Catalog adds minors, axes concentrations

All six colleges, numerous departments see major changes in 1994-97 document

By Cordelia Radley

Students enrolling in classes under Cal Poly's new 1994-97 catalog will see some big changes.

All six colleges underwent academic program changes in the latest catalog.

The biggest changes are the added minors and the deletion of concentrations," said Mary Whiteford, Cal Poly's academic programs analyst.

"These are usual changes after a curriculum cycle (about every two years), in which departments examine their courses and change them to better fit the needs of students," she said.

Changes to the curriculum are proposed by the faculty in each department and must be approved by each college's curriculum committee, the Academic Senate, and the vice president for Academic Affairs before they can be implemented.

Depending on the type of changes proposed, such as a new degree program, they need to be sent to the CSU Chancellor's Office in Long Beach for approval.

Until 1981, catalogs were valid for two years. They were extended to a three-year period so that faculty could develop an additional year for general discussions.

"Two years doesn't give the faculty time to try out new courses," Whiteford said. "If we were doing a 1994-96 catalog, we would already be asking faculty to update it when they haven't even had the opportunity to see how previous changes are working."

Students currently enrolled under earlier catalogs have the option of switching to the 1994-96 catalog if it better suits their needs, as long as they declare their choice when they prepare to graduate.

Concentrations have given way to department-approved electives in most programs which are aimed at providing students more flexibility and moving away from more rigid programs, according to Whiteford.

"This puts the advising back in the hands of faculty," she said. "(They) can work with students more flexibly and moving away from more rigid programs, according to Whiteford.

"Students can now obtain a minor in any area of study that best suits their needs," said Whiteford.

Monterey Bay to seek system-wide funding

By Cordelia Radley

When California State University Monterey Bay becomes a reality in 1995, it will become the CSU system's 21st campus and offer students the latest in computer technology with an adventure library and rooms with views.

The proposed high-tech campus is a world of difference from the previous occupant of the 1,300-acre area, U.S. Army soldiers who trained, worked and lived there.

Now that Fort Ord is closed, it is being converted to the Monterey campus, which is expected to accommodate 25,000 students by the year 2020.

Russians see flood of funny money

Moscow (AP) — Moscow is awash in counterfeit money, much of it cranked out on increasingly sophisticated photocopying equipment, a police official said Wednesday.

"At the roughest estimate, at least 400 million (about $200,000) in fake ruble notes are circulating in Moscow," said Yevgeny Tumanov, head of the police economic crimes department.

Counterfeiting is a growing concern in Russia, where $400 million in counterfeit rubles ($6,000) were tracked in just one day this week, the Interior Ministry said.

Senior citizen president to support Democrat-led health care package

Washington (AP) — The nation's largest organization of senior citizens threw its weight behind Democrat-led health care bills in the House and Senate Wednesday. "Now is the time to strike," said the president of the American Association of Retired Persons.

The endorsement from the board of directors of the 33.5 million-member AARP came as major business groups sought to form a united front to fight Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's bill.

AARP President John J. DiIorio said, "At the roughest estimate, at least 400 million (about $200,000) in fake ruble notes are circulating in Moscow," said Yevgeny Tumanov, head of the police economic crimes department.

"No, we're not too late to rescue that. Why do we have a debate," the president said at a White House event to trumpet Hawaii's 20-year-old requirement that employers buy health insurance for their workers.

The second day of debate in the Senate started acrimoniously as Republicans complained about "midnight" changes in both Mitchell's bill and the House version.

Arsen blamed for high school blaze

WEDOWEE, Ala. (AP) — A hand grenade was blame for the fire that destroyed a rural high school amid protests over the principal's stand against interracial dates, investigators said Wednesday.

State Fire Marshal John Robson said the blast report from a special federal arson investigation team determined the weekend fire at Randolph County High School was intentionally set.

There were no immediate arrests and Robson said authorities had no suspects.

Also Wednesday, the Justice Department and school board attorneys reached a preliminary agreement that could settle a racial discrimination complaint against the rural school system.

Lone Star governor defends state

Austin (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards scoffed Thursday at a California ad campaign that complains about Texas' business recruiting success and insults the Lone Star State.

"I think the ad's the silliest thing I've ever read," Richards said.

In a letter to California Gov. Pete Wilson, Richards said there are good reasons that Texas is winning the business battle.

"A great entrepreneurial spirit and a superior work force," she wrote. "Everything is bigger and better in Texas."

Richards likes to boast that Texas led all states in the number of new jobs for the past three years. But she insisted that she never badmouths another state when urging a company or factory to locate in Texas.

