ELECTION RESULTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>GOVERNOR</th>
<th>Percentage of Votes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pete Wilson</td>
<td>55%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>US SENATOR</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dianne Feinstein*</td>
<td>47%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MAYOR</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Allen K. Settle</td>
<td>47.3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>COUNCIL</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dodie Williams</td>
<td>26.8%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bill Roalman</td>
<td>28.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>US REPRESENTATIVE</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Undetermined</td>
<td>Andrea Searstrand</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Walter Cappo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>STATE SENATOR</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jack O'Connell</td>
<td>53.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>STATE ASSEMBLY</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tom Bordonaro</td>
<td>56.3%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

All results are preliminary. *This race was extremely close. Percent given was the latest available at press time.

PROPOSITIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Propositions</th>
<th>Yes</th>
<th>No</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Roll and Clean Air Road</td>
<td>181</td>
<td>183</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Three Strikes</td>
<td>184</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gas Tax Hike</td>
<td>185</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Single-Payer Health</td>
<td>186</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Immigration</td>
<td>187</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smoking</td>
<td>188</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sexual Assault</td>
<td>189</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judicial Performance</td>
<td>190</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Justice Courts</td>
<td>191</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

88 percent of votes.

Republics seize Congress for first time in 40 years

By John King Associated Press

Resurgent Republicans moved to seize control of Congress for the first time in 40 years Tuesday, capturing the Senate and making a stunning showing in the House. The GOP won a string of governorships, too, in a conservative wave that sent Republicans for first time in 40 years "The burden of government is now on them," said Clinton press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

Republicans also won races for governors in seven of the eight most populous states — more bad news for Clinton when he seeks re-election in two years. Those wins gave Republicans the majority of governorships for the first time in a quarter century.

Bill and Hillary, start pack­ting now," GOP strategist Rich

-- See REPUBLICANS, page 6

---

*He concentrated on these is­ sues — jobs, immigration and crime," Gorton said. "He has a great record with these issues.

"He is a great governor, just the kind of leader we expect him to be. It's a huge win for Pete. We're very ex­ cited."

Brown conceded the election to Wilson at 10:15 p.m. with an inspiring speech of victory. "We are a great state," she urged. "Do not give, do not turn your back on democracy or politics. And finally, do not give up on what you believe in." "Tonight we must accept the verdict of the people of Califor­nia."

See GOVERNOR, page 3

---

More on elections inside

- Feinstein and Huffington lock up in a nail-biter, p. 2
- Settle becomes mayor of S.L.O., p. 3
- Roalman, Williams to sit on Council, p. 3
- Students come out to vote, p. 9
- Bordonaro heads for State Senate, p. 9
- Roalman, Williams to sit on Council, p. 3
- Students lose bid for school board, p. 9

---

Winner's song

Early in the evening, even before most results were in, preliminary reports showed Bill Roalman comfortably winning one of two open seats on the San Luis Obispo City Council. Also capturing a seat on the Council was Dodie Williams. Allen Settle was elected S.L.O.'s next mayor. For full local coverage, see stories, pages 3 and 9. Daily photo by L. Scott Robinson.

Wilson defeats Brown for 'four more' in office

By Nicole Mudge

After a bitter and costly battle, Republican Governor Pete Wilson easily defeated Democrat Kathleen Brown riding a wave of sentiment on antiterrorism and il­legal immigration.

With 71 percent of precincts reporting shortly before 2 a.m., Wilson led Brown by 16 percent, 2,333,288 votes to 1,819,022 votes.

Less than 20 minutes after the polls closed Tuesday, the Republicans were claiming victory. At this time Wilson's cam­paign manager George Gorton outlined the main issues of Wil­son's campaign to supporters.

"He concentrated on these is­ sues — jobs, immigration and crime," Gorton said. "He has a great record with these issues.

"He is a great governor, just the kind of leader we expect him to be. It's a huge win for Pete. We're very ex­ cited."

Brown conceded the election to Wilson at 10:15 p.m. with an inspiring speech of victory. "We are a great state," she urged. "Do not give, do not turn your back on democracy or politics. And finally, do not give up on what you believe in." "Tonight we must accept the verdict of the people of Califor­nia."
Arthritis Foundation Exercise Program
The Arthritis Foundation's "PACE: People with Arthritis Can Exercise" program is held from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. PACE is held at the Veteran's Memorial Building at 1000 Main St. in Cambria. The foundation offers another class called, "Twinges in the Hinges," — an aquatic exercise program for people with arthritis. This class costs $25 and is held in the Cambria Pines Lodge Pool. For more information, call (805)466-5117.

TODAY
Nature Hike to Shark Inlet • Meet at the west end of Butte Drive in Los Osos. Bring your own lunch and water, 9:30 a.m.
Nature Hike Exploring Oceano Lagoon and Pismo Dunes • Meet at the Oceano Campground, center of Pismo State Beach, 10 a.m.
College of Engineering Council • Meeto and entrance in Pismo State Beach, 10 a.m.
Women Miller's Vertical Reality • Los Osos. Bring your own lunch and water, 9:30 a.m.
Toastmasters • Meet at the west end of Butte Drive in Los Osos. Bring your own lunch and water, 9:30 a.m.

HUFFINGTON
today, Dianne Feinstein had 47 percent of the vote and Michael Huffington had 45 percent of the vote.
In early returns, weighted heavily by absentee ballots, Huffing­ton led Feinstein by 7 percent.
With 97 percent of the precincts reporting at 3 a.m.

With the outcome of the race still in limbo, the two camps had mixed feelings.

Huffington was in Costa Mesa, rallying with a plethora of supporters waving "Huffington for Senate" signs and cheered, "We like Mike!"

