Democratic senators deplore Wilson's 10-percent fee hike

By Frances Czachulski
Daily Assistant Sports Editor

As the battle over student fee increases continues, the State Democratic Caucus reiterated its stance Thursday against Gov. Pete Wilson's proposed 10-percent hike.

In a satellite-delivered event broadcast throughout the state, the Caucus conducted a forum in an effort to generate support for higher education and its funding needs.

The event was seen at Cal Poly in Bishop's Lounge.

Sen. Tom Hayden, D-Los Angeles, who conducted the forum, raised three critical problems with the educational system.

Hayden said the government is currently depriving educational opportunity in California, increasing enrollment without adequate funding, and students are faced with a "monster debt" caused by state loans.

The students in California today are in greater debt than the governments in Mexico and Russia combined," Hayden said.

Hayden said he expects that in the next few years enrollment in California universities will skyrocket to approximately 1.5 million.

The Caucus referred to this enrollment explosion as "Titicaca Wave 2." The first wave of enrollment was after World War II when soldiers coming home from the war enrolled in California colleges and caused a major funding crisis for the state.

Cal Poly is expected to accommodate 2,000 more students next year.

Members of the Caucus also were against Wilson's proposed 15-percent tax cut. According to a Senate page 7

Despite 20 years of sisterhood, Cal Poly's sorority Zeta Tau Alpha will no longer be a part of the Greek system.

Cal Poly may lose its second-highest administrator to the University of Northern Iowa if he is named that university's new president.

Robert Koob, vice president for academic affairs, was selected as one of six finalists in his alma mater's nationwide search.

Koob, who directed the presidential search for the University of North Texas, the University of South Carolina, the University of North Dakota and the University of Texas at Dallas, another candidate is the president of Westfield State College in Massachusetts.

The six finalists were selected following off-campus interviews held last week.

Professor Grace Anne Hovey, head of the presidential search committee for the University of Northern Iowa, did not return.

Open House board appoints next year’s chairs

By Michelle Murphine
Daily Staff Writer

Newly appointed co-chairs will take on the challenge of producing another successful Open House, outgoing Board Chair Louis Brown announced yesterday.

The second-annual Open House attracted more than 90,000 people April 21-22.

Dairy science junior Duane Banderob and biochemistry junior Craigton Oyler will share the lead position next year. This year, Banderob and Oyler served as vice-chairs under Brown, an agribusiness senior.

"We want people coming onto campus to be able to get right into the flow of where Open House is at next year." Duane Banderob

Open House vice-chair

"I'm totally confident with Duane and Craigton heading the committee," Brown said. "I think they can balance things more effectively as co-chairs ... each has strengths that will contribute to another successful Open House." As the majority of the current board members will graduate in June, the four remaining members will serve on next year's board, according to Banderob.

"There'll be some good continuity between last year's group and this year's, as we address all of the issues we need to face," Banderob said.

More board members are returning next year compared to those who were returning for this year's event, according to Stephen Lamb, student affairs adviser for Open House.

The board will seek out additional board members through a university-wide search involving applications and interviews.

"We're specifically recruiting for people who want to do publicity and promotions," Lamb said.

Faculty advisers also are needed, according to Banderob. The university has committed an adviser from student affairs, but hasn't yet announced who will fill that position, he said.

The current board is evaluating Open House 1995, seeking suggestions and criticisms from different colleges and the campus administration, Banderob said.

"We're evaluating all aspects of the program," he said. "So far, everybody's been really positive."

The board's major concern is the number of food booths far exceeding the number of educational displays, according to Banderob.

According to organizers, last month's Open House featured more educational displays, but the number of food booths far outnumbered other exhibits.

"We plan to encourage the clubs to do more educational displays... we'll continue to work on senior project displays, too," he said.

Another goal is making the campus more "user-friendly" for first-time campus visitors.

"We want people coming onto campus to be able to get right into the flow of where Open House is at next year," he said.

Upgrading the University Union Plaza Faire will also be important, according to Lamb. There were displays in the union this year, but the bulk of the activity was on Drexter Lawn.

"We don't want to pick it up a notch," he said. "People really liked it this year, but there's a lot we can do to make it even better... better banners, bigger signs and extended hours."

Traffic coming on and off campus during Open House will continue to be a problem, Lamb predicted.

