Poly ranks as top ten university

By Rebecca Strick
Daily Staff Writer

In the past eight years, Cal Poly has ranked high among America's best colleges in the West. And according to the Sept. 26 issue of U.S. News and World Report on America's Best Colleges, this year Cal Poly is in the top 10.

In the most recent ratings, Cal Poly jumped from 11th to sixth among universities in the West. Ratings like this usually make students and administrators proud.

"I'm glad we are in the rankings generally," said Cal Poly Public Affairs spokesman Bob Anderson.

Education gradient student Amy Bobbitt agreed.

"I'm glad to attend a school with a high ranking," Bobbitt told reporters Thursday.

U.S. troops oust Haitian soldiers

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - The United States muscled toward total military control of Haiti on Thursday, breaking up its heavy weapons, guarding key areas and arresting militants and giving U.S. troops more leeway to use force.

American forces also planned to move into the countryside and take over the training of rural police forces notorious for their harsh repression of civilians.

"The progress in the last 72 hours has been quite remarkable. And our view is that Haiti today is better off than it was yesterday," U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schräger told reporters Thursday.

"We're still alive so I can't complain. I am very happy to collaborate," said a Haitian soldier who would not give his name. "If there was any time in fighting.

Increasing awareness of women's issues

By Amy Hooper
Daily Staff Writer

Although Poly's Center for Women and Ethnic Issues no longer exists, a commitment to women's issues remains.

With the creation of the ethnic studies minor, that aspect of the center found a home within an academic program as well as the Multicultural Center, leaving women's issues on its own.

Pat Harris, coordinator of the newly christened Women's Programs and Services, sees students as "a really powerful force" in bringing about change on campus.

For instance, Harris views the percentage of female professors and administrators as an aspect ripe for improvement.

"If Women's Programs and Services does the job that I think it should do," she said, "it will raise the awareness of the students to the fact that they are seen.

Architecture students now can take their professor home with new video lecture

By Kelly Koeing
Daily Staff Writer

A professor stands at the front of a class, lecturing to a room full of backpack-toting, note-getting students.

But this quarter students in professor Howard Weisenthal's Architecture Arts 226 C class will be glancing at a video screen rather than a live lecture.

This is the second quarter Weisenthal's class has been taught on video.

"Students are busy people," Weisenthal said. "Why punish them? If you're tired, why be in a classroom?"

Instead, he said, students are given the freedom to watch the video either their own time or during the regularly scheduled class time. They are just required to know the material before midterms and the final exam.

Weisenthal tapes his hour-long lectures using overheads, samples and slides as if he were teaching in front of his class "live," he said.

The videos are available at Kennedy Library and in the audio visual department. The lecture is also shown on campus television monitors daily at 12 p.m., 5 p.m. and 8 p.m.

But despite the convenience, some students disagree with Weisenthal's innovative teaching technique. They said they would rather be taught live and be able to ask him questions after class.

"Weisenthal would be so much better live," said first-year architecture student Peter Moinisakis. "He seems dry in front of the camera."

Moinisakis, a transfer student, said he appreciates the one-on-one contact he became accustomed to at junior college.

"I learned to appreciate chats with the professors," he said. "I will miss that."

According to Weisenthal, the student-teacher contact is still there. He answers questions during office hours and through e-mail. He added that he has interacted with more of his students since moving his lectures to video.

Recent Cal Poly grad dies in SLO

Professor's daughter remembered as 'beautiful, adventurous person'

By Ajoy Bhambani
Daily Staff Writer

A 23-year-old Cal Poly political science graduate died Wednesday morning in her San Luis Obispo home.

Ann Berry Weatherby died from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to spokespersons for the San Luis Obispo Police Department and County Counsel's Office. She lived on the 1000 block of George Street.

Police emphasized the cause of death report is preliminary, pending an autopsy.

Weatherby, daughter of Cal Poly political science professor Joseph Weatherby, graduated from Cal Poly last December with a bachelor's degree in political science.

Born in San Luis Obispo, she was described by her family as an outdoor enthusiast, an avid snow skier and an outstanding athlete.

"She was a very special young lady, beautiful inside, beautiful outside," said Sarah Stephens, Weatherby's aunt, in a phone conversation from Texas. "She was a very neat girl."

Stephanie's thoughts were echoed by other people close to Weatherby.

