Senate receptive to student call for diversity

By Erika Eldiler
Daily Staff Writer

Cal Poly's Academic Senate Tuesday afternoon considered three student-initiated resolutions to promote diversity on campus. The proposals were met with mostly favorable comments from the faculty panel.

The resolutions, drafted by a student-faculty team over the summer, would primarily encourage the university to:

* attract and retain minority students, faculty and staff;
* create a sensitivity task force and
* fund a "Multicultural Visiting Professors Program."

Senate President Jack Wilson said he was pleased with the overwhelming support the proposals seemed to attract from his colleagues.

"I think the resolutions are all reasonable," Wilson said. "There are some points that need to be clarified, but in general I'm in favor of the resolutions."

The Senate's support on the proposals is merely advisory but is seen as crucial by the students who want to see a more diverse Cal Poly.

Minority students who attended the meeting were encouraged by the feedback they received from the faculty group, which Wilson considered the proposals again on Nov. 9.

"I'm pretty optimistic about it," said Victor Fonseca, a political science senior. "Ultimately I'd like anyone who looks like me or comes from the same background as me to receive a good education."

Fonseca was among an estimated 35 students who came to the meeting to support adoption of the diversity proposals.

They see the diversity proposals as particularly important because they consider Cal Poly home to a "homogenous" campus.

At Tuesday's meeting, students shared personal experiences to illustrate their contentions that racism and sexism exist on campus. Speech communication senior Jerry Lawson said he thought it was unfair that

... but the recognized scientific criteria for measuring pain, that there is any pain associated with death by lethal gas."

The ACLU opposes the death penalty, but its suit seeks only to declare the gas chamber to be cruel and unusual punishment.

That would allow executions in California to be conducted by lethal injection, an option created this year by a state law that was passed in response to the suit.

Gas, once a common method of execution, is now used by only five states, including California, where 196 prisoners have died in the San Quentin gas chamber

Former ASI executive wins suit; gives cash to Children's Center

The bitter clash between part-time chemistry lecturer Gail Wilson and former ASI Executive Director Roger Conway seems to have come to an end.

Conway - who filed libel charges against Wilson in 1992 for an article she wrote and had published in The Poly Review - was awarded $20,000 last week in an out-of-court settlement for the suit.

In the article, Wilson accused Conway of mishandling of ASI funds and making decisions with little regard for students' wishes. The suit also charged Conway with defaming Wilson through a petition she circulated that same spring.

Conway, who now is a part-time lecturer for the College of Business, donated the entire award to the ASI Children's Center.

He said the donation was his way of putting the money to good use and calling an end to the feud that's boiled between him and Wilson for the past seven years.

"From my standpoint, this is something I'd like to have settled," Conway said. "I could think of no better way to use the money than to give it to those beautiful children. The center needs the money, and I would not feel right about keeping it."
ASII: Student government will consider stance on charter campus issue tonight

President Warren Baker and California State University Chancellor Barry Munitz first brought up the idea last winter. The charter concept is sketchy because no CSU school has ever tried it before.

Currently, Cal Poly, CSU-Humboldt and the proposed campus in Monterey are the only ones being considered for a charter campus. Becoming a charter campus would allow Cal Poly more control in governing its direction and resources. However, there have been concerns that although the school would gain this freedom, it would lose some of the benefits of being a CSU.

Interim Vice President for Academic Affairs Kerri Yamada tried to quell some of these fears at ASII's Oct. 13 board meeting. He said becoming a charter campus would not mean pulling the university out of the CSU system.

"What we don't want to do is if we have a charter campus that we completely separate ourselves from the system," he said. "If we do, we're going to go down the tubes."

"The CSU system has lobbyists in Sacramento that really lobby for higher education... specifically for the CSU," he said. "We, as a separate campus, could not afford to do that."

"The best of all worlds in a charter campus situation is to still have them give us the money that they are now giving us, but also untie us from some of the rules that we have between them and us," Yamada said. "This would give us more autonomy and freedom to do some things."

"The fact is we don't know what a charter campus is," he said. "That's what we're trying to figure out."

NFL: Charlotte, N.C. gets a coveted NFL franchise; suspense continues for others

The other cities still in the race are Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla., both of which are considered by some to be too small to support an NFL team. Baltimore, Md., also being considered for a team — is considered by some to be too geographically close to other NFL franchises.

Student reaction on Tuesday to the two new teams was mainly positive.

"All the other sports are doing it," said business junior Jack Bellamy. "They can't find enough teams or enough money to add more teams to even (the league) out."