"We don't want to do about it. We had great improvement this year, though."

STEPHEN LAMB

Open House adviser

"We don't want to do about it," he said. "We had great improvement this year, though.

In the following weeks, board members will meet with faculty, staff, public safety and administrators to address other issues for Open House 1996.

"We're working fast and furious," Lamb said.

Even though Brown is stepping aside from his Open House duties, he said he looks forward to a string of successful Open House events.

"I hope that the excitement and support sticks with it," Brown said. "I know the drive is there from the committee."

Wilson, former wife hired illegal immigrant

By Doug Wills

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Pete Wilson, who led the initiative campaign last year against illegal immigration, confirmed Thursday that from 1978 through 1981 an undocumented alien worked as a part-time maid in his home.

In a written statement, Wilson said he would not have hired the woman, who was identified as Josefina Klag, if he had known she had illegally entered the country, and that he never intentionally failed to pay Social Security taxes.

Wilson’s office also released a written statement from his ex-wife in which she took all of the blame.

“I employed Josefina; my hus­band did not,” her statement said. “The house was my respon­sibility, not his.”

The decision, she said, would be “very simple for us to reopen” BackStage.

Director of Programs and Facilities John Sigiplevich said he is investigating whether Foundation would be violating the lease between Foundation and BackStage and the Sandwich Plant without consulting with ASI or the university.

“I’ve contacted my attorney and discussed that issue with him,” Sigiplevich said. “I feel that because the contract is so poorly written that it’s possible it won’t be a breach of contract.”

Williams encouraged anyone who wants to discuss the issue to call Campus Dining.

• Academic Senate Chair Jack Wilson said the Senate will amend Cal Poly’s sexual harass­ment policy next week.

• Board members discussed a bill to add a representative to the board from Foundation Board of Trustees.

The policy would prohibit abuse of this type of instruction.

“We choose six because it is a more manageable number,” Carter said. “We tape the news by 2 p.m. and it runs on CPTV until the end of the broadcast.”

According to Carter, Sonic Cable would fill the time needed, Carter said.

“Type it's great,” said jour­nalism senior Cindy Scott. “The students do all the work — the cameras, sound and pre­production.”

Unfortunately, there aren't enough students to produce an adequate amount of material to fill the time needed, Carter said.

“Some instructors occasionally do not have a green card when she was hired, and that he and his ex-wife, Betty Reese, never paid Social Security taxes on her $25-per-week salary.

“Backstage Pizza this summer, she said, her staff can later performs poorly during the summer. However, it will reappear in fall quarter.

The journalism classes and the Sandwich Plant without consulting with ASI or the university.

“I've contacted our attorney and discussed that issue to President Warren Baker's proposed plan,” he said.

“The abuse thing is perhaps a small issue,” Wilson said. “But we don’t want instructors just tape lectures. I don’t think that’s why you came to Cal Poly — to see taped lectures.”

Wilson also announced that he Academic Senate is forming a committee to look at President Warren Baker’s proposed plan.

The plan, which would either increase student fees or require additional funding from the state, would deal with growth and the quality of education at Cal Poly.

Students will be involved in the committee, he added.

Board members discussed a bill to add a representative to the board from Foundation Board of Trustees.

“We have to have someone here (from Foundation) as a direct line of communication,” said College of Engineering rep­resentative James Huffman.

The bill, drafted by Huffman and Melhous, was discussed further next week.

The taco - from México City to Tel Aviv

By Pedro Arroyo

Mexican folklore and history date the origin of the modern taco to México City. It was in this city that a woman named Doña Beatriz Murillo opened the first taquería in 1902.

She began her business by selling tacos made out of different types of meats and ingredients. She sold tacos de chicharron (pork rinds), tacos de mole (made with a spicy and thick sauce served with chicken) and barbacoas tacos. Her taco, as the story has it, became an automatic success and so did her taquería.

Her tacos not only became extremely popular with the working-class people, but they were a hit with the men and women who fought in the Mexican Revolution. It is rumored that her taquería was a favorite spot of Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa and his infamous Division Del Norte.

The followers of Doña Beatriz were able to capitalize on the popularity of her tacos by opening a chain of taquerías throughout the city. The chain of taquerías respectfully bears her name.