"She was a beautiful and adventurous person," said Weatherby's roommate, architecture senior Margo Jaime. "Her Recognizing warning signals early may help prevent tragedy, according to Cal Poly Director of Psychological and Health Services.

Jim Aiken said the largest number of suicides and attempted suicides in the United States are committed by those between the ages of 18 and 29.

"Approximately 6.6 students (attempt suicide) on a national average," Aiken said.

Aiken cited depression as the major theme underlying suicide attempts.

Brown calls Wilson 'weasel' in new television commercial

By Doug Willis

SACRAMENTO — Democrat Kathleen Brown calls Gov. Pete Wilson a "weasel" for refusing to agree to debate her in a new television commercial that will air Thursday.

The 10-second commercial features an unflattering picture of Wilson alternating with film of a weasel darting through bushes, while an announcer says, "What do you call someone who won't debate? That's right — a weasel."

The ad concludes with the telephone number of Wilson's statewide headquarters, and urges voters to call it to pressure Wilson to debate Brown.

Wilson campaign spokesman Dan Schuur said the "weasel"

Multi-culturalism: An open bazaar of ideas

By Jennifer Oltmann

There is a great new concept rising through the ranks of academia: multi-culturalism. The world's got a nice ring to it. It sounds worldly, intelligent, non-judgmental, accepting, and encompassing. Since discovering this idea, I've given it a lot of thought. I've even started using it selectively, all the while pondering its true meaning.

What is multi-culturalism? The name implies a school of thought; an ideology. It sounds like a bandwagon upon which people from many ethnic backgrounds are congregating. It sounds like social awareness.

Multi-culturalism means more than "we better start thinking differently, because we are no longer the simple majority, and soon, we will be the minority." It means more than giving African Americans, Latinos, and Asians equal time. It means more than acknowledging "people of color." It means acceptance, equality, and collective individualism. It means no longer using the term "minority group." It means understanding that ethnicity is more than color; it's a way of life.

As I walked across campus the other night, I felt genuinely happy to be back. Here on campus, multi-culturalism abounds. It roams the halls and teaches the classes. Multi-culturalism is about long hair and short hair. It means understanding that ethnicity is more than color; it's a way of life.

Multi-culturalism is about appreciating that Americans of non-English speaking ethnic groups should be able to preserve and practice elements of their own culture. My roommate, also a Cal Poly student, is a German native. I enjoy listening to her talk to her family, even though I can't understand their language. So I'm finally fulfilling my language requirement for my major. I put it off because I saw learning another language as being more work than I was willing to do. But suddenly, in our multicultural society, even being bilingual is limiting.

Multi-culturalism is about learning that ethnicity is more than color, it's a way of life. Multi-culturalism means more than "we better start thinking differently, because we are no longer the simple majority, and soon, we will be the minority." It means no longer using the term "minority group." It means understanding that ethnicity is more than color, it's a way of life.

Unlike post-modernism, which ranged through its decade like an afterthought, multi-culturalism is fluid and dynamic and alive. It's about the changes that are taking place in our society. It is the product of a socially responsible environment. Multi-culturalism says "we represent all segments of society."

Our grandparents called America the melting pot. This was a place where people from other countries could come and be Americans; and being American was synonymous with freedom.

America is still the melting pot, but Americanism has been replaced by multi-culturalism. The guiding principle is still the same; Like capitalism, multi-culturalism is a free marketplace.

A class dedicated entirely to multi-culturalism is being offered at Cal Poly. Appropriately, it is a journalism class, since mass media is a reflection of society. This class will offer a different perspective than ethnic studies. Rather than looking at other cultures in America, it will look at the diversity that makes up America. Yes, it will focus on "people of color" in the media, but it will both recognize these people and begin to erase the line between "us" and "them." It will look at other cultures not as something different to be "added in," but as our composite.

There's a true meaning of multi-culturalism. I'm proud of this.

Multi-culturalism is about thinking differently, because we are no longer the simple majority, and soon, we will be the minority. It means no longer using the term "minority group." It means understanding that ethnicity is more than color, it's a way of life.

There's a true meaning of multi-culturalism. I'm proud of this.

Lt. Governor candidate visits Poly

By Shane Memory

The Republican Party nominee for Lieutenant Governor made a stop at Cal Poly on Thursday as part of her campaign tour, pledging to make education a priority if elected.

