Top-level meter beaters irk faculty

By Anita Broughton

Parking permits allowing university deans, administrators and other campus officials to park on campus without plugging quarters into parking meters have caused some faculty's patience to expire.

Aidid baits U.N. forces; U.S. set for standoff

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Mohamed Farrah Aidid edged closer to a standoff with the United States and his truce with U.N. forces seemed even shakier as foreign troops came under fire Monday for the fourth straight day.

The Somali security chief for the international aid agency CARE was killed and a guard was wounded in a shootout involving Malaysian troops in an Aidid stronghold.

Aidid had warned of trouble if U.S. troops return to Mogadishu's streets, which they left in May when they turned over command of the multinational mission to the United Nations.

On Monday, a showdown loomed when Rausch reaffirmed that Army reinforcements soon will be venturing beyond the compound's gates.

The United States on Monday was sticking by plans to put American forces back on Mogadishu's streets. Army reinforcements are expected to venture beyond their compounds soon.

On Sunday, Aidid, who controls southern Mogadishu, vowed not to negotiate with the United Nations, which blames him for the deaths of 24 Pakistani peacekeepers on June 5.

Today, his Somali National Alliance boycotted two U.N-sponsored meetings.

"The United States has been bending over backwards to meet some of the requests" of the Somali National Alliance, U.S. military spokesman Col. Steve Rausch said today. "We are disappointed. They seem uncooperative." Rausch did not say what requests Aidid's faction made.

Police on Thursday ordered Santa Maria resident David Potter Lawler off campus after a woman who had filed a report earlier in the month accusing a man of sniffing her buttocks recognized him in the library. "The man left a note on their resident adviser's door, according to Allen. The resident adviser discovered the note the following morning, and did not speak with the coordinator of student development (CSD) until Thursday evening, Allen added.

"The time lapse from the incident's occurrence to its reporting makes official's reactions understandable, Allen said. Meetings were held with Yosemite Hall residents on Thursday evening to notify them of the incident, but no information was formally communicated to other residence halls.

Poly on bikes: Everyone's got attitude and no one's budging

By Roll Henthorn
and Amy Hooper
Daily Gauchoscript

Intolerance appears to be the fuel feeding Cal Poly's transportation debate, according to a recent scientific Daily poll. The survey probed student opinion and experience regarding bicycle access to campus and whether the campus fosters a bicycle-friendly environment.

It consisted of an anonymous written interview with 118 students, conducted throughout the quarter. Students' sentiments split almost evenly, with 59 percent considering Cal Poly a bicycle-friendly campus and 41 percent disagreeing with the statement.

The survey was conducted in the wake of a series of controversies over traffic and parking issues. Although exasperated, Mathematics professor Arthur DeKleine, said he thinks everyone at the university should share the burden of coping with a difficult parking situation.

"I don't believe (the pass exists) to cushion them — so they don't have to walk 10 minutes in the morning," she said. "The purpose of it is to allow those people who have to make the most trips on and off campus to better serve the university."

"I don't believe (the pass exists) to cushion them — so they don't have to walk 10 minutes in the morning," she said. "The purpose of it is to allow those people who have to make the most trips on and off campus to better serve the university."

Koob, however, should not be singled out. He is one of a dozen campus officials who use the special permit. Koob was not available for comment on the issue.

Frank Lebens, vice president for administration and finance, said he believes the privilege isn't overused.

"Bob Koob probably has as many off-campus appointments as anyone and I can guess that he would have frequent need for using his pass," Lebens said. "Koob, however, should not be singled out. He is one of a dozen campus officials who use the special permit. Koob was not available for comment on the issue."

DeKleine said he understands the universal need for convenient parking.

Confessions of a butt-sniffer

By Ned W. Schultz

I've been thinking about our fellow citizen, Mr. Butt-sniffer.

Actually, I've been reflecting on the amazement and disgust of some of us over his alleged behavior. We reacted as if a huge, black had landed, fouling his shocking ritual upon us.

As the butt-sniffers of this world are absolutely worthy ones, by no rhyme or reason to their olfactory behavior. But the psychology of our mind demands a more satisfying answer. And that brings to mind a favorite French film, Coq de Poule (Clean Slate).

In this darkly comic film by Bertrand Tavernier, the palpable French police chief played with wonderful desperation by Philippe Noiret watches himself and the people around him unravel during the days before World War II in French colonial Africa.