Berkeley campus gets SWAT team

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — University of California police have a new weapon to brandish at campus criminals — a SWAT team.

The University of California's High-risk Entry Team makes UC-Berkeley one of a handful of universities to invest in one of the elite squads, a move reflecting the type of crime scaling the walls of academia these days.

"It is obviously the kind of response that universities that are in urban settings and highly populated areas have to think about. They're small cities in many ways," said C. Peter Magrath, president of the National Association of State Universities and Land-grant Colleges.

"We're not going to have things like that, but we have crime, we have rape, we have incidents, we have deranged people, we have muggings," he said.

UC-Berkeley Police Sgt. Adam Titaia, coordinator of the new team, said the decision to beef up campus firepower came after a number of incidents.

"There is no reason when the building came up to be remarried," she said. "It was scheduled for two or three years ago but was set back." Pennington said Long John Silver's, featuring battered-dipped white fish, shrimp and chicken, and Chick-Fil-A, selective because those companies do not already operate franchises in San Luis Obispo.

Of a long list of possible restaurants, "any of them that already have a local (franchise) didn't want another one," Pennington said. The campus franchise, therefore, will not infringe on other franchises' territories.

The Foundation facility, named The Avenue, includes a black tile walkway running between two sections of fast food restaurants-style seating.

Pennington said the walkway was the idea of the architect, who studied the patterns in the area around the Arch and noticed a great deal of walk-through traffic.

"Now we'll just give in and leave the doors on both ends open.

Patrons will have the choice between two chains restaurants and the in-house Topanga's Super, City Deli and Cowboy Grub.

Topanga's Super will be a sit-down version of the Topanga's near the Kennedy Library, while City Deli will offer custom sandwiches with potato or macaroni salad or pasta and Cowboy Grub will offer hamburgers.

Pennington said the facility will be totally run by Campus Dining, which obtains a licensing agreement with the national franchises.

The agreement includes a profit-sharing plan with the nation franchises. Pennington said no student jobs will be lost with the change in service, and Campus Dining will maintain the approximately 600 student jobs that have been available in the past.

Mechanical engineering senior Larkin Friberg said she was not in favor of the change.

"I don't like the initial idea," she said. "It's kind of commercialized, but I guess we'll see." Architecture sophomore Jermaine Lee said that after living in the dorms and eating school food, he is ready for a change.

"I don't plan on eating on campus anymore," he said. "I might try it if the food's any good.

"At least it won't be Foundation food," he quipped.

Fire near Yosemite creates hundreds more evacuees

By Jake Howard

SACRAMENTO — A wildfire fueled by drought-weakened timber and brush forced hundreds of people from their homes Wednes­day in the mountains northeast of Columbia, authorities said.

They joined 500 teen-agers who were evacuated a day earlier from two church camps.

The fire burned more than 600 acres in the Cedar Ridge area and remained out of control, a federal forestry spokeswoman said.

Tuolumne County officials ordered people in the Cedar Ridge area, a rural development of more than 200 homes about seven miles north­east of Columbia. The town is about 150 miles east of San Francisco.

"It's a mandatory evacuation. Those residents were told to leave," said Mary Hale, a spokes­woman with the Stanislaus Na­tional Forest. Other scattered pockets of residents also were or­dered to leave.

The fire was first reported on Wednesday morning after residents were given shelter at a church and the county fairgrounds in nearby Sonora, where more than 500 teen-agers had been sent after evacuating two church camps. Many of the youngsters were retrieved later by "I've had a lot of interest in the new minor," the director of ethnic studies. "People are filling out their declaration forms." But they only have an interest in a field to pursue a minor. The new ethnic studies communication department now offers a minor. Morton, student of all majors to develop the necessary skills to enter fields such as law, business and so on.

"Students can supplement their education (in order to be better suited) as the employer's viewpoint," said Harry Harvey, director of the com­munication department head.

"Graphic communication is continuing to move to a service profession, and it needs more liberal arts education - they need to have a broad social science background," Koob said.

Course and program names have also changed, with some al­terations.

For example, agricultural en­gineering technology is now called rural resource systems management, and a recreation administration concentration in tourism management replaces the former leisure services management concentration.

The physical education department is now known as the physical education and kinesiology department.

And while many departments are deleting concentrations or eliminating majors, others are adding new degrees.

A master of science degree in engineering has been added with a specialization in water en­gineering.

The bachelor of science degree in human development with psychology-related concentra­tions has changed. Students now have a choice of obtaining a bachelor of science in human development with no concentra­tions, or a bachelor of science in psychology with approved electives/concentrations.