Cathie Wright, a State senator for Ventura County, toured the campus, talked with administrators and visited several classes. She said she was interested in gauging students’ opinion of Cal Poly.

“This is a school that stands out as different,” Wright said. “There’s a different atmosphere at Northridge, the (California State University) in my district.”

Wright, who represents Ventura County, went on to say that she thought there was a great deal of diversity among the students at Cal Poly.

“Northridge is larger and the students are more urban,” Wright said. “I am impressed with the students here. They seem to have specific goals and know what they want.”

If elected, Wright said she would sit on both the CSU Board of Trustees and the UC Board of Regents. She said education budget issues are a primary concern for her.

“I want to make the whole system more cost effective,” she said.

Improving the state’s economy is one method of attaining more money for education, Wright said.

“Until the economy gets better, there will be difficult times for education,” she said.

Mandela to urge investment in South Africa promises to help post-apartheid Mandela, 76, made nine appearance last weekend and keeps a schedule full of meetings and economic growth to provide building, schools, hospitals; stems from his desire not to of­ poorer black majority. Federalists do not have more power than they are trying to court U.S. business. "I wouldn't like to be deeply involving in problems in other areas of the world because we have got some crucial problems in our country which require our attention," he said.

Mandela visited the United States last year, but this will be his first trip as South Africa's leader. His itinerary includes visits with President Clinton and an address to the U. N. General Assembly.

Mandela said he had no plans to raise tough issues as Cuba with Clinton, with whom he claims "good" relations and speaks by telephone often.

Mandela also refrained from commenting directly on Clinton's sending of U.S. troops to Haiti to enforce an agreement restoring the elected government. He said he would discuss a request by Clinton for South African police

Mandela's ANC won more than 62 percent of the April vote, but it has included former President F.W. de Klerk's National Party and the rival Zulu Nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party in the Cabinet.

The unity government has promoted the need for stability and economic growth to provide money to pay for the development plan. When pushed, he has upgraded his traditional labor allies for a series of strikes that he said hurt the economy and scare offforeign investors. Army troops moved in Tuesday to disperse striking truckers blocking a major highway.

Mandela said people must be realistic. Lack of trained worker, proper communications, even roads and buildings in some areas makes rapid development impossible, he said.

WOMEN: Harris urges students to instigate change, make positive contributions quality,' then I'd say, 'Yes, you are a feminist.'"

Martin Coleman

"It's just a belief that everyone should be afforded equal opportunity, but I certainly have no intention of showing my feminist or political beliefs down anyone's throat."

During Harris' 10 years on campus, she has seen the climate improve, but she says, "we have a long way to go."

Professor Willi Coleman, former director of the Center for Women and Ethnic Issues, agrees.

"This is the last stronghold," she said. "It is the last campus in the CSU system to get ethnic studies and women's studies."

But Coleman is not categoricaly negative about Cal Poly.

"We are truly a pretty good good school," she said. "We do some good educating here. We just have blinders on in certain areas."

HAITI: U.S. officials say situation improving

From page 1 we would have. There is no reason to fight our American brothers."

Ruling Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras is balking at leaving the country and parliament remained divided over proposed amnesty for the military.

Cedras, a key leader of the 1991 coup that overthrew elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, and the other military leaders have to surrender control under the U.S.-Haiti accord, but he isn't required to leave the country.

U.S. Army Col. Barry Willey, a spokesman for the joint military task force overseeing the operation to restore democracy to Haiti, said Thursday that American soldiers should use their discretion in using force.

Since tear-gassing and beating people bloody on Tuesday, Haitian police have shown more restraint in dispersing crowds that come to the port to watch the arrival of more and more American troops.

In the capital Thursday, U.S. troops occupied the capital's military airfield just north of La Saline, the slum where Aristide, a former Roman Catholic priest, once preached at his parish church. The 100 Haitian soldiers on duty did not resist.

A convoy of nine Bradley fighting vehicles and six Hum-Vees arrived at Haiti's only weapons depot in the suburb of Petionville Thursday morning to begin taking the army's heavy weapons apart.

The weapons company helped spearhead Aristide's ouster. To be dismantled are decades-old, poorly maintained heavy equipment including six V-150 armored vehicles, anti-aircraft weapons and heavy artillery.