During a moment when the tragic absurdity of human behavior becomes painfully obvious, Tavernier has his main character tell the story of his dogs' butts.

The police chief says: "You know why dogs sniff each other's butts? When dogs still ruled the world they held a convention to vote on new laws. The head dog said, 'I suggest that, for sanitary reasons, leave our butts at the door.' The dogs agreed and they de-butt-holed.

"But just then a tornado blew in and mixed up all the butts. Not one dog recognized his own.

"Since then, they've smelled each other's. They may do it till the end of time," the chief concludes.

I think I finally appreciate what Tavernier was trying to say with this scene, and in getting it I have concluded that Butt-sniffing is a normal phenomenon. Don't take me too literally. You will not find me creeping up behind anyone on my hands and knees. Not even in the privacy of my own home.

I am a reasonably well-socialized sniffer. Interestingly enough, I also find that, like Tavernier's dogs, I am surrounded by butt-sniffers. It seems to me that we humans just can't seem to sniff each other enough.

Sometimes we call it entertainment, sometimes news. In my life it is neighborliness, friendship, comradeship, parenting and even love.

Last night I called up my parents and sniffed them earnestly about their health. Maybe you've received a good sniffing too. I hope you find a lucrative career where you can sniff to whatever degree you wish.

We sniffers aren't just hoping for sweet fragrances either. We want to know what is really going on "up close and personal." Though we don't always enjoy what we sniff, something drives us back to sniff again and again and again.

So I wonder if, like Tavernier's confused dogs, we search for something about ourselves as we sniff our fellow humans. I will say one thing for myself: the most satisfying sniffing I've ever experienced has been in my job and on rare occasions even with strangers, has provided me with helpful insights into myself.

Frankly, I suspect that my fellow sniffers and I poor, poor, poor humans, may well be doing it until the end of time.

Mr. Butt-sniffer may need some professional help so that no one has to be intimidated by his inappropriate behavior. Before we persecute him too harshly though, let's remember that sniffing may be an unavoidable curse of humanity.

So sniff and be sniffed, as you will inevitably be. You may be surprised at what you discover about yourself.

Please, let's all agree not to sneak up behind each other unannounced.

Ned W. Schultz is a professor of psychology and human development at Cal Poly.

Survey results speak for themselves

In: "Who wants semester breaks," Commentary, 1/5

Apparently, Saeed Niku has become so exhausted from all the time he is spending in labs that he is unable to comprehend a simple report. Or, perhaps, the information in the report is beyond the limits of his understanding.

Niku's assertion that "the committee pushed its own agenda" is not true. Several of his statements can be questioned. For example, the survey results which he used to conclude that 72 percent of the faculty supported the semester system are absolutely false!" As a member of the committee that wrote the report, I found some of his assertions insulting.

First, Niku accused the committee of writing survey questions in a manner that would bias results. Then, he attempts to show off data that would contradict his paradigm distribute.

As Niku stated, table five of the survey report is presented to reflect that 32 percent of the faculty supported the quarter system, 3 percent supported a semestert system and 6 percent supported a trimester system.

However, Niku conveniently neglected to mention that the very next line of the report states that an additional 24 percent of those surveyed supported either a semester or trimester system.

Therefore, only 35 percent of the faculty supported a quarter system, while 33 percent supported a semester or trimester system.

Now Niku states that "the report showed support for the quarter system among most faculty?" What part of a majority do you not understand? Niku's assertion that "the committee pushed its own agenda" is not true.

Not only were our recommendations consistent with the results of the faculty and staff surveys, they are consistent with a national movement to discontinue quarter systems. During the 1992-93 school year, only 23 percent of colleges and universities remained on the quarter system; 72 percent were using a variation of the semester system. There were 26 fewer institutions using the quarter system than the previous year.

Niku's charge that our recommendations were not considered is absolutely false!

Our Mr. Butt-sniffer may need some professional help so that no one has to be intimidated by his inappropriate behavior. Before we persecute him too harshly though, let's remember that sniffing may be an unavoidable curse of humanity.

So sniff and be sniffed, as you will inevitably be. You may be surprised at what you discover about yourself.

Please, let's all agree not to sneak up behind each other unannounced.

Ned W. Schultz is a professor of psychology and human development at Cal Poly.