"The race is still too close to call," Huffington said. "It is clear that the Republicans are having an unbelievable victory in 1994."
Huffington gained supporters after pledging to cut federal taxes and get tough on crime and illegal immigration.
His lead was shaken late in the campaign when he admitted to hiring an illegal immigrant to care for his daughter.
Feinstein spoke to a crowd of supporters in the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco.
"The numbers are still coming in," Feinstein said. "I don't think we'll know a final result until tomorrow."
She hesitated to project plans for the future, saying she needs to see the results.
"Two years ago, you said, 'go to Washington and make a difference,'" Feinstein said. "And we have.

I really want you to be encouraged, and hopefully proud of this candidacy because I have worked hard."

Feinstein cited the Crime bill and a ban on assault weapons as two of her successes as a fresh­man senator.

Have you heard?
Find out here.

Mustang Daily

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1994

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1994

Huffington-Feinstein race 'too close to call' Ballots still rolled in during wee hours of the morning

By Cynthia L. Webb
Daily Student Managing Editor
As the clock rolled past midnight, California's heated Senate race was still undecided.

With 97 percent of the precincts reporting at 3 a.m.

Huffington had a narrow lead, but the outcome of the race was still in limbo, with both camps having mixed feelings.

Huffington was in Costa Mesa, rallying with a plethora of supporters waving "Huffington for Senate" signs and cheering, "We like Mike!"

"The race is still too close to call," Huffington said. "It is clear that the Republicans are having an unbelievable victory in 1994."
Huffington gained supporters after pledging to cut federal taxes and get tough on crime and illegal immigration.

"Two years ago, you said, 'go to Washington and make a difference,'" Feinstein said. "And we have.

Have you heard?
Find out here.

Mustang Daily
Settle wins SLO's mayoral race

By Ajoy Bhombani
City Hall

The four-way race for mayor of San Luis Obispo ended the way early polls had predicted — a run-off between two candidates with the remaining two inexperienced politicians falling out of the race.

Cal Poly political science professor and Vice Mayor Allen Settle battled neck to neck with City Councilmember Penny Rappa before Settle was declared the winner by a three-percent margin. Settle received 47.3 percent of the votes and Rappa had 44.4 percent. Author and actor Jim Scalle finished third with a mere 4 percent of the votes and Lark Jursec, a retired teacher, finished last at 3.9 percent.

Rappa, who still unofficial until final absentee ballots are tallied later today.

Rappa took control of the race early as she held a narrow four-point lead after absentees were tabulated and early precincts were tabulated in favor of Settle as the night progressed.

As results from more precincts were announced, Rappa moved closer before eventually passing Rappa. With 67 percent of the precincts tallied, Rappa had established a commanding lead, racking up 47 percent of the votes compared to Rappa's 44 percent. The lead remained stable through the rest of the night.

"We knew all along it was going to be a close race," Rappa said, adding that she refused to concede the race to Settle until all of the precincts were in. "This is the best campaign I've ever been in. I had support from every sector of the community."

Rappa and Settle both acknowledged that they knew they were in for a tight race.

"We had an inkling that it was going to be tight because our poll had him four points down," said Settle's campaign manager Tim Farrell, who worked diligently in eleventh-hour campaigning. "Our last-minute mailer to Cal Poly students may have done it. But I didn't think we were going to do as well as we thought with Cal Poly students."

Settle credited his victory to his campaign platform of local control of state issues.

"I think our campaign was as what to the basic issues were," Settle said. He added that he believed most of the support came on the downtown community and the Cal Poly student body.

"(Rappa) was more of a creature of the campaign and not a lot of specific," Settle said.

However, Rappa, who said she had not spoken to Settle in two years, vehemently disagreed with Settle's perception of the campaign.

"I think our campaign focused on what the present issues were, we personally stayed away from personal attacks," Rappa said.

While Settle criticized the way Rappa ran her campaign, he praised the concerns she had for the city and said they need to be addressed.

"She ran a good race," Settle said. "Because of the nature of the votes, some people believe that, yes, she did a great job, but we lost individual jobs and economic concerns need to be addressed.""One of the things (Allen) did right was his ads were up early and on the air often," Farrell said. "We wanted a campaign that coalesced with a unified theme, candidates can say they're going to do things, but (someone) can come down to your records and what you've done."

Go to page 4

Roalman and Williams win seats on SLO Council

By Maxine Gisinger
City Hall

On Tuesday councilmember Bill Roalman and newcomer Debbie Williams won a tight race to the incumbent-leaning San Luis Obispo City Council seats Tuesday after a close election.

Roalman won with a 28.4 percent return, with Williams following with 26.8 percent. Political science sophomore Maxi Frockh, a former councilmember for the Madonna Inn, received 20.4 percent. Former mayor and Pat Veesart, a general contractor, received 21.1 percent.

Both council members-elect were experts in the community. Williams said she was optimistic about winning.

"I think we've run a really good campaign," Williams said at the victory party. "I think our campaign has a very strong, united theme.

'The thing I'd do is to ask this group of people to continue to establish a good rapport," Williams said. "I think to work together, we need to know each other. We need a sense of minds to establish some direction."

At a pre-victory campaign party, Roalman said he felt positive and he was happy to be with friends but also glad the campaign was finally over.

"Because all four candidates had well-run campaigns, there was a restlessness and a pressure that was always there," Roalman said. "It's different when you're an incumbent. If you lose, you've given the boot. It's more personal.

Roalman's victory, Roalman said he was thankful for the support of students at Cal Poly.

"I'm very pleased that I've been able to be here for the change," Roalman said. "I'm also pleased with the mayoral outcome."

Roalman said the council's agenda will be to fill the position of Vice Mayor, vacant now that current Vice Mayor Allen Settle has been declared winner in San Luis Obispo's mayoral race.

