson on the project. "The reconstruction of Grand Avenue will help the campus," said Kitamura. "There will be several new signs telling the public about the campus on the medians." The pavement has taken longer than expected," Kitamura said. "We should be done within two weeks." There will also be a four-way stop at Grand and Hadley, the intersection at the entrance to the campus. Designers hope to make Grand Avenue more accessible to people who live beside it. Because of the number of students traveling into campus, those residents often can't get on the street.

"By putting stop signs in, traffic will possibly slow down enough for people in the neighborhood to get on the road," Kitamura said. Peterson also said that they will have to block off one lane on each side at times. "We will try to start after eight o'clock rush. However, Grand(Ave.) will not be closed entirely. There will always be at least one lane in each direction open."

Peterson says the finished project will be worth the current inconvenience.

Poly places 11th in new U.S. News college rankings

By Amy J. Miller

Cal Poly is back on the list of top schools in the west, ranking 11th out of 15 in a recent U.S. News & World Report survey.

The school beat out the University of Redlands, Linfield College, University of Texas at Dallas and the University of Portland in the annual survey that rates top schools in the nation. This survey, according to Celeste James, media relations manager at U.S. News & World Report, is a guide that provides some sort of a breakdown of "our vast education system."

"The survey looks at schools and uses a certain criteria to rate them," James said. U.S. News & World Report went to 1,371 four-year schools and divided them into several categories. College presidents, deans and admissions directors from these schools rated institutions in the same category as their own schools, according to the magazine.

"To determine a school's overall rank, the reputational scores were combined with data provided by the colleges," the magazine said in a press release.

Schools were ranked in five categories: academic reputation, student selectivity, faculty resources, financial resources and graduation rate. Cal Poly accumulated at total of 847 points out of 100 points possible, according to the press release.

Some students interviewed this weekend said they agreed that many of Cal Poly's students have chosen the university because of its academic reputation, which they have heard about by word-of-mouth.

"My counselor said the engineering program here was good," said Chris Birgers, a materials engineering freshman. That program's reputation has attracted many engineering majors and has prompted them to tell others about it. Birgers said Cal Poly has also promoted its own programs through advertising.

"This school focuses on hands-on learning," said Eric Albertson, a third-year senior in mechanical engineering. "I must have learned about that from the catalog."

This year's number one ranked school in the west was Trinity University in Texas. Harvard University was number one in the nation and University of Massachusetts number one in the nation among liberal arts colleges.

FOOTBALL: Mustangs clobber Chico, 63-6, in blowout win Friday

Early in the second quarter, Chico State drove down the field to the Cal Poly two-yard line. However, Wildcat quarterback Mario Arripiete fumbled the handoff when he ran into his running back, Cal Poly's Ron Madonna recovered. It would be the first of five consecutive Chico turnovers. According to Setzenich, that was the key moment of the game and the rest was academic.

The Mustangs added another touchdown in the second quarter via a 43-yard strike from Fisher to receiver Slawson. Bob Thomas made the extra point and Cal Poly led 21-0. The turning point was on and CSU Chico's nightmare unfolded. A. De Williams picked off a pass and returned it 21 yards for a touchdown. The extra point was blocked. Cal Poly led 27-0.

Alex Garwood then intercepted another ball on the next play. That set up an eventual Jordan touch­down run of seven yards. Cal Poly led 34-0.

Then CSU Chico perked up.

But, Arcipreste coughed the ball up again as he was hit by Maden. Defensive lineman Paul Brod recovered the fumble. This time the Mustang couldn't do anything with it. But, fortunately for the Mustangs, the CSU Chico offense got the ball back.

Williams returned another interception for 31 yards and did a backward dive into the end zone for his second score.

"It was a dream come true," Williams said of his extraordinary two interception returns for touch­downs. "The (defensive) line and linebackers did a great job, so they (the quarterbacks) didn't even see me. I just stepped up in front of the ball and went from there."

Spectators began heading for the exits before the last seconds of the first half ticked off.

Any hope for a miraculous come­back from a 41-0 deficit by CSU Chino were nearly dashed out on the first drive of the third quar­ter. The Wilddata drove down the field only to lose it on downs while seeing Arcipriete hobble off the field injured.