It should be of no surprise that México City, with its long tradition of making tacos, is considered by taco connoisseurs to be the taco capital of the world. Only here, in this giant metropolis, can you find over 150 types of tacos.

Those who are really serious about their tacos will want to try tacos de sopa (nervous stomach), tacos de cachete de puerco (pig's cheek) or, one of my personal favorites, tacos de tripas (fried cow tripes). I must warn you about these. Even though they are the best-tasting tacos in the world, eating too many can leave a thick coating of grease on your lips.

If you are watching your figure, there are tacos that have far fewer calories per bite. You can find the famous tacos de vampiro (vampire tacos), prepared with top-grade beef and grilled slowly over charcoal.

On the other hand, you can have a taco de frijoles (bean taco) or a taco de carne on your plate. Many people are eating tacos in Los Angeles — not just Chicanos and Mexicanos. Tacos are rapidly climbing the corporate ladder. On my many trips downtown I have discovered that tacos have become a favorite food for the men and women in the corporate world.

Tacos also have become popular in the African-American community of South Central. The popularity of tacos in this area is largely due to the growth of the Mexican/Latino population. Mexicans, Latinas, and African-Americans eat tacos together. So do Italians, Jews and Arabs.

The taco has had some global impact largely due to Anglo ingenuity and entrepreneurship. Tacos traveled as far as Anchorage, Alaska, when a number of them were sold alongside hot dogs and hamburgers. Tacos have become the sweet potato of the world. So do vitamins, Chinese and Japanese people.

What does the future hold for the taco? Is it just a food that is bound to pass with time and vanish into obscurity? This might be the case in some parts of the country, but it will likely remain a strong cultural food item in California and the Southwest. At least this has been the case for the last several hundred years.

In others, you can have a taco, buy some clothing and even purchase electrical appliances. I once found a great pair of jeans at a place like this.

The local Ralph's supermarket in East Los Angeles has had to meet the demand of taco connoisseurs in the area; you can get six free tacos when you purchase more than $50 worth of food.

Some taquerías in Los Angeles have created different types of tacos for themselves, often reflecting the part of México where the taquerías (Taquería owners) are from. I have been to a Tacos de Sinaloa, Tacos de Jalisco and Tacos de Chihuahua.

I would say there have been tacos in this land long before hot dogs and hamburgers made their way across the Atlantic.
In the past 10 years, the state is becoming the model education institution. Students and parents should get involved. We're seeing that dream getting broken.
Richardson also addressed affirmative action, an issue that is being heavily debated in social circles and in Congress. She said she could do without affirmative action as long as everyone could begin on equal ground.

"It would be fine with me if we wanted to get away from all preferential treatment," Richardson said. "Now we have to go back to when it started, and call those people who are now taking advantage of generations of preferential treatment don't have it anymore." But Richardson said it means getting rid of all forms of preferential treatment, which includes eliminating special treatment in college admissions for sons and daughters of alumni.

"It means you don't have special scholarship for athletes or for a lot of different people because now we're creating a level playing field," she said.

When audience members had the opportunity to address Richardson, most asked — and questioned — her beliefs about affirmative action. She responded by standing behind her support of affirmative action.

"I think it's a problem because we are not doing anything about it against jobs," she said. "We are disturbing the peace because we are black."

Richardson closed her lecture with a quote from a member of the Little Rock Nine, who integrated Central High School in Little Rock, Ark., in 1957, to briefly sum up what her life has been like:

"We'd be showering the dream in the water fountain and someone would turn your shower to scalding. We'd be walking out to the football court and someone would break a bottle and trip you on the bottle. I have scars on my knees from it. And after awhile I started saying to myself 'Am I less than human? Why did they do this to me? What is wrong with me?' And so you go through stages even as a child. First you feel it, then you're angry, then you try to fight back and you realize that survival is day to day and you start to grasp your own spirit. But you grasp the death of the human spirit and you start to understand your only ability to cope, no matter what. This is the greatest lesson I've learned."
BASEBALL: win back-to-back games

But, Lee got left field bunter Brett Hardy to first and gave Cal Poly its first back-to-back wins since its three-game sweep over Hawaii back in March.

Cal Poly starter Tony Coscia lasted only three innings as he gave up three runs — all unearned — and then another run in the eighth inning to take a 7-3 lead before Cal Poly came back.