See COUNCIL, page 6

GOVERNOR: Wilson claims early victory, Brown promises help

From page 1

Wilson vowed to help Wil­ lson "chart California through the difficult passage in our his­ tory. To take these crises we face from page 1

Wilson vowed to help Wilson "chart California through the difficult passage in our his­ tory. To take these crises we face

Wilson vowed to help Wilson "chart California through the difficult passage in our his­ tory. To take these crises we face
I believe in life at conception — and I'm pro-choice. In the mega-media world of three-and-a-half-second soundbites, these two statements appear the height of contradiction. But that's exactly the point; they're soundbites, which try to encapsulate a short phrase all the subtleties and moral thought of a book-length treatise. If you'll look back at my first sentence, you will see I did not use the more common phrase "Life begins at conception."

Life, in its modern form, has no beginning — it can only end... in death. A newborn emerging from the womb has already been living inside its mother for nine months, since it was conceived in a Fallopian tube by the merging of a sperm and egg (both living), which were donated by the zygote's mother and father — who have been alive since they each emerged from their mothers' wombs after nine months... ad infinitum.

As only one time in history is it believed life sprung from lifelessness... some 3 billion years ago, when amino acids swarmed in the shallows of some sun-irradiated tidal pool latched up into a self-replicating molecule. And even that change wasn't some giant leap, but simply a subtle shift which allowed for exponential increase. (Most human viruses have the complexity of a nuclear reactor compared with those earlier "life forms.")

So, of course I believe that a human embryo is alive at conception. The logical break between anti-abortionists and myself is in what significance to place on life's end.

Death is always a serious matter — particularly to someone like myself, who is pretty certain that after death we don't go anywhere, we just stop being. So we each have to develop a personal ethos for determining under what circumstances we would end a life.

I base mine on self-consciousness. I have a big problem with the thinking that realizes its going to die; and I don't mean "light or fight" impulses for self-preservation. I mean realizing that the guy wearing the hockey mask who is slowly walking across the room with a large kitchen knife will not be plunging that blade into your chest and removing your liver.

This definition of "consciousness" is further divided into entities so infinitesimally minute that they can't be approached in 360 different ways, just one — called Lake Pillsbury.

Lake Pillsbury is a natural paradise — a wild playground, high in the mountains, where people come to "get away from it all." Within seconds, the cops arrived, adding a new definition of consciousness. They beamed 500 watts of blinding light at the submerged vehicle.

"That's 'destruction of natural fish habitat.'" I realized that the human mind could not fathom the concept of a point. Let's define it as one single issue. Now, this point can be approached in 360 different ways, further divided into entities so infinitesimally minute that they can't be approached in 360 different ways, just one — called Lake Pillsbury.

Lake Pillsbury is a place where people can behave like mentally off-balanced yahoos without getting arrested for it.

For example, I recall a time when a guy tried driving his Chevy Blazer across the lake. Needless to say, his truck didn't make it. By the time water got up to the doors, the engine stalled.

Within seconds, the cops arrived, adding a new dimension to our understanding of the lake's natural fish habitat.

They beamed 500 watts of blinding light at the submerged Blazer, and began shouting orders at the interior driver... that's "destruction of natural fish habitat."

"You never know their ultimate destination might just coincide with your own. That is opinion backed by facts, my friend!"

Life, in its modern form, has no beginning — it can only end... in death. So, of course I believe that a human embryo is alive at conception.

"How horrible!" many will exclaim at my cavalier attitude toward the hitman embryo. I respond — potential. The embryo has no comprehension that it is in danger, possibly further divided into entities so infinitesimally minute that they can't be approached in 360 different ways, just one — called Lake Pillsbury.

Lake Pillsbury is a natural paradise — a wild playground, high in the mountains, where people come to "get away from it all." Within seconds, the cops arrived, adding a new definition of consciousness. They beamed 500 watts of blinding light at the submerged vehicle.

"That's 'destruction of natural fish habitat.'" I realized that the human mind could not fathom the concept of a point. Let's define it as one single issue. Now, this point can be approached in 360 different ways, further divided into entities so infinitesimally minute that they can't be approached in 360 different ways, just one — called Lake Pillsbury.

Lake Pillsbury is a place where people can behave like mentally off-balanced yahoos without getting arrested for it.

For example, I recall a time when a guy tried driving his Chevy Blazer across the lake. Needless to say, his truck didn't make it. By the time water got up to the doors, the engine stalled.

Within seconds, the cops arrived, adding a new dimension to our understanding of the lake's natural fish habitat.

They beamed 500 watts of blinding light at the submerged Blazer, and began shouting orders at the interior driver... that's "destruction of natural fish habitat."

"You never know their ultimate destination might just coincide with your own. That is opinion backed by facts, my friend!"

Life, in its modern form, has no beginning — it can only end... in death. So, of course I believe that a human embryo is alive at conception.

"How horrible!" many will exclaim at my cavalier attitude toward the hitman embryo. I respond — potential. The embryo has no comprehension that it is in danger, possibly further divided into entities so infinitesimally minute that they can't be approached in 360 different ways, just one — called Lake Pillsbury.
Discovery of possible AIDS trigger spurs hope scientists could halt the disease

By Anne Fahy-Morris

PHILADELPHIA — Scientists say they have discovered a protein that may activate the AIDS virus in the body and cause it to develop into AIDS.

The discovery by University of Pennsylvania scientists could lead to treatments that might enable infected people to put the human immunodeficiency virus on hold indefinitely. They still would carry the virus but might not contract the fatal disease itself.

AIDS-infected people can be healthy and live for years before the virus attacks the body's immune system.