The landscape architecture department will implement a five-year landscape architecture professional degree program, replacing the four-year bachelor of science degree in landscape archi­ecture.

Landscape architecture programs at other schools are now old program required too much, too fast.

"It was a squeeze/play for students trying to get their general education and breadth and all the requirements and professional courses. It was too much," he said.

"It was too difficult for students to complete, given the impacted situation and schedul­ing," Koob said.

"We reorganized and redesigned a curriculum that will satisfy the requirements in the five-year time frame," Tryon said. But the five-year de­gree program allows students to take an area of concentration in business or liberal arts.

The bachelor of science in electronic engineering and bachelor of science in electrical engineering programs combined into one bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering.

Additionally, the master of science degree in electrical eng­ineering replaces the master of science programs in electronic and electrical engineering.

The bachelor of science degree in poultry industry is no longer offered.

At least six departments un­derwent course changes that in­clude prefix additions and dele­tions.

Baseball's future is a strike against fans
By Tim Vincent

Baseball has been called the mirror of America. It's what we are about. It brings generations together and creates a common bond that allows us to share our fears, our dreams, and young boys to dream.

The heroes of the game are etched into the nation's history and are revered as any other American figure. I can't tell you much about the Missouri Comets, but ask me how many times D'Maggio hit in the parade when the Giants last won the World Series, and I'll recite that history test.

Today, I, like many other baseball enthusiasts, am going on strike, as baseball, as a business, has forgotten the golden rule of sales - customer satisfaction. I am not satisfied with the behavior of the "professionals" involved and their effort to provide the game as a product for a paying public.

A Cleveland-based baseball fan organization called "Fans First" is one of the groups which initiated the fan strike, one day before players walk off the field.

Fans with season tickets for today's games are encouraged to sit this one out and fans with single-game tickets are encouraged to show their displeasure by not purchasing tickets for any other upcoming games.

The rhythms of Cal Poly are slowly making themselves known to me. Time really flies here through the summertime that I wonder if I'm really here — the quarter system. I came from a whole lifetime measured out in semesters with a summer quarter tiannis.

The library informed me that I had to relinquish either my white faculty card or my green staff I.D. card holder, or a ghost? Or does it mean I'll be a "CAPTURED" figure. I can't tell you much about the Missouri Comets, but ask me how many times D'Maggio hit in the parade when the Giants last won the World Series, and I'll recite that history test.

I'm hardly wait until next summer. The message these kids are receiving isn't to play for the love of the game but for the love of money. Many kids no longer take the field with the dream of becoming the next Willie Mays as they do of becoming the game's next millionaire. I've coached these kids; I've heard them talk. We need to get back to the day when baseball was just a game.

There's more people to think about in the grand scheme of things than just the players and owners.

While I admire professional athletes for their ability, I think they're overpaid. Being the best at what they do, baseball players should make a good sum of cash. But enough is enough.

There are at least 14 pro baseball teams out there losing money. Owners are taking the financial risk and should reap the game's financial rewards. That's one of the benefits of working in a capitalist system. If a team went belly-up I couldn't picture too many players coming to an owner's rescue.

The owners are not without fault in this situation. They let salaries get way out of hand a long time ago and should have checked themselves sooner. The players keep asking for more because they know they can get it. It's now too late to stop the bidding war without causing a major disruption in the game. I do feel for those players such as the Giants' Matt Williams, the Mariners' Ken Griffey and the Astros' Jeff Bagwell — all of whom have a shot at breaking long-standing home run or RBI records. And I feel for the fans who may miss the opportunity to tell their kids of the day they saw one of the players break those records or the year the Indians actually made the playoffs. Strike one — the fans are out.

A sea of entertainment floods weekend Bayfest

By Janice Barrege
Summer Staff Writer

This weekend, the quiet seaside communities of Baywood Park and Los Osos should be much more active than usual.

Bayfest '94 is coming, and the activities scheduled look to bring excitement and fun for all ages.

Tim Frein, chairman of the event, said the festival focuses on "a celebration of the natural beauty this area has to offer," he said.

Developed around the turn of the century, the Los Osos/Baywood Park community has been growing ever since.

With small farms and dairies initially dotting the fertile valleys, its mild marine climate provided the perfect conditions for agricultural uses.

Now, the once obscure community includes more than 14,000 people.

With two elementary schools and another on the way, a junior high school and local shopping stores, as well as a fire and sheriff station, the communities of Baywood Park and Los Osos continue to expand, while still maintaining their natural uninhibited flavor.