The United States also sent out troops to guard pro-democracy Haitian leaders including Port-au-Prince Mayor Evans Paul, former campaign manager for Aristide, Schragel said.

"We will secure them as long as necessary until we establish a stable and secure environment," he said.

Most Haitians seem to welcome the more than 9,000 U.S. troops that had arrived by Thursday morning. As many as 15,000 U.S. troops are eventually to be deployed.

Haitian volunteers began cleaning up and repairing downtown streets, and most of the shops that have been closed in recent months began opening their doors. Street vendors clogged the streets.

The volunteer crews recalled those that helped clean up the capital after dictator Jean-Claude (Baby Doc) Duvalier fled the country and during Aristide's presidential campaign and before his inauguration.
Sacramento challenges U.S. immigration policy

By Nicholas R. Gonesis
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Pete Wilson said Thursday that California is bringing a lawsuit against the federal government for paying for the care of illegal immigrants, and he demanded that the federal government pay for care of the invaders.

Declaring the federal government is shirking its constitutional duty to protect the state from foreign invasion, Wilson spokeswoman said.

"The massive and unlawful migration of foreign nationals, on the scale alleged above, constitutes an invasion of the state of California against which the United States is obligated to protect California," the lawsuit said.

The invasion argument was included in the third lawsuit filed by the state against the federal government this year seeking payment for the costs of illegal aliens. This one seeks reimbursement for educating illegal immigrant children.

Herman Baca of the Committee on Children's Rights in San Diego said use of the invasion argument was clearly a political play.

"That's part of the hate-filled campaign at the strategies of politicians like Gov. Pete Wilson," Baca said.

"There's a definite effort by think tanks to create an apartheid state here in California because of the burgeoning number of persons of Mexican ancestry," he said.

Wilson, a Republican seeking re-election, has pounded on the issue of illegal immigrants for more than a year. It is credited with helping lift him from a major deficit to a lead over Democrat Kathleen Brown in some polls.

The massive and unlawful migration of foreign nationals, on the scale alleged above, constitutes an invasion of the state of California against which the United States is obligated to protect California, the lawsuit said. Immigration checkpoint axed, agents go to Mexican border

SAN DIEGO — The Border Patrol, apparently switching direction, said Thursday it will close one of two freeway checkpoints during a test period to study the two stations' effectiveness.

Current plans for Operation Gatekeeper, an immigration control initiative outlined by U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno last weekend, include the transfer of 95 agents working at the busy Interstate 5 checkpoint, according to Ann Summers, spokeswoman for the Border Patrol.

That announcement was a switch from previous announcements by the Border Patrol in the last week, as it has struggled with the logistics, and politics, of what will be an unprecedented move.

Reno said Operation Gatekeeper is intended to match the sophistication of a Border Patrol blockade in El Paso.

The Border Patrol will deploy more than 200 extra agents in San Diego, fingerprinting and checking for repeat offenders and wanted criminals, prosecutors and smugglers more aggressively and continue installing lights and fences.

The number of agents actually guarding the border, currently about 190 a shift, will at least double, Summers said.

Immigration officials will also conduct a study to determine the effectiveness of a checkpoint's border crackdown's effect on activity at the Tecate-Mexico checkpoint, and the ultimate fate of the two stations.

Politicians and other critics want the checkpoint closed because of safety, traffic and civil liberty issues. They say the forces would be more effective at the border.

Although some immigration officials agree, others believe the checkpoints are a second line of defense against drug and immigrant smuggling.

Aiken said this attitude, which may lead a person to con­ template suicide, stems from four types of situations which cause depression.

A serious personal loss such as the death of a loved one may lead to depression. A second cause is a feeling of alienation, where a person doesn't feel like they fit in anywhere.

Sometimes people may have the attitude that "something happened beyond my control, I can't do anything about." Aiken said. People who fit this category are usually the victims of rape, kidnapping or some type of crime.

FOOTBALL: Cossacks bring big play offense south to Saturday’s game

Steve Rudull, who has 20 tackles and two pass deflections in two contests.

Senior linebackers Jay Wells and David Brown have also been play stoppers, with 11 tackles and seven tackles, respectively. The Mustangs will be hurt by the loss of junior defensive and Junior Tuavia, who suffered a knee injury in last weekend’s contest.