A protein isolated from a gene in HIV carriers appears to tell infected cells when to start reproducing the virus, the researchers said in an article published Tuesday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

"We understand a new pathway the virus uses," study chief David Weiner, an assistant professor of pathology and medicine at Penn, said in a telephone interview. "We now have an opportunity to design drugs to inhibit it."

Dr. Nava Sarver, one of the chief scientists in the AIDS division of the National Institutes of Health, said the study is interesting but very preliminary.

"We understand a new pathway the virus uses. We now have an opportunity to design drugs to inhibit it." David Weiner, Researcher

Ex-con convicted of rerouting $2 million in cellular bills

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A federal judge sentenced an ex-convict to seven years and two months in prison for altering cellular telephone numbers and "clone" mobile phones. He said customers paid him about $100 charged to other customers.

Phillips allegedly earned about $30,000 rerouting cellular phones in the year before he was arrested, Tayback said.

Phillips was arrested following an October 1993 search of his home that followed a tip from an informant, Tayback said. Authorities found 20 cellular phones in various stages of being altered.

Federal agents also found two computers with software that enabled the user to alter the cell phone's internal serial numbers and charge the calls to a legitimate account holder.

Phillips pleaded guilty in July to possessing fraudulently altered cellular phones, account numbers and computer equipment used in the cloning process. He also admitted being a felon in possession of a stolen firearm.

U.S. District Judge Stephen Wilson sentenced Phillips to 86 months, including three months of supervised release, and ordered him to pay $30,000 in restitution to Irvine, Calif.-based Airtouch.

Who loves ya, baby?

mustang daily

KONA'S SELF SERVE FROZEN YOGURT

25% off
with this coupon

FAJITA NIGHT!

IZZY ORTEGA'S

IT'S EVERYWHERE you want to be.
The steaks are high in Texas restaurant showdown

By Julia Prodis

DALLAS — It all started when the Ruth’s Chris steakhouse chain was bumped off the list of America’s Top 10 Steakhouses.

That’s when Ruth Fertel began her crusade to expose the underworld of phony, fraudulent, and abusive restaurants.

But when it became a federal case, the resulting lawsuits have put Fertel on the list at all. Am I going to be on the list? I’m going to have to give you shooting lessons — anyone who shoots at someone five times is a gun-toting nutcase.

To Fertel and Wamstad, no, amen, a lot at stake for their line-up of steakhouses, with the number of steaks — with no side dishes — costs more than $25 on average.

The battle began in the early 1980s in New Orleans, where Fertel and Wamstad had competing steakhouses.

They had never met, but Fertel said she had to defend Wamstad’s ads hinting that the best steak was in Dallas. She was big, and she was big and she was even more furious.

Said Del Frisco — said that his jeans to open a Del Frisco’s in Dallas in 1989 and two weeks later, Republican written an article in his newspaper blaming it on subsid.

That didn’t help relations with Wamstad, who left New Orleans to open a Del Frisco’s in Dallas in 1989 and two weeks later, Republican wrote an article in his newspaper blaming it on subsid.

When Fertel was told David Wamstad that his brother had dreamed up the list, she published an article in her in-house newsletter calling it bogus.

I want to be on the list and that he has been paying Horan an average of $1,000 a month ever since.

"What am I going to do? He puts me on the list. Am I going to fire him?" Wamstad asked, added, "I almost fired him when I went from No. 2 to No. 3."

But Wamstad sued for libel. Fertel said she had to deflect personal attacks, and for that I’m not a person who shoots at someone five times.

"I have tremendous respect for everyone who ran," said Veesart. "We didn’t resort to personal attacks. We kept it together.

But Veesart commended the efforts of all candidates in keeping campaigning clean.

"We had a golden opportunity," Leman said. "It was an opportunity to take a gamble with this campaign, but we expected a little more support from the students and the Mustang Daily."

"We were so enthusiastic about trying to get someone in (the Council) a person who needs as students," he said. "Marc has put so much of his own money, emotion and spirit into this campaign. He’s made a lot of sacrifices. But the students seem to get duped year after year."

Wollensky steakhouse. He said it initially tripped up Fertel’s efforts to ferret out his true identity.

When Fertel was at his office in Houston, Horan refused to comment "because it’s in litigation." In a recent Knife and Fork Club brochure, he wrote that the list was input from the professional business person who travels and entertains.

He defines a food critic as "anyone who pays to eat out." When Fertel was told David Wamstad that his brother had dreamed up the list, she published an article in her in-house newsletter calling it bogus.

Wamstad sued for libel. Fertel countered, alleging false advertising and unfair competition.

The dispute has sent a buzz throughout the restaurant.

"It’s a joke. It’s a promotion and an advertisement for another competition.

From page 7:

"I think we’re all reasonable people and we’ll work for a compromise," he said. "Settle will run a congenial Council, he’ll keep it together.

Roelfman said he could work well with any other candidate elected to the Council.

"Dole strikes me as someone strong," he said. "She speaks her mind.

Candidate hopeful Veesart said he was obviously disappointed in losing the race, but also was encouraged by voter turnout.

"The turnout really hurt us," Veesart said. "People are cynical and think government doesn’t work. I’ve worked hard and local government will respond."

From page 1

Bond proclaimed at a raucous Republican celebration, evidence that the next campaign already was winding down.

The GOP needed to gain seven seats for Senate control, and they had eight after taking Democratic seats in Arizona, Ohio, Michigan, Maine, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and two in Tennessee. A win by Rod Grams in an open Minnesota race meant Democrats held all 13 of their seats — and were assured of 52 in the new Senate.

The night’s marquee race was in Virginia, where Sen. Charles Robb gave Democrats a rare dose of good news, narrowly beating Iran-Contra figure Oliver North.