Fitz scored a five-yard touch­down in the third quarter. Jordan scrambled in from two yards out for his third touchdown of the game in the phenomenon, just as... no save. CSU Chico finally got on the board when backup quarterback Cesar Parra rolled in from one yard out. A bad snap torpedoed the point after attempt.

Cal Poly went on a 13-play, 74­ yard drive that ended when Tom Shaway bulldozed in from one yard out to make the score 61-0.

A bad snap on the conversion blocked into a two-point conversion. Holder Smith avoided the rush and tossed a completion to a wide open Kurt Bowyer in the end zone for a two-point play that ended the scoring at 63-6.

The Mustangs churned out 226 yards on the ground. Fitz, still ham­pered by injuries, finished with 153 yards on just 18 carries.

"This was a game just like any other game no matter what the score," Fitz said. "We played it like that."

Jordan gained 59 yards on 10 attempts.

CROSS COUNTRY: Times are slow, but teams are thrilled with challenging new course

The two Cal Poly soccer teams lost their 5-0 match on the weekend at Mustang Stadium against the San Francisco State University Gauchos.

Both teams used similar strategies using strong defense with much of the play occurring in the offensive zone.

Women’s head coach Alex Crozzer said he thought the team was a little off the field. They played hard and fair and earned a victory that wasn’t cheap, he said.

Sophomore forward Wendy Jones scored the only goal at the 16:20 mark with an assist from junior midfielder Michelle Wagner in the 1-0 contest.

For Jones the goal was her team-leading eighth of the year. She has scored five more goals than the next highest scoring Mustang and has almost caught up to the 13 goals she recorded last year.

Wagner snagged her first assist of the year on the play.

“It wasn’t pretty, but it was a hard-won goal,” Crozzer said.

The men’s game was pretty and the only thing lacking was the tempting handwriting the fans to walk away from the scoreboard.

But most of the 1,233 people at the game stayed to the end of the 5-0 bombardment.

Junior midfielder Nicki Silliman scored the first goal assisted by fellow senior midfielder Chris Correa at the 23:31 mark of the first period. And the scoring didn’t end until the Mustangs tallied on four more goals.

Ten minutes later, Corona assisted again for what turned out to be the only goal of the game. The Correa lofted a free kick high enough for 6-foot-3-inch Rhysen Henderson to redirect with his head into the upper left corner of the goal.

Corona collected his fourth point of the game when he blasted a misplayed ball into the net from 25 yards out.

But Corona shared the spotlight with senior midfielder Rich Kubeck. Jones脸颊ed the last goal of the game and flirted with a hat trick on an assist from Corona.

Senior transfer setter from UCLA said.

“Last year we were a good team, but we weren’t successful” Gartner said.” I think this year we are a little vulnerable, but it does the game more exciting.”

The men see their next action Sunday, Sept. 26 as they put their 4-3 record against CSU Bakersfield. The game denotes the start of California Collegiate Athletic Association play. The men’s next home match is Saturday, Oct. 2 at Cal Poly Pomona.

The women (4-3) host host 12th ranked UCLA Friday. They then travels to Santa Clara Wednesday.

The Mustangs will go up against other teams.

“It was exciting, but not in the way we played,” Crawford said.

The men’s next meet is the San Francisco Invitational, Sat., Oct. 14. At the Invitational the Mustangs will once again take on the new Laguna Lake Park course.

Coach says volleyball team falls two points shy of respect

The Cal Poly women's volleyball team played as well as a team could without winning. The Mustangs lost to the University of San Diego Toreros by the minimum score, 16-14, 13-15.

"They outplayed us by two points," head coach Craig Cummings said.

From the beginning, the match was the kind of blowout the Toreros walked on. The Mustangs' faces were captivated by her beauty - 10 touchdowns were scored in Cal Poly's 63-6 blowout.

With Androvich out of the lineup for a couple of plays, the chance to tie the third highest points scored by Cal Poly in a match had the makings of a beauty - 10 touchdowns were scored in Cal Poly's 63-6 blowout.

When the scoreboard flashed the final score, 16-14, 13-15, Cummings relied on his performance.

"I felt good today on the court," she said. "I'd like to be more aggressive and consistent during my next game."