The additional teams will do just that. Up to this point, there were 28 teams in the league. Four out of the six NFL divisions were comprised of five teams, leaving just two divisions with four.

The additional teams will be added to those two divisions — the central division of the American Conference and the western division of the National Conference.

"That's what we're trying to figure out," she said. "Die-hard football fans probably would not appreciate the NFL being played around with like that."

"Eventually, they'll see it for the better thing," she said.

Most students agreed the two teams will enhance the league.

Environmental engineering junior Nils Blomquist also said the addition of the teams is good.

"I don't think it will change the level of play in the NFL," he said. "A lot of players out there have good enough skill level to play in the NFL, but don't feel as if they don't appreciate the NFL being played around with like that."

Pro-Aristide lawmakers' fears escalate as Haiti's precious resources dwindle

GUN-TOTING men barged past waiting motorists to commandeer dwindling gasoline sup­plies Tuesday, as a global oil embargo aimed at restoring democracy squeezed Haiti harder.

Parliament was again unable to muster a quorum to pass laws that could end the crisis. Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, head of the military that toppled Presi­dent Jean-Bertrand Aristide in 1991, wants the parliament to grant an amnes­ty to those involved in murders since the coup.

But many legislators are in hiding at home or abroad, afraid that anti-Aristide thugs will kill them if they appear in public.

Political violence blamed on the ruling military, as well as the military's intran­sigence, has hampered efforts to bring Aristide home under a U.N.-brokered ac­cord signed in July.

Under the agreement signed by Cedras and Aristide, the military chief was to have resigned last week, while Aristide, the country's first freely elected leader, is to return Saturday.

But the United Nations imposed the oil and arms embargo Oct. 18, after Cedras showed growing unwillingness to step down and military-backed workers turned back a U.S. ship carrying U.N. workers who were to help implement the agree­ment.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager on Tuesday characterized the political efforts to return Aristide as "stymied."
Gender equity in athletics is long overdue

By Marilyn McNeil

It’s 1969. Twenty-one years after the passage of Title IX and some women appeared on this planet, the CSU will finally be challenged to take a leading role in gender equity in collegiate athletics.

That’s a long time coming. Even now there can be no question that no person would be excluded from participation in any education program or activity administered by the university or that financial assistance be available to them.

Athletics was always a part of the title, at least in its written form. By design, Title IX was meant to ensure that women athletes had as equal an opportunity to participate in sports as men did. In reality, the treatment of the female person in athletics has been poor.

Over the past three years, athletes have taken to the courts to persuade their universities to treat them equitably, and the CSU has not escaped their protests.

On Oct. 21, a settlement was reached between the state of California, the National Organization for Women (NOW) and the California State University. NOW had accused the CSU of discriminating against women students and women athletes. The CSU denied a settlement occurred. Those are the facts.

But what does that mean?

After paying lawyers fees over the past six months, the CSU has agreed to move its treatment of female athletes to a different level by 1993-94. It has agreed that the number of opportunities for women will reflect the undergraduate enrollment of each institution (within a 5-percent distortion factor).

For Cal Poly, this means that 43 percent of the athletic opportunities will be available for women: 57 percent for men. Of every 100 athletes we field, 43 of them will be women. Right now, we sponsor 17 sports, nine of which are for men. Last year, 557 student-athletes took part in intercollegiate athletics; 170, or 30 percent, of them were women.

How will Cal Poly reach the 43-percent female mark?

It is not an easy task, unless we are given dollars to create more intercollegiate sports opportunities. That means establish­ing opportunities that female athletes could be recruited for.

Does anyone bother to ask if the athletic programs are interesting to watch and buying tickets to those events. Does anyone bother to find out that 94 percent of the Division I-AA schools run a deficit in their football programs? And 74 percent do so in their basketball programs?

Does anyone bother to ask if the athletic programs are producing the first draft of any college team?

Poly’s system makes it too difficult to change majors

I have just started my third year at Cal Poly, and I am not happy. A question is on my mind, one which may interest you; it interests me: What satisfaction do students get when they want to change majors, and find out it’s almost an impossible task?

As students enter college, many have no real idea of what they want out of their education. It is simple, a student may enter college with the idea of becoming a mathematician, only to change their minds and major in an entirely different subject.

The way our system is set up, it is extremely hard for students to change major.

Many majors—such as business—require students to have a 3.0 GPA in order to change into them. This is unfair because students may be changing majors because they are struggling with the classes they must take. Also, the whole process ad­mits to the decision of one man: The dean.

This means that for any reason the dean wants to reject you, he can.