Across the Potomac, Marion Barry won his comeback race for District of Columbia mayor four years after a cocaine arrest forced him out.

If one man personified the Democrat’s plight, it was 36-year Rep. William P. Taylor of Washington, at risk of being the first House speaker voted out of office since 1860. Another em­battled lawmaker, Rep. William N. En­tenkowski, lost in Illinois. The former Ways and Means Com­mittee Chairman was under indict­ment on ethics charges. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks of Texas was defeated, as was Intelligence Committee Chairman Dan Glick­man of Kansas.

Across the Potomac, Marion Barry won his comeback race for District of Columbia mayor four years after a cocaine arrest forced him out.

If one man personified the Democrat’s plight, it was 36-year Rep. William P. Taylor of Washington, at risk of being the first House speaker voted out of office since 1860. Another embattled lawmaker, Rep. William N. Entenkowski, lost in Illinois. The former Ways and Means Committee Chairman was under indictment on ethics charges. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks of Texas was defeated, as was Intelligence Committee Chairman Dan Glick­man of Kansas.
Aristide's prime minister, cabinet assume positions

By Chris Tuckey
Associated Press

PORT-AP-PRINCE, Haiti — President Jean Bertrand Aristide's prime minister and 17-member Cabinet, whose task is to turn around the country after three years of military repression, were sworn in this morning.

The 45-minute inauguration took place at the minimally furnished national palace, which is under renovation — like the nation. The ceremony was attended by several Caribbean and Latin American political leaders.

Parliament's lower house on Monday overwhelmingly endorsed Aristide's Cabinet after seven hours of sometimes heated debate.

Aristide's pick for prime minister, 57-year-old Smarck Michel, was ratified over the weekend by both houses. Michel's platform includes an economic recovery program based on reducing tariffs, increasing exports and liberalizing trade.

Meanwhile, more U.S. soldiers who arrived in Haiti in September to help restore Aristide's elected government flew home as part of U.S. troop cutbacks. The Pentagon has announced a withdrawal of about 6,000 soldiers by Dec. 1. Some 9,000 will be left behind, down from a peak of 21,000 troops.

Israel attempting to mollify cautious peace partner

"Both sides understand that if there isn't a much more determined fight against terror, terror will be the greatest danger to continuing the talks."

Yossi Sarid
Israel Environment Minister

Israel Television, however, said Arafat promised Rabin to take stricter measures against the fundamentalist groups Islamic Jihad and Hamas, which claimed responsibility for the Tel Aviv bus bombing that killed 22 victims. No details were given.

"Both sides understand that if there isn't a much more determined fight against terror, terror will be the greatest danger to continuing the talks," said Yossi Sarid, Israel's environment minister and a negotiator at the meeting.

Israel also agreed to transfer authority over health, tourism, welfare and taxation to the Palestinians in the West Bank by month's end, Rabin said.

The transfer had been agreed upon in the summer, but never implemented for lack of money. Rabin and Arafat said they had won assurances that donor countries would come up with the necessary funds.

In other agreements, Israel will give work permits to an additional 10,000 workers, easing a closure imposed three weeks ago after the Tel Aviv bus attack. Some 60,000 Palestinians now have work permits, compared to 40,000 who had worked in Israel.

Come to where the odds and the fun are in your favor!

Max

Merry
Ubiquitous
Salient
Talented
Aggressive
Nimble
Gallant

High stakes Indian bingo with $100,000 in thrills every week!

Why get lost in the crowd? Our 1,000-seat bingo hall provides the perfect setting for the best odds and service around. Wednesday and Friday warm-up sessions start at 6:00 p.m. Also, regular sessions 6:30 p.m., regular sessions 7:00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday warm-up sessions begin at 7:00 p.m. and regular sessions begin at 3:00 p.m.

The odds just got even better!

Every Wednesday and Friday play our Super Jackpot Special featuring 30 games for only $2.50! On Saturday and Sundays cash in on the best bingo bargain in California! Get 18 regular bingo games each paying $1.199 plus four jackpots for just $2.50!

Unbelievable money, unbeatable fun!

Come to where California loves to play high-stakes Indian bingo, fast-action card games and Las Vegas-style video poker games. And enjoy hospitality, Chumash-style! From violet gaming lounges to a stream of free food and cafe dining to people who truly know how to show you a good time. Enjoy the Santa Ynez Indian Casino — The Best Place To Play...From L.A. To The Bay!

For more information call 1-800-SANTA YNEZ
Protests in Mexico City on eve of Prop. 187 vote

By Bill Cormier

MEXICO CITY — Hooded and masked, the 30 to 40 protesters who broke into a McDonald's restaurant Tuesday, and some 1,000 more who later marched in the Zocalo, demonstrated against the anti-immigrants bill now on the California ballot.

"Proposition 187 — Racist!" the demonstrators shouted on a noisy, flag-fluttering march from the heavily guarded U.S. Embassy to the main plaza known as the Zocalo.

Earlier, at least 40 teen-agers wearing bandannas and hoods overturned cash registers, trash cans, hurled hamburgers and Happy Meals and broke in glass windows at the McDonald's in the Zona Rosa tourist district.

No one was injured and no money taken, police said.

"About 40 or 50 of them came running though here smashing everything," said Evar Garcia, a witness who joined tourists gawking at the shattered glass and graffiti.

The attack was the most violent act in the capital yet against the California measure to deport illegal immigrants. Nearly all mainstream Mexican newspapers have termed the proposal racist and xenophobic and several have compared it to the laws of Nazi Germany.

The youths first entered the store and raised banners against Proposition 187, frightening workers and diners alike who were allowed to leave.