LIBRARY: Police say sex charges will be filed against a Santa Maria man accused of lewd acts

Lawler — who has yet to have criminal charges filed against him — was detained by an officer outside the library and ordered to leave campus. The incident was the second time Lawler has been ordered off campus for allegedly committing lewd acts. The first came three years to the day before Thursday’s incident.

Since the time Lawler was ordered off campus, two more women have told police they, too, have had problems with a man sniffing their buttocks in Kennedy Library.

"They were similar in nature to the first report," Berrett said. "There probably were more, but there are at least three victims we’re aware of.

Berrett said all three women told of a man crawling behind them and sniffing their buttocks while they were sitting, studying at a cubicle or table.

Berrett said police intend to pass a report on to the San Luis Obispo District Attorney, who may then file sex-crime charges.

"We’ve already been talking about what sections of the penal code to use," Berrett said. "We will be passing it on to the DA within the week.

Police are still asking anyone who may have been the victim of or witnessed such an incident to come forward.

"It’s not that it is absolutely necessary to strengthen the case," Berrett said. "We would just like to know about them. Telling us about it doesn’t mean (the victims) would have to testify in court.

Women have described the man to police as being 40 years old, 6-feet tall, 230 pounds and wearing profusely. When spotted on Thursday, he was wearing a gray Miami T-shirt, dark blue shorts and black rubber-soled shoes.

"The staff did an excellent job," Allen said. "I think the hall meetings were a good way to go.

"The CSDs know that they need to call police," he said. "The respective time delay encouraged them to make some different choices.

"Maybe in the past, communication has just been too informal," Allen said. "Hopefully, that’s where (Public Safety) and I can work together.

"What we could have done different is call them (the victims) and ask what they could do (an alert) on a campus level," he said. "There’s nothing to say this person won’t take their business elsewhere.

Indeed, one caller told police Monday they saw a man matching the suspect’s description on campus Friday — almost two days after the Yosemite Hall incident, according to Investigator Ray Berrett.

Public Safety Director Joe Risser said Monday he hopes Allen and police officials can work to strengthen a better reporting policy.

“(Allen) has inherited a staff that was trained already and are used to a number of things, right or wrong," he said of the new housing director. "I thought we had a pretty clear understanding of what’s important and what’s not important.”

WE RACE YOU WIN!

Professional racing is hell on a car. Every mile on the track is like a hundred on the street. As race car builders, we follow a car through its entire life span—often only a matter of hours. What we've learned at Le Mans and Daytona applies directly to the way we maintain your car. We'll fit it for top performance and make the minor repairs that can save you a major overhaul further down the road. Our prices are reasonable and our service is the best.

Racing car owners trust us, shouldn't you?

GREAT IDEA!
Due to the Veterans Day holiday on Thursday, there will be no Mustang Daily to greet you back to campus on Friday. Don’t take it personally. The Daily will be back on the stands Monday morning.

Tear Off With a Friend

Getting around California on Amtrak® is easier than ever on our statewide network of frequent trains and buses. Our San Diegans, San Joaquins, Capitols, and bus feeders serve over 130 of California's best destinations daily, including Santa Barbara, the Central Coast, historic Gold Country towns, the Napa Valley, Marine World, Tahoe, and Eureka.

And with the 2-for-1 coupon below, you can bring a friend along free. The coupons can be used for one-way travel, or even greater discounts on excursion round trips.

Statewide on the San Joaquins.

The free companion fare coupon is valid on the San Joaquins, via handy feeder buses from San Luis Obispo, Atascadero and Paso Robles to trainside in Hardin.

Using the coupon, the round trip San Luis Obispo – Santa Rosa fare for two is just $146 on the San Joaquins: That's not per person, it's the whole fare!

All Along the Coast on the San Diegans.

Coupon discounts also apply to the San Diegan route, for service via bus to Santa Barbara, and all the way through L.A. to San Diego. Two traveling together can take a San Luis Obispo-L.A. round trip for just $38.

See California Our Way

Even if you've lived in California all your life, you may not have seen the Golden State the rail way. You can forget the stress of sharing lanes with big trucks and tailgaters on car phones.

On Amtrak you have the freedom to take in the view, wander down to the cafe car for a snack, or catch up on your reading. Amtrak gives you quality time in a friendly, low stress setting.

Bring the Whole Family

Each full fare adult can bring one child (ages 2-15) as the free companion using the coupon, and one additional child at regular Amtrak children's discounts.

For more information, call your local travel agent or Amtrak at 1-800-USA-RAIL.