If anything, the Mustangs must have their leader present, junior Amy Wrightam. Cal Poly had the unfortunate task of taking the court without its leading hitter, junior outside hitter Meygan Androvich. She sat in the stands with a pulled muscle in her neck and back.

Androvich has suffered from a similar injury before but said she was feeling better after the game and didn't feel so sore. Her previous injury sidelined her for three weeks.

With Androvich out of action, head coach Craig Cummings relied on his younger players. Freshmen Heather Benaflag and Trisha Pollara recorded season-highs in kills. Benaflag knocked down 15 and Pollara put down nine.

With Androvich out of the lineup, the Toreros walked on. The Mustangs' faces were captivated by her beauty - 10 touchdowns were scored in Cal Poly's 63-6 blowout.

"It will give us a good idea of how our new course will work out," she said.

"There are lots of hills and roads on the course," she added. "But this is what a true cross country course should be like. This is what we've been looking for in a home course."

In the past, local meets were held on Cal Poly's campus. Teams ran a path that twisted around the pumpkin patch and animal units at the north end of campus. Jason Sullivan, sports information intern, said the team switched sights to pursue a course that better resembled a standard cross country course with more hills and less paved roads.

At the hilly and un-paved course 13 runners sprinted to begin the 3.1-mile course. By the first mile, sophomore Angela Orfice had pulled in front. She was closely followed by junior Jennifer Laovara. Orfice increased the gap by 15 seconds as she pulled ahead over the hill and into the second mile.

Orfice finished in 18:02.7 and Laovara followed in 18:26.7. Freshman Melanie Hahn finished third in 19:03. Hand is the younger sister of former Cal Poly running star Kristina Hand.

Saturday's times were slower than last weekend's meet at Fresno, where Cal Poly's men's and women's teams took first place. Slower times were to be expected because of the lack of competition and the tough terrain, Crawford said.

But Orfice, who finished fourth last week in 17:51, was happy with her performance.

"I felt good today on the course," she said. "I'd like to become more aggressive and consistent during my next race."

Laovara wasn't feeling as good during her race. Her legs were tired from hard workouts on Tuesday and Thursday," she said. "Next week (at Stanford) it will be easier to focus because we will have a lot more competition and pressure from other teams."

Lack of competition didn't keep the men from running off to a quick start, however.

Coley Candade, a junior transfer from University of Oregon, led the first mile of the 6.2-mile race by a 30-foot margin. See CROSS COUNTRY, page 11

Cross country teams run away from Poly pigs and pumpkins

The cross country all-conference meet at Laguna Lake Park marked a new beginning for the Cal Poly team. It was the Mustangs' first race at their new home course.

"It will give us a good idea of how our new course will work out," she said.

"There are lots of rocks and roots on the course," she added. "But this is what a true cross country course should be like. This is what we've been looking for in a home course."

Poly thumps Chico ninth straight time

Coach Lyle Setencich watched the Mustangs play the most dominating game of his tenure since a 66-3 battering of Nebraska Wesleyans in 1990.

"We gave a very good team effort," Setencich said. "We got to play a lot of people."

Both teams drove the ball to midfield on their first possessions. From there, things rapidly deteriorated for CSU Chico.

Cal Poly put together a 76-yard drive for the first score. Quarterback Mike Fisher hit wide receiver Jeff Radcliffe for 24 yards and Brian Fita ran for 27 yards in back-to-back plays which set up the scoring play. Fisher hit running back Jacek Jordan who juggled the ball for four yards before permanently grabbing it and rumbling in for a 8-yard scoring play. Kicker Bob Thomas missed the extra point, so the Mustangs led 6-0.

CSU Chico then recovered the ball, but was forced out of bounds. On their first play, the ball was partially blocked by defensive back David Lombardi. This time, defensive back Robby Smith got all ball. With the ball rolling toward the end zone, Smith dived and batted it. Defensive back Steve Ruscill recovered the ball in the end zone. The officials scored it a touchdown. The Mustangs faked the conversion kick with quarterback Andy Guyader taking a two-point conversion pass to Mike Allambique. Cal Poly led 14-0.

Something funny happened to the Chico State Wildcat's trip to San Luis Obispo. They got involved in a football game in which everything that could go wrong did. Meanwhile, everything that could go right, did go right for them on this occasion, the Cal Poly Mustangs.