The protesters then painted black graffiti on the "Nookie On Home," "No to 187" and even the apparently innocuous "No to Zionism" before fleeing as police arrived.

"They were just going crazy," said William Davila, a chef at the nearby Radio City restaurant. "I had my knife ready in case they came after us."

A McDonald's spokesman, Manuel Torres, a McDonald's Mexico spokesman, who called the attack "unfortunately unexplainable since the franchise was wholly Mexican-owned and operated."

He added that McDonald's did not deserve to be a target as a major employer of both Mexicans and Mexican-Americans in stores across North America.

"In California, 50 percent of those working in our stores are of Mexican or Central American origin," said Torres, who added that any call by 187 critics to boycott American stores would be despicable.

Mexican demonstrators at nearly daily protests have called for a boycott on American goods and stores, particularly those California.

The youths entered the store and raised banners against Proposition 187, frightening workers and diners alike who were allowed to leave.

The protesters then painted black graffiti on the "Nookie On Home," "No to 187" and even the apparently innocuous "No to Zionism" before fleeing as police arrived.

"They were just going crazy," said William Davila, a chef at the nearby Radio City restaurant. "I had my knife ready in case they came after us."
Generation Xers fight stereotype and head to polls

By Dawn Philyaw

Despite assumptions about the apathy of "Generation X," more than a dozen students questioned Tuesday afternoon planned to vote.

"I'm not sure," said one student's main concern were: Proposition 186, the anti-drug and health care initiative; Proposition 187, the "Save Our State" anti-illegal immigration initiative; and Proposition 188, the state control of tobacco regulation initiative.

Canvassers and candidates accused students in the University Union plaza with cries of, "Have you voted?" followed by terse answers of, "No" from students.

Voters are volunteers or paid campaign workers who try to get people to vote for a particular candidate or issue.

Business sophomore Shannon Bardley said she had an obligation to vote. "I have no right to complain about things unless I exercise my right," she said.

"I'm voting yes on 187 and no on 186. If 186 passes and 187 doesn't, they'll try it again, and even more people," she said.

Bardley also planned to vote for Pete Wilson for governor. "He's the devil you know is better than the devil you don't," she said.

Nutrition junior Jennifer Willson agreed with Bardley on Proposition 186. "I'm going into health care," she said. "I put more money in doctor's hands. After all that schooling, it should be their reward." She said she did not think much of the canvassers. "I've been lying to everyone to keep them away," she said.

Political science sophomore Immie Ashbaugh voted anti-tobacco companies. "I'm anti-tobacco companies after all the B.S. they tried to pull in Congress, saying that nicotine is not addictive," she said.

Manufacturing engineering senior Jon Porte preferred Brown. "I'd like Feinstein, even with her warts," he said. "No on SOS (Save Our State). I think it's fastest. I was reading some comments in Business Week, and it will force companies to go to students that look illegal. It's reminiscent of what the Germans did in the '40s with the Jews. But now it's Mexican-Americans."

Cal Poly student and community members headed to the polls Tuesday afternoon to cast their votes./Daily photo by Juan Martinez.
BASELINE: People whose jobs lie in broader baseball industry are getting hurt the most by the strike, Krukow says.

MD: Do you think the fact that it's such a big business is going to bring the prices of tickets up?

MK: It's always going to be supply and demand. If you've got someone who's going to pay the price, the owners are going to raise the price. It's like going to a Rolling Stones concert. They are going to charge what they can.

But look on the comparative entertainment dollar and what your best value is is baseball and it always is going to be baseball.

You've got 162 games — one in each city to see — and you've got 60,000 seats to fill. You're only going to have five or six sellout crowds. So most of the time your going to be able to go and it's going to be affordable.

Football, on the other hand, is once a week. They play eight home, right away.

That's not a whole lot. Those games are going to sell out. As a result, those owners are going to charge a lot more — they are going to charge what they can.

That's just the way business is. And when people quit paying it, they're going to have to lower the prices.

MD: What's it like for you right now, not knowing what is going to happen next year?

MK: A lot of what I do in the offseason is add to my database. I read a lot of player profiles and articles ... What I'm finding out now is that no one is writing about baseball. Nobody wants to read it.

I don't like living in limbo, nobody does. For me, my contract is affected next year.

If the strike still continues, I'll be paid 50 percent of what my salary is projected as for 1995.

MD: There are basically four groups that are affected by the baseball strike — players, owners, employees and fans. Who is the biggest loser?

MK: The fans are the biggest loser from an entertainment standpoint.

They all lose.

The person who I think is getting hurt the most is the person who makes his livelihood from the game outside of the players and owners — the guy who sells the peanuts, the guy who's worked in the ticket offices for 20 years, has four kids, and now all of sudden has no job and has to wait in the unemployment line.

Those people are getting killed. The baseball industry is widespread. You talk to the guys in San Luis Obispo who are selling baseball cards as a business — they're not selling baseball cards right now. It's just a tough situation, it really is.

MD: So granted, this is the industry that is being affected negatively. Does that affect the players and owners, knowing their actions are hurting so many others?

MK: No, I don't think any union can have that type of broad-minded feeling.

MD: Why not?

MK: Well, because if you do, you wouldn't go out on strike. You wouldn't show up at the first place. You have to strike for what you believe is right for your union.

If you study unions across the country, there's many of which have gone on strike, it is because they feel their right to their jobs is infringed upon or they feel like their negotiated deal is one they can't live with, and they go on strike. It's really the only leverage they have.

I think those (broad-minded) concerns are considered by the union heads, at least I would hope so.

Unless you've been on strike, it's hard to describe. It's the most miserable experience around.

You talk about limbo — it's awful.

I was really disappointed that we had to go on strike in '81. It was a bad 51 days. I thought baseball had learned its lesson and I really felt that it would never happen again.