Time and time again I hear nothing but complaints from my friends about this situation. Maybe somebody might read this and do something about it.

Gender equity in athletics is long overdue

By Marilyn McNeil

Oh, how cruel. Why would you turn away men just to increase opportunities for women? How mean and so unfair!

No one has ever asked the men who have made athletic decisions for years “mean” and “unfair” for outraged and how they made their decisions. One person on the other hand, women are “cruel-apted” for suggesting we limit opportunities for men in order to afford opportunities for women to compete.

While women avoid joining a team, a non¬ competing position, men seem to be doing so. That is why capping a football team at 65, conditions creates such a hue and cry in the Collegiate sports for making money. Why not?

Only great travel! The conditions young men who will be denied the opportunity to serve as blocking dum­ mies; who never put on a uniform; who never played a down or who never played a single game! Think of all those men, 10 years later, who might not be able to tell any sports war stories; stories that no one in our society bothers to legalize with some form of equity.

What about sending those fringe athletes back, the debate club or student leadership? They all have talent—maybe it just isn’t for sports.

Again, our opponents ask. ‘Women; why offer more intercollegiate sporting opportunities? No one is interested in watching and buying tickets to those events.

Does anyone bother to find out that 94 percent of Division I-AA schools run a deficit in their football programs? And 74 percent do so in their basketball programs?

Brad Hamilton

Ed unsuccessfully attempted to suck Brad's voluminous sports knowledge in order to pick the winning football teams in the weekend match-ups. As of last weekend, Brad had a stunning record of three wins and one loss in his weekly Scrimmage Line. But it wasn't Ed's picks that halted Brad's hot streak. It was Marilyn McNeil, the assistant athletic director, who stopped Brad by mere points in the tie-breaking Chicago/Minnesota game.

Marilyn walks away from the contest the proud winner of five dollars in groceries.

Brad will be back next week to match wits with two different celebrities and hopefully take home a case of Pepsi.

The History of the Citibank Classic Visa card and the Age of Credit Card Security.

In the 67th year of the 20th Century A.D., Citibank introduced a credit card aptly titled the Citibank Classic Visa® card. Established on the premise that a credit card should offer—24 hours a day—warm, personal service, the Citibank Classic Visa card marked the end of the Ice Age. And it ushered in a new era. With the introduction of the first Photocard, the credit card bearing one's own photo and signature on the front, it soon became evident that Man was entering the Post Paleolithic Period. First, Man was no longer looking like a Neanderthal, as one often does on more primitive cards such as the Student ID. He or she could now choose his or her own photo. Second, by deterring other anthropoids from using the card, Man was helping to prevent fraud. Surely this was a sign of advanced intelligence. The subsequent rise of services was nothing less than an American Revolution. So as you might expect, Citibank would be there for you, even if your card was stolen, or perhaps lost. The Lost Wallet™ Service could have a new card in your hands usually within 24 hours. (You can almost hear Paul Revere crying, “The card is coming! The card is coming!”) When the Great Student Depression came along, Citibank introduced New Deals—special student discounts and savings. Hence, today's student can enjoy a $20 Airfare Discount for domestic flights (ushering in the Jet Age); savings on mail order purchases, sports equipment, magazines and music; a low variable interest rate of 15.4%; and, no annual fee. Finally, comes the day you enter the Classical Age (i.e. when you charge your purchases on the Citibank Classic card). You receive Citibank Price Protection to assure you of the best prices. Just see the same item advertised in print for less, within 60 days, and Citibank will refund the difference up to $150. Men need one more win

By Tony Brant Calhoun
Daily Staff Writer

Two hours of soccer should end with a few goals.

But that's not what happened Sunday night at Mustang Stadium when the Cal Poly men's soccer team tied the Cal State Los Angeles Golden Eagles, 0-0, after regulation play and two overtime periods expired.

While that might sound like a dull game, it wasn't, according to head coach Wolfgang Gartner.

"It was one of the most exciting games of the year," he said.

The Mustangs, ranked 14th nationally and now 10-4-2 (6-0-2 in the California Collegiate Athletic Association), could have clinched a tie for the CCAA title with a victory.

They could still claim their first CCAA title with a win over Cal State Dominguez Hills tonight.

If the Mustangs lose or tie, and Cal State San Bernardino defeats Cal State Los Angeles Wednesday, then the championship is at stake Friday when Cal Poly hosts San Bernardino at Mustang Stadium at 7 p.m.

But Gartner said his team has had to stay on top of the CCAA with defense because the Mustangs are playing without a healthy offense. Senior midfielder Mike Nelson is out with an injury, and junior forward Ryshiem Henderson is playing with a sore hamstring.