“We need to control the line of scrimmage on both offense and defense to be effective,” Patterson said. “We had some break­ downs in defense last week and this week we need to come out and do what we’ve been taught to do.”

“If we take care of the job on defense, the offense will take care of itself.”

According to Patterson, the Cossacks present a challenge for the Mustangs on both sides of the ball. Despite Sonoma State’s losing record, they’ve played some of the most competitive teams in the West, including third-ranked Montana and St. Mary’s. The Cossacks lone win came against Chico State, 50-23.

“The Cossacks are a very athletic football team,” Patterson said. “They are capable of some big plays with some very good wide receivers.”

They have a big defensive line but their secondary has been vulnerable to the pass attack.”

The Cossacks are led offensively by junior quarterback Ryan Merrill (56-for-107, 544 yards, four touchdowns, two interceptions) and junior running back Tyrone Gallien, who has rushed for 303 yards on 36 carries plus a touchdown.

Wide receiver Derek Minnette leads the team with 16 receptions for 223 yards and two touchdowns with Tyrone Gallien posing an additional threat with 10 catches for 95 yards and a pair of scores.

Defensively, the Cossacks are paced by senior linebacker Bob Abbott with 22 tackles and a pair of sacks and senior free safety Augustine May, with 21 tackles and two pass breakups over three games.

“We’re similar to Cal Poly in a lot of respects,” said Cossack Head Coach Frank Scalercio. “We have a pretty balanced offense, but we’ve had one good week running the ball and one bad week.”

“Just like Cal Poly, we’re going to have to play mistake free football to have a good game.”

Scalercio said that after playing two tough opponents (Montana and St. Mary’s), his team is pretty banged up physically going into Saturday’s contest.

“Our effectiveness will depend on how physically fit we are when we get to Cal Poly,” he said. “We’re capable of having a big game, we just need to have our people healthy.”

Athletics Department creates 3 new positions, fills another

By Lori Witmer

Moving up to a higher level of competition is not an easy thing to do. Not only has the move to Division I been difficult for Cal Poly athletes, but it also has created more of a strain for the Athletics Department.

With this transition comes the need for expansion and the department has responded by creating three new positions, all of which have been filled.

"The positions are a part of the transition to the move to Division I," Athletics Director John McCutcheon said. "(The department is) trying to live up to our commitment to the student athletes and make sure we stay in compliance with the NCAA regulations and meet the needs of the athletes."

Chris Del Conte filled the position of athletic development assistant and seems to enjoy it. "The potential here is amazing," Del Conte said. "The combination of the student body and the university to athletics is really great — it's one of the main reasons why I came here."

According to Del Conte, he and his department are working on programs to help fund the Athletics Department in the move to Division I. "I'm sure we will have something of that sort," he says he is familiar with.

He has previously worked on several fund raisers for the athletics department at Washington State in addition to working in event management and academic counseling.

"I hope to bring my experience from Washington State with the PAC 10 and the knowledge of what it takes to run a major department," Del Conte said. "I hope to bring added energy to the staff."

Another new energetic face that recently joined the athletics staff is Loretta La Mar. La Mar was a graduate of Stanford University and received a law degree from the University of Oregon School of Law. While at Oregon she was an administrative assistant to the faculty athletic representative.

La Mar's position at Cal Poly is NCAA compliance and eligibility coordinator, which means she is responsible to track athletic eligibility of all students and make sure no rules are being broken.

"I'll be educating people on the rules so we stay within the regulations," La Mar said. "I like it so far, although I've had to get things running quickly."

The third new position, athletic academic adviser, was filled by Camille Filardo who came to Cal Poly with varied experience — from the community college level up to Division I.

Filardo received her master's in Athletic Counseling from Springfield College in Massachusetts and has since served as an athletic counselor at the University of Nebraska, Mount San Antonio College and UC-Arizona.

Filardo described her position as an "academic adviser/counselor," as she pointed out that she is basically a support system for student athletes.

"I help them with any academic concerns or problems they might have," Filardo said. "Making sure student athletes matriculate towards a degree is something I firmly believe in."

Filardo said she had many reasons for choosing Cal Poly, including the area and the people she is working with, but she said it was a "very challenging decision."