MD: What would be your advice to baseball fans right now, as far as what to look forward to in 1995?

MK: As bad as these things are, I just think that this is the sign of the times in professional athletics that you're going to see in every sport.

Baseball has had all kinds of problems — many of which have paralleled the problems of the country.

My advice to a fan is to just watch what is going on because you're watching something that is history.

It's not something that I'm sure baseball is going to brag about, but nevertheless it's part of the story. And baseball will come back.

Baseball will regain some of its strength. There are some people who will never come back.

I'm sure, but it will survive this. And someday, when you're 10 years old, somebody's going to ask you about the strike that cost baseball its postseason play and you'll be able to comment on it.

It's just something we're all living through. That's really the way you have to look at it.

MD: How would you explain to your grandchildren, years from now, what happened to the World Series that never was?

MK: You have to explain a lot of the scars that baseball has.
SPORTS

SAILING: Cal Poly club team's top boat — 'Question' — is 10 years old

BASKETBALL: Team's initial focus is defense

From page 12
still practicing." Baxter said. "Because Cal Poly is 'learn by doing' and we had a couple good fiberglass guys, we patched them up.

They are small, slow boats," Baxter said. "But they are cheap and very responsive to technique."

Each boat carries two sailors — a captain and crew. The captain makes strategy decisions and steers the boat, while the crew deals with the sails and rigging.

"It's so nice out here," she said, gesturing towards Morro Rock and the surrounding water. "That's why I'm here and not studying for my physics midterm."

Jennifer Bitting, Veteran Sailing Team member

According to Baxter, tactics play an important role in yacht racing. The start is critical, as it is counted down while the boats are racing towards the start line. The idea is to be up to speed and hit the line just as the gun sounds.

Baxter also pointed out one downside to yacht racing. "Unfortunately a lot of races are decided in a room because of protests," Baxter said. "A protest can end two ways — nothing happens or you're out."

Baxter said that protests usually result from a collision that neither captain takes responsibility for. And a quick visual inspection of Cal Poly's fleet reveals much about the nature of yacht racing.

"The racing is close," Baxter said. "You hit each other a lot. If you take a look at the boats you can see the chunks that have been taken off.

Despite the collisions and capsizing of the boats, Baxter and Bitting contend that yacht racing is a safe sport.

"Never since I have been on the team has anyone gotten hurt in a regatta or in practice," Baxter said.

Bitting added that the rules the team races under help insure safety for both boat and crew.

"The PCIYRA rules say all the boats must have a bow bumper," Bitting said. "Otherwise it just wouldn't be racing.

During Sunday's practice boats bumped and even flipped over, but the sailors that just meant getting wet. Baxter said all boats are easy to 'right' once capsized, and flipping a boat and the subsequent righting of it are required practice for the team.

Bitting's final thoughts on the sport emphasized the importance it plays in her life.

"It's so nice out here," she said gesturing towards Morro Rock and the surrounding water. "That's why I'm here and not studying for my physics midterm."

BASELINE: Still enthusiastic about baseball

From page 10
One of the problems is that neither side trusts each other and because of that lack of trust, always going to have a difficult time trying to reach an agreement.

MD: When this is all over, is your enthusiasm for the game going to dwindle in any way? MK: Well no. I'm going to continue to do. That's what I am. I've spent my whole life in volving myself in baseball — whether it be as a player or as a coach — and that's what I'm going to continue to do. I'll never leave baseball. You have arguments with your wife — it doesn't mean you love her any less.

Troy Peterson is the Daily's sports editor and will be going on permanent strike from the Daily in December — I'll be coming to a beach near you.

Watch out for tomorrow's special

THURSDAY

SPORTS THURSDAY

Only this week in

MUSTANG DAILY

CLASSIFIED

ANNOUNCING

ADVERTISE IN MUSTANG DAILY CLASSIFIEDS, CALL 756-1143

CLASSIFIED

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Campus Clubs

4-WHEEL DRIVE

POLY BOAT MEETING WED. NOV. 9th at 7:00, ROOM 11112. Please call 582-3000 for more info. Attendees Association

 Builders Association

Woodward-Clyde

TO CHRISTINA MCCARTNEY on her Wedding Day 26th, 1994)

Christmas Program at 7:30 PM

Michigan State College

Springfield

DO YOU HAVE AN OPINION ON OJ SIMPSON CASE?

ALPHA CRISIS PREGNANCY CENTER

GREAT FOR STUDENTS PARTNERSHIP?

24 HOUR LIFELINE 541-CARE

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENTS

SCI

Carol Forrest of Woodward Clyde will speak on "Women's Studies" on Fri. Nov. 11. Please call 489-1161 for reservations. Room 202

CAROLINA

HONES

LOS ANGELES

CALL 1000 COLLEGE FOR MORE INFO

TO HIRE A TALENTED AND PROFESSIONAL LAWYER?

TESTIMONIAL FROM A DAILY READERS:

"I loved the way it was written. I really enjoyed reading the article. It was very informative and I learned a lot from it."

"I thought the article was very well written and informative. It provided excellent insights and information."
Krukow's take on the strike

October has come and gone, as did the World Series that never was. The future of professional baseball looks like a hanging pickle before a bended seaside soul.

Cal Poly's connection to the world of professional baseball is Mike Krukow, talked at length with the Daily over the phone a few weeks ago.

Mike Krukow, a Giant and former Cal Poly baseball player, was a player representative for the Giants during a 51-day strike in 1981, and is watching this current strike through the eyes of experience.

His job, as a color analyst for radio and television with KNBR, is directly affected by the uncertainty that looms over the baseball world.

Mustang Daily: How did the strike affect your duties?