The Mustangs stayed in the game with their best defensive play once again from junior goalkeeper Travis Beene, who recorded another shutout—running his season total to ten. He has only allowed one goal in league play.

Travis Beene made outstanding plays all game," Gartner said.

Also playing well on defense were senior defenders Dan Fish and senior forward Mike Black, Gartner said.

Both teams had scoring opportunities throughout the game, but Poly's best chance came in the second overtime period.

A Golden Eagle defender apparently batted a ball to the Mustangs with his foot in the box. But Poly's best chance at a goal was called "out of play," Gartner said.

But regardless of the call, Gartner said the Mustangs must play on—possibly without Henderson.

Women clinch CCAA title

The music of New Kids on the Block faded from the pop scene a long while ago, but the new kids on the block in the women's soccer scene are kicking strong.

The new kids are the Cal Poly women's soccer team, which clinched its first California Collegiate Athletic Association in its first year of competition in the conference.

The program has only been a sport at Cal Poly for two years.

"Football is kind of like a tradition that runs in my family," Henderson said with a soft-spoken tone that illustrated a sense of modesty. "There are a lot of football players in my family, and my father, Lane Howell, played center for the Philadelphia Eagles in the late '60s and early '70s."

"Football has been battling injuries of late, but still managed to lead the Mustangs with six assists. He ranks second on the team, with six goals and 18 total points.

Choosing a different goal

When it came time to choose a college, Ryshiem Henderson had many options.

He could have worn a Stanford or Cal-Berkeley football uniform and deflected a pass away from the hands of UCLA's top receiver, J.J. Stokes. He also seemed a priority in my family."

"I entered Cal Poly in 1990 as an economics major with a concentration in finance.

"Football is kind of like a tradition that runs in my family," Henderson said with a soft-spoken tone that illustrated a sense of modesty. "There are a lot of football players in my family, and my father, Lane Howell, played center for the Philadelphia Eagles in the late '60s and early '70s."

"Football took a back seat Mike Fisher was the one."

"It was a start ... and education is always a priority in my family."

"Regarded by many as an outstanding all-around athlete, Henderson had the ability to pursue an eventual professional career in football or soccer."

"I was being looked at by Washington State, Washington, Cal-Berkeley and Stanford," Henderson said. "Cal and Stanford would've been close to home, but it costs a lot more to go."

Henderson said most colleges only offered a partial scholarship, leaving him to make up the financial difference.

Eventually, he said he chose soccer at Cal Poly because soccer felt more natural to him.

"Henderson said he has played soccer since he was six. "I like playing soccer," he said, "but I didn't look forward to football practice."

"He said he also chose Cal Poly because it offered the least expensive option.

"I looked at Cal Poly, and I already knew a few guys on the team," Henderson said. "It was a start ... and education is always a priority in my family."

"He entered Cal Poly in 1990 as an economics major with a concentration in finance.

"Mustang head soccer coach Wolfgang Gartner said he is glad Henderson chose Cal Poly.

"Henderson is one of the most dangerous players I have ever witnessed on the field," Gartner said.

"Henderson has been battling injuries of late, but still managed to lead the Mustangs with six assists. He ranks second on the team, with six goals and 18 total points.

"Born in Philadelphia, Pa., Henderson was raised in the Bay Area by his mother, Anna Henderson. He said he feels his life experiences affected him in a positive way.

"'I've been told I'm naturally a risk taker," he said. "A lot of things I always wanted weren't always given to me. It's made me a go-getter."

"This attitude presents itself on the field as well as the class-room.

"'Anything like a loss is bad," he said. "It makes me go out and get things done."

"Follow teammates, junior forward Loo Vera, knew Henderson from his youth.

"He lived up the street from me in San Jose," said Vera. "We played on a club team together named the West Valley Bullets."

"After a few years of separation, the two played against each other in high school with Vera playing offense and Henderson playing defense.

"He's pretty intense," said Vera. "He's aggressive and he works hard."

"When the two were reunited on the Cal Poly squad, Vera found their games complimented each other well.

"'The big thing with Ryshiem is if he's not putting the ball in the net, he's scoring defenders," Vera said. "I try to get loose balls out of him."

"Henderson said he thinks of pursing professional soccer but is aware of the many hurdles of professional sports.

"'It's a tough call, but I think I can play (professional soccer)," Henderson said.

"Vera said. "He does some really amazing things sometimes."

"Vera feels Henderson could achieve those levels due to his strength, speed and "sneaky" game, which refers to a player's ability to jump and head the ball.