Atterberry (3-2) earned his second win of the season while Lee picked up his first save.

Pearsall (0-2) took the loss for UC-Santa Barbara.

Mussling finished the day with three RBIs on two hits. Hall also had two hits along with driving in two runs.

Left fielder Brett Hardy led the Gauchos attack as he had two hits and drove in three runs. He also accounted for four of the seven runs by UC-Santa Barbara batters.

The win was the first on a 10-game road trip for Cal Poly who will travel to San Diego State today to begin a three-game series.

Tuesday, Cal Poly announced the signing of six new recruits for next season. They include third baseman Steve Ruhlmeir from Palomar Community College, pitchers Matt Melnick, Racho Palza, Verses, and Ryan Vukas, Vukas, catcher Drew Hodont, Danville, and center fielder Jeff Pritchard, Carmel, Valley.

Third time the charm for Mustangs against Gauchos

Cal Poly uses ninth-inning rally against UCSB to win 8-7; 1st win in three tries

Teddy Steff Fager

Mustangs' senior right fielder Bret Mueller stepped up to the plate with the bases loaded and with his team trailing by two in the ninth inning against UC-Santa Barbara Wednesday — smoked a single to center field, lifting the Mustangs over the Gauchos in an 8-7 win.

With one out, Mueller's single scored sophomore second baseman Andy Hall and sophomore left fielder John Macalutas to cap a four-run ninth-inning rally to give the Mustangs the win over the Gauchos in Santa Barbara.

The scoring began in the inning when Hall hit a two-out triple off Gauchos' pitcher Clint Pearson to drive in sophomore third baseman Bobby Tarantino and sophomore catcher Matt Press to bring the Mustangs within one run. Tarantino had reached on an error and then advanced on Press' single.

After two successive walks to left fielder Macalutas and Townes to load the bases, Mueller's hit drove in both Hall and Macalutas.

The win was the first for the Mustangs in three games this season against UC Santa Barbara.

Mustangs junior reliever Mike Lee, who replaced junior pitcher Matt Atterton after he pitched two innings and gave up four runs that put the Gauchos in the bottom of the ninth inning, but not before a slight scare.

Gauchos' catcher Justin Balsey led off the inning with a single to left field and was immediately replaced by pinch runner Chris Prince, who advanced to third base on a fielders' choice.

BASEBALL

By Jordan Brewer

Eppright decided to pair the players for two reasons.

Eppright said they have more in common than just playing times, including their flexibility.

"Josh's comfort zone is the baseline," Eppright said. "But, he can come to the net and volley well. Likewise, Chris can play in the back pretty well. They are both pretty flexible and that really helps them in a doubles match."

Eppright decided to pair the players for two reasons. One, he said, was the presumption that Johnston's game could be raised to another level by playing with a younger talent. The other was because he believed Magyary would benefit from Johnston's experience at the collegiate level.

"It's been an honor for me," Magyary said. "I have learned a lot from (Johnston). He knows a lot about the game in doubles since he's been in so many situations."

Eppright said he believes that the three things needed for a doubles team to succeed are a good serve and volley game, the ability to return a serve well and to communicate — abilities he said he thought Johnston and Magyary could do well.

It was just a matter of them being able to communi cate to each other during matches that needed to be worked on, Eppright said.

"We were getting used to each other," Johnston said. "I thought he actually played well early on. We learned more about communicating to each other."

"At the beginning, we didn't talk much during the match. As the year went on, we started talking more."

U-like duo forms winning team

By Jeffrey Jan

The duo have even become good friends off the court while learning to play consistently good tennis with each other.

Eppright admitted that he wasn't sure which combination would work as well as it did.

Johnston was the lone senior on a team that didn't even have a junior. The other 10 members were either freshmen or sophomores.

Magyary came to Cal Poly as a highly touted recruit from El Cerrito, Calif. Last year, he was ranked No. 15 in the country in junior boys 18's doubles along with Pepperdine's Mike Jessop.

Magyary attributed two factors which influenced his decision to come to Cal Poly — the school's reputation in academics and Cal Poly's move to Division I.

"I probably would not have come here if Cal Poly wasn't moving up to Division I," Magyary admitted.

Magyary — considered to be a serve and volley player — uses his height and reach to generate his pace. Johnston — known as a baseliner — outhits opponents from the baseline.