Mike Krukow: Well, my immediate responsibility is over — the responsibility of being a color analyst for television and radio. What the Giants had the broadcasters do was some minor league baseball games. There were a number of personal appearances for KNBR.

So they're keeping us busy. There is nothing that we planned on; it's all just gone kind of day-to-day.

MD: What was your initial reaction when you found out the season had been canceled?

MK: I was very surprised. I really did not expect that it would get this far. My first prediction was that it would be resolved in time for Labor Day.

I was very distressed when we heard that we were a postseaon play, something that I didn't think baseball could afford to do.

MD: Do you tend to favor the players or owners in this dispute?

MK: I think both sides have good arguments. I understand the motivation of the players but I also believe the owners have some legitimate complaints.

I think the current structure has soared to a level that even Marvin Miller (the former player's union leader) could have expected back in 1981 when he talked to us about the importance of arbitration and free agency.

In 1995, Barry Bonds is contracted to make $8 million. It really has blown out of proportion, in my opinion, in a different arena in '94 then it was in '81. At that point, baseball had not had this type of exposure and had been basically just a local thing for these people, and they were very concerned about it.

Baseball became big business when cable packages started, pouring out money nightly and people started to be more enthused with the on-field products and cities got expansion teams. Cities got new ballparks.

Everywhere baseball cards just exploded. Everybody in the country seems like they have a baseball cap on. All those million dollars really elevated the game of baseball to what it is now.

People say, "Well, baseball is just a business." Well, it's always been a business. Now it's a much more high-profile business than it was 15 years ago.

MD: Will the strike affect the popularity of baseball in relation to football, basketball and hockey?

MK: No, I don't think so.

Sports is seasonal. To expect fans to maintain the enthusiasm for baseball from April all the way to October is unrealistic, especially when you have NBA playoffs in May and June and the Stanley Cup playoffs running late into June. Those tend to take center stage as the major sport and tennis tournaments.

But when it comes down to it, the most accessible, most affordable sport to go see is baseball. You have it every day.

People say, "Hey, let's go to a ballgame," at the last minute and go out on the bleachers for $5. That's something that you can't do in the other sports.

It is a little tricky controversy that surrounds the game of baseball in 1994, the popularity of the game is obviously down — people are passing off.

But if you watch what's happening to happen in the NFL in their labor negotiations, and what is proposed to happen in the NBA and what is on schedule next month in the NFL, all those other sports will have their ups and downs as well. It is a little difficult for the fans to see this happen.

MD: You're out there with the elements, the boat, the wind and the water — that's it. The only thing man-made is the boat, everything else is God-made.

MK: Yeah, that's true.

Environments engineering sophomore Jennifer Batt's words were describing the appeal of sailing, as well as some thing to sight into the motivation behind Cal Poly's sailing season.

The sailing team is the competitive arm of the Cal Poly Sailing Club. The club is focused on recreational sailing.

The team competes against other Pacific Coast sailing teams under Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Sailing Racing Association rules.

The team consists of eight sailors, six of whom are members of the men's and women's varsity regatta teams. The other two sailors are part of the junior varsity team.

"They do some course work for us," said Baxter. "They also get to see, and sail, against each other — and give us some advice." Baxter added that the Navy may show up for the event.

The team has raced two regattas this year at Stanford and UC-Berkeley. The team finished mid-fleet, but members say they expect to do better as the season goes on.

"The more time we spend in the boats the better we do," Baxter said. "We have three regattas in the fall and everybody is excited."

---

Men's basketball Readies for inaugural Division I season

By Jeffrey Jen Doily Senior Staff Writer

With an exhibition game against the New Zealand National Team Saturday at Mott Gym, Cal Poly's men's basketball begins its inaugural Division I season.

But although the team is now officially Division I, there is much to do on the road to respectability.

In a pre-season poll by The Sporting News, the Mustangs were ranked No. 502 out of 302 teams in Division I. "It gives us something to strive for," said senior forward Bucky Tucker. "But we're going to have to face the on-field product."

Coach Steve Season's expectations are more oriented toward the future. "Our goal is to be a viable Division I program by the 1996-97 season," Beason said. "By that time, we'll have four years of recruiting Division I players."

The players are very excited about this season and what the Mustangs can accomplish. "This is a wonderful opportunity for us," said Tucker.

Despite the difficulty of the team's schedule, Tucker said he's looking forward to the season. "It's a dream come true for us and we're ready to go out and play," he said.

After two exhibition games, the Mustangs will get a shot at Division I sports. In their first game against the Oxford Dragons, the Mustangs lost by a final score of 78-60. Tucker said the team needs to work on its defense and get more communication on the court.

"We just have to get our team chemistry together," said Tucker. "We have to be a team."

---

Mustangs defeat Northridge, 5-1

By Mike Staple Daily Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's soccer team rebounded from a 1-0 loss to California State-Bakersfield last week to defeat Cal State Northridge, 5-1, on Sunday night.

Head coach Wolfgang Gartner said he was pleased with his team's performance.

"It was a remarkable result because at home, Northridge is always a force," Garten said.

However, the victory was dampened by the injury of senior forward Rhydian Henderson who was hurt at the beginning of the second half. According to Garten, Henderson may miss Saturday's scheduled season finale with Cal State Bakersfield.

Cal Poly continued its first half explosion, scoring two early goals 15 minutes into the game. Northridge responded to the quick Cal Poly attack with a goal only three minutes after the Mustang's second goal.

The game remained close until the last minutes and 10 seconds when Cal Poly scored again, followed by two more goals that put the game away for the Mustangs.

Junior midfielder Jeff Rynders scored two goals while senior midfielder Dake Lee, freshman midfielder Doug Cox and freshman midfielder Danny Hill each scored.