"I'm responsible for all student athletes on campus and at other schools (the academic counselor) might only be responsible for a few," Filardo said. "But I'll be educating people on the rules so we stay within the regulations."

Zing: Don't get caught up in 'Baseball' nostalgia

By Bobi Jeydil
July Senior Editor

Baseball is as American as mom, apple pie and a Fourth of July parade. But baseball isn't supposed to be about salary caps, revenue sharing or the politics of greed.

But 'Baseball'—the 18-hour documentary airing on PBS this week—will do so. And no, Zing says, he wasn't pleasantly surprised by how much of his own material was used.

Still, Zingg says the nostalgic tone of the series might go too far. "It's a wonderful game, but I don't think it's sacred," Zingg said, chuckling as he added that "attempting to elevate baseball to the realm of theology is a bit much."

Zingg points out that the current divisive issues in baseball are nothing new. "What we saw in 1904 we saw in 1804," he said. "Owners were talking about salary caps in the 1900s, about alternative leagues in the 1870s and there's been talk of unscrupulous owners and players throughout the history of the game."

Since the Cincinnati Red Stockings, the first all-salaried team, took to the fields in 1869, debates over money have been a part of the game, Zingg said. "Here's a team that went more than 80 consecutive games without a loss, and when they did lose—by one point, in extra innings—there was a public outcry over whether they were being paid enough to win."

While Zingg said professional baseball has always been mired in greed, there's a quality of the game that interests him as a historian. "The game's early days. And to keep their emotions in check as they watch the series."

"It was really gratifying to see how much attention (Hooper) got," Zingg said. Although Zingg hadn't seen the series in full before this week, he said he was pleasantly surprised by how much of his own material was used.

"This 'national treasure' has been served as a consultant to the filmmakers of "Baseball," warns fans, "don't get caught up in the nostalgia... even embarrassing at times," Zingg said.

"Business is a necessary aspect." Zingg said, "but not to let that interfere with my enjoyment of the game."

"Baseball has provided a common ground—a common experience for Americans," Zingg said. Still, Zingg said he is somewhat unfounded with what he called the "naive-romantic" version of the "Baseball" series.

"It's overly sentimental, overly nostalgic... even embarrassing at times," Zingg said.

"It's a wonderful game, but I don't think it's sacred," Zingg said, chuckling as he added that "attempting to elevate baseball to the realm of theology is a bit much."

Zingg says, "as silly as that idea might be, it has a powerful emotional aspect."

Zingg contributed to the series by providing the filmmakers with the diary kept by Red Sox right fielder Harry Hooper during his rookie season in 1909. Zingg also consulted "Baseball's" producers on the status of the sport and player's private lives at the turn of the century, Zingg's book—"Harry Hooper: An American Baseball Life"—is one of his two recent books about American baseball history and is quoted in the series.

Junior middle blocker Allison Brady also is another experienced veteran who leads the team with 26 blocks.

Among the key newcomers who have contributed, freshman outside hitter Amy Aberle tops the list. Aberle leads the team in kills (135) and is second with 44 digs.

"She's been a pleasant surprise," Cummings said. "Hers is the kind of game that interests him as a historian."

Women's soccer to host LMU tonite

The Mustang women's soccer team (3-2-1) hopes to counter an aggressive Loyola Marymount team by playing at full pressure for 90 minutes on Friday (tonight). The Lions, 6-2-2, took the league lead last game and are expected to have a high-scoring performance from the Mustangs.

"We've been waiting the past six games to bust one loose," Crozier said. "We started to click last game and should come together (tonight)."

Last weekend the Mustangs were shutout 2-0 by No. 15-ranked Washington on Sunday to break Oregon State's nine game winning streak in a 3-2 victory. Kolleen Kansas scored two goals and Wendy Jones scored one. The Mustangs will play again on Sunday at UCLA at 2 p.m.

Men's soccer heads south for a pair

Men's soccer at Cal Poly hit the big time with moderate success. The Mustangs have a 4-3 record so far in their first season of Division I and have played only two at home. Seven more away games are scheduled before the Sept. 30 deadline, and eight against teams ranked higher.

Of the seven games played this season the soccer team has played only two at home. Seven more away games are scheduled before the Sept. 30 deadline. The Mustangs are headed to play UC-Irvine, 7 p.m. today, at UC-Irvine and to UC-Santa Barbara on Saturday.