Another attraction of Bayfest, the Folk and Sea Music Festival, will feature Los Angeles based band, Naked To The World, Saturday night. The band was selected as "Acoustic Band of the Year" in 1993 by the National Academy of Songwriters.

The band Mosaic Caribbean Calypso and Steel Drums wrap up the festival on Sunday evening.

Other scheduled events during the weekend festival include "A Pirate Old Salt Parade," "An Instant Boat Building Contest," several plays and more than a dozen folk and shanty music concerts.

The concerts and plays are all ticketed events. Tickets for such events can be purchased separately or as a group.

Expect about 5,000 to 6,000 people," Frein said.

The boat building contest required contestants to make a boat out of specific materials and the crafts around a buoy with the leftover wood scraps as oars.

At the same time, the Bayfest Street Seafaire will be underway.

With Second Street in Baywood closed off, a wide array of street vendors will showcase their nautical wares to passerby, while sea shanty music continuously plays on the free Main Stage.

Premium beer tasting and specialty foods will also be available.

By Steve Gustafson
Summer Staff Writer

The Lost Trio is a two-member band with big ideas and even bigger dreams.

Cal Poly English graduates Chris Davidson and Carolyn Berg never really planned to form a band of their own.

"I was playing in a three-piece band, and Carolyn was watching," Davidson said. "Someone suggested that she sing with the band."

After the band Stretch disbanded, the door was open for Berg to step in and start a singing career with her future husband.

She did, and that moment helped lead to The Lost Trio.

Berg started playing the guitar six years ago and plays only at live shows. Aside from singing with the Trio, she also sings and has recorded with the Garden Street Band, doing backup vocals for the church group at the Vineyard.

Davidson's guitar playing began in early 1990.

The husband and wife team has already recorded their first tape, featuring their-own tain, with a second currently in the works. But as with all new artists, it wasn't smooth sailing at the beginning.

Their first show, an opener at SLO Brew for The Names about a year ago, was one Davidson would like to forget.

"It was a horrible gig," he said. "We forgot all of our words."

Despite the rough start, the duo managed to persevere and become a success.

Music is the couple's passion, and they plan on pursuing it wholeheartedly.

"It's a dream and there's a million people who have the same dream," Davidson said. "But we'd love to do this for a living."

The pair plans on doing just that in the fall as Davidson attends graduate school at UC Irvine.

"We're trying to be realistic," Berg said. "We'd like to be able to support ourselves through our music, but regardless of what happens, it's been fun."

Copies of The Lost Trio are available at local record stores.

Kelley Sherman of the Los Osos/Baywood Chamber of Commerce said, "Hopefully all of the events our festival has to offer, people will come back and patronize our establishments."

Frein said Bayfest will hopefully replace Junefest as the communities' major attraction.

Mid-State Fair delivers good music, fun
By Tom Vincent and Amy Hoover
Summit Writing Editors

This summer's entertainment lineup at the California Mid-State Fair was among the best of any fair in the country.

From the opening notes of his first song "Don't Rock the Jukebox" to his closer "Mercury Blues," country music superstar Alan Jackson thrilled the audience with his Aug. 6 performance, arguably the best at the fair.

Along with his band, The Strayhorns, Jackson kept feet tapping in the aisles with crowd favorites such as the current No. 1 single "Summertime Blues" and "Dallas," and brought a hush over the crowd with slower songs like "Midnight in Montgomery" and "Tonight I Climbed The Real World."

The ride easily possesses the excitement of riding Magic Mountain's Colossus, backwards, but it feels much different.

After two guys strapped us into the seat, we flew into the air like a rock out of a slingshot. "I was really nervous," Joy said. "I had to close my eyes." I felt too jazzed to notice anything; I wanted to see the fair from a bird's eye view. And the ride felt like floating into the seat, we flew into the air—no jerky motions at all, just fluid movement up and down.

"When I got to the top, I opened my eyes," Joy said. "We were spinning, and it was cool. I screamed my head off." That made two of us screaming and laughing, and that only continued down.

K-BEAR Radio is inviting local residents to a free street dance Sunday from 1-5 p.m. Attendees will be able to hear a mixture of recordings from the 1969 concert and live songs from the Woodstock II concert.

The event will take place in the city parking lot of Oca Street in San Luis Obispo, across from Hudson's Grill and Woodstock's Pizza.

The parking lot will be covered with 400 square feet of grass in front of the stage for attendees to sit back and relax on.