Santa Clara and Northern Illinois make up the Pacific West Conference (1-2, 0-0 Northern Illinois) which predates two-touchdown game more effective." Fisher's primary targets include sophomore wide receivers Jon Perk (seven receptions, 113 yards) and Ryan Meen (four receptions, 114 yards, one touchdown). Senior split end Judd Davis also be looking at the backfield for additional yardage through the air.

The Mustangs are led defensively by senior defensive back Clara Bartkoski. Last year, Bartkoski was ranked nationally for most assists. She needs 56 more to move into third place.

SSU in the way of Poly's elusive first win

By Tim Vincent

Though Cal Poly's inaugural football season at the Division I-AA level has been less than spectacular after two games, the Mustangs look to break into the win column tomorrow night.

The Mustangs (0-2, 0-0 in the American West Conference) host Sonoma State (1-2, 0-0 Northern California Athletic Conference) Saturday at 6 p.m. in a non-conference matchup against the Division II Cossacks.

The Mustangs are coming off of a 28-10 loss to Humboldt State while the Cossacks fell to St. Mary's, 45-21.

"We've had a tremendous week of practice," first-year Head Coach Andre Patterson said. "The players are eager to compete and show what they are capable of." With sophomore running back Jacques Jordan still out of the lineup with a knee injury, most of the offensive pressure will fall on the shoulders of junior quarterback Mike Fisher.

The Mustangs were limited to just 68 net yards rushing last week against Humboldt State.

Fisher, who ranks fifth all-time among Cal Poly quarterback in yardage, had a stellar 1993 campaign, setting university marks for touchdowns in a season (22) and total offense average with 219 yards per game.

The junior completed 15 of 34 passes against the Lumberjacks' 197 yards and three touchdowns but was picked off four times.

"The keys to winning the game will be maintaining ball security while creating turnovers," Patterson said. "Fisher was down on Sunday and started to come out of it on Monday. He's as anxious as the rest of the team to get back on the field.

"At the same time, we must create more seams for the backs to run in order to make the passing game more effective."

Fisher's primary targets include sophomore wide receivers Jon Perk (seven receptions, 113 yards) and Ryan Meen (four receptions, 114 yards, one touchdown). Senior split end Judd Davis also be looking at the backfield for additional yardage through the air.

The Mustangs are led defensively by senior defensive back Clara Bartkoski. Last year, Bartkoski was ranked nationally for most assists. She needs 56 more to move into third place.

"Later that evening, Cal Poly ran into Idaho (1-1), the eventual winners of the tournament. After taking the first game, Cal Poly fell to the Vandals in three straight games, 12-15, 15-7, 15-10, 15-3.

On Sunday, Cal Poly fell to No. 24-ranked San Diego to finish the tournament. The Jaguars jumped out to an early lead in all the games and held on for a 16-14, 15-11, 15-13 victory.

"We gave Idaho their toughest match of the tournament," Cummings said. "They had good hitters on the outside. We tried to adjust by moving our middle blockers over but they made the adjustment of going down the middle on us."

"Against San Diego, we were at a disadvantage. They are the best team on paper."

Entering this season, Cal Poly lost its top two would-be returnees in Jennifer Kaylor and Megan Androvich. Kaylor led the team in kills and blocks. Androvich led the team in digs and was second in kills. Kaylor, who led the team in kills and blocks, transferred to UC-Santa Barbara. Androvich, who led last year's team in digs and was second in kills, left school.

Cummings acknowledged the losses hurt the Mustangs in terms of experience, but added that a number of players have taken their place.

"Last year," Cummings said. "Kaylor and Androvich were the key players. This year, a number of people have stepped up to the plate that we don't have a key player."

One of this year's focal points is senior setter and team captain Carrie Bartkoski. Last year, Bartkoski was ranked nationally in most assists per game. This year, she is averaging 10.87 assists per game and leads the team in digs (85) and service aces (13).

Bartkoski ranks fourth on the Cal Poly all-time list for most assists. She needs 56 more to move into third place.

Cummings describes her as "a team leader." For her part, Bartkoski gives much credit to her new teammates for contributing so much so early.

"For being such a young team we're proving to ourselves that we can play," Bartkoski said. "I think the whole team has been doing a good job."