K-BEAR Promotions Director Pete Dunleavy said, "We thought it would be cool to cover the lot with grass, that way people could take a piece of Woodstock home with them."

"We want it to be a giant party," he said. "We want people to dance and join in singing. We want everyone to have fun."

Aside from the vendors, there will be many competitions and prizes. Attendees will participate in contests involving Hula-hoop talent, dancing, greenwheat outfits and more. The grand prize will be a Gibson Acoustic guitar. Other prizes include compact discs, T-shirts and more.

Though no food will be sold by the vendors, both Hudson's and Woodstock's Pizza will be having specials all day. K-BEAR will provide free Snapple.

K-BEAR Radio has also gotten listeners intrigued with Woodstock by sending two to the upcoming concert, Woodstock II.

A drawing held August 5, Wayne Dawley of Santa Maria and Justin Goodwin of Nipomo each won a pair of tickets to go to Woodstock II.

"A lot of the bands that reached legendary status got their start at Woodstock," he said. "It was the culmination of the whole love and peace and freedom thing." Dunleavy concurred, saying, "People have always been intrigued with Woodstock. We are hoping this event will draw people from both generations."

"We hope people will get dressed up and get into the mood of the celebration. It is a chance for today's generation to get a flavor for what it has been like 25 years ago for us."

The federal government also appropriated $15 million as first-year funding to convert the facilities. State funding was allocated this summer.

Governor Wilson signed a July 8, 1994 charter campus concept bill to establish the Monterey Bay campus, according to a July 12 press release by the Governor’s Office.

State funding was allocated to a July 12 press release by the Governor’s Office, further clarifying Munitz’ s statement by interpreting Munitz’ s statement to mean Cal Poly would help absorb the cost of building the Monterey campus would be absolutely untrue.

U.S. downs Germany at Poly meet

Bruce Jenner, Bob Mathias, the Dan & Dave duo and other decathlon greats visited Cal Poly to watch Team USA best Germany in the VIBAUSA Decathlon Dual.

The second annual track and field games between the Americans and Germany's Zehnkampf team lured more than 300 people to the track Aug. 6 and 7. With points adding up in the thousands, the Americans outperformed the German decathletes by 421 points with a score of 34,994.

Competing beneath American and German flags, the event brought out the best in the decathletes, who set several new world records in the 100-meter sprint, 100-meter hurdles, 400-meter sprint, shot put, discuss throw, long jump and the 1500-meter sprint.

With points adding up in the ten events, breaking or tying meet records in several events and taking first place overall, "The crowd helps a lot as the decathlon goes on," Long said on his way to tying the meet pole vault record. The crowd often clapped rhythmically to help spur on contestants.

"We never had dual meets," said Mathias, a two-time Olympic gold medalist. "We just had a couple of international meets. The U.S.-German meet is just tremendous."

Jenner, who won the Olympic gold 20 years ago, said there should be plenty of duel and international meets every year.

"The problem with his sport is you can (compete) in only three years," Jenner said. "You train 365 days a year, but you can only do a few of these things. Any more than that and you'll burn yourself out."

He sent the discus flying to 166 feet, the farthest of the competition.

Team Zehnkampf, which means "ten struggles," rarely obtained more than one seat in the top three spots of any of the events. But the U.S. team's weak spot proved to be the pole vault, as two American athletes failed to make their starting heights and received zero points for that event.

"The pole vault) plays tricks on your mind," Jenner said. "You know the javelin's going to land in the grass, and the shot put is going to fall somewhere."

"The pole vault is technically the most difficult," he said. "It's the last question mark (in the decathlon)."

Stand-outs during the decathlon included U.S. team captain Rob Muizo in the discuss and shot put, and Germany's muscular Norbert Damm, whose loud grunts emphasized his long-distance javelin, discuss, and shot put throws.

SLO to host statewide tourney for 200 youth soccer teams

"(The Flying Tomatoes) are doing great," he said. "They just got back from a tournament... in Huntington Beach, and I wasn't expecting them to do as well as they did. They got into the finals round.

Agribusiness freshman Dave Abern plays midfield for the Tomatoes and said he thinks the local teams will do well this weekend.

"We're looking pretty good," he said. "We're getting some (incoming Cal Poly freshmen) players from Fresno, and that'll help a lot."

The main event of the tournament looks to be an international competition between England's Queenspark Rangers and the state champs Clovis United Heat Aug. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at San Luis Obispo High School.

Admission to all events is free with teams playing at Mustang Stadium, Cuesta College, San Luis Obispo High School and Laguna Junior High School.
