here's nearly always a line of people in the library waiting to check their electronic mail. Some are waiting in line to abuse it, and others are unknowingly waiting to read harassing mail.

"It's an ongoing thing that we're dealing with on an ongoing basis," said George Westlund, an instructional computing consultant at Cal Poly. Westlund handles many of the e-mail complaints on campus.

"We do not check e-mail at all," Westlund said. "We respond to complaints as they occur.

According to officials, abuses of e-mail are not uncommon. Abuse ranges from the biggest common letter extensions to the extremes of the "racist, obscene and lewd," said Sean Banks, Cal Poly's director of campus student relations and judicial affairs.

The abusive and harassing e-mail is not intended to be that way, though.

"Typically they are inappropriate comments where a student sends an e-mail to other students saying, 'I really hate this person,'" Banks said. "They send it to someone they don't even know and that person feels it's harassment."

Once the instructional computing office receives an e-mail complaint, the sender's account is frozen and all lines like this inside the library are blocked for internet use. The question is, however, which one will get an offensive e-mail message?

"It's more about prevention than punishment after the fact," he said.

If the e-mail is found to be harassing, which Banks said calls students to his office to talk before he makes a decision.

"I'm more about prevention than punishment after the fact," he said.

City Council raises fares on buses

Lack of funds from government, Cal Poly cited for rate hike

By Tam Bragg
Daily Staff Writer

Although the increased bus fares passed by San Luis Obispo City Council Tuesday night will not affect this year's riders, next year may be a different story.

Council members voted unanimously to raise city buses because of a $292,300 shortfall in the city's transit budget for the year.

Mike McCluskey, city public works director, said the deficit occurred because of many factors, including a reduction in funds from the state and federal government and from Cal Poly.

But the new fares will affect riders. The regular fare will increase from 50 cents to 75 cents and monthly pass prices will increase from $16 to $24. The fare for senior citizens and Medicare recipients will rise from 25 cents to 35 cents. The monthly senior pass will increase in price from $2.50 to $7.50.

Mayor Alan Settle said he regretted increasing fares, but the city's needs were tied. He said the city needed to raise the rates or cut back on service possibly jeopardizing the whole system.

"The federal and state governments have great money to start things, but they never have enough to sustain them," Settle said.

In an effort to increase money for the bus service, the council also took funding away from a bus maintenance yard improvement project.

The fare increases, which take effect on Jan. 1, 1997, will only add enough money to sustain the system, Settle said.

"Many of the students who ride the bus service are from student organizations and according to our budget projection, the estimated increased revenue from increased fares will only be enough to come up with more funds," Settle said.

Vicki Stover, associate vice president for administration and finance, said the school would have to find $250,000 to provide for the estimated increased cost to the city if it were to fund 99 percent of the transportation cost, which is much more than the university can afford.

The university funds $160,000 of the city's transportation costs each year.

She said that since the university and the city entered into a contract to provide free bus service to students in 1986, the city has received an increasing amount of money. She said this is due to the city's loss of other funding sources while providing more services.

She said when the contract started, the university provided it should, especially since the campus lacks adequate parking for students."

Settle said the city is negotiating with the city to restore the previous level of funding from the state. He said fares would have been raised for students this time, if Cal Poly had not provided an extra $43,000 from its general fund.

"But Cal Poly may not be able to come up with more funds," Settle said.

On the council level, the city is negotiable funds from the state and Cal Poly.

"We will not affect this year's riders, but next year may be a different story," Settle said.

"We have a number of factors to work with, but we will not affect the riders this year," Settle said.

Gingrich chosen as Speaker for new term

WASHINGTON — Chosen by Republicans for a second term as House speaker, Newt Gingrich said Wednesday the GOP Congress has an "absolute moral obligation" to work with President Clinton and leave the campaign wars behind.

In a speech following his selection, Gingrich looked ahead to an "implementation Congress" on issues such as balancing the budget, cutting taxes, attacking drugs and improving the health care system.

"We hear the unusual burden of reaching out to a Democratic president and saying, together, we can find common ground," said Gingrich, whose formal election as speaker is slated for Jan. 7, 1997, when the 105th Congress officially convenes.

Across the Capitol complex, Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota expressed a similar hope for cooperation.

In his first extended remarks since the presidential and congressional elections, Daschle said, "There really is perhaps an historic opportunity for Democrats and Republicans to work together. And our choice is really this: We can legislate or we can recriminate."

President Clinton, too, has indicated a willingness to work with Republicans. "We're in this boat together, and we've got to paddle it together," he said shortly after the voters had returned both him and the GOP Congress to power.

Gingrich's remarks were more subdued and less combative than two years ago.

Then, he had led his party to a House majority for the first time in 40 years, and stood ready to lead them through an exhaustive effort to pass the conservative "Contract With America."

Now, the 53-year-old Georgian finds himself under lingering investigation by the ethics committee, and the run-up to his selection by the party caucus was marked by suggestions of ethics issues on both the left and the right.

On a personal note, Gingrich indicated he was confident of his role in the coming Congress.
Students help build new park in SLO

Cal Poly students joined together to help construct the preview garden at El Chorro Regional Park, located a few miles north of campus.

CITY

Members of the Cal Poly's Nu Alpha Kappa fraternity, solicited fellow chapters across California to join in the efforts. Ismael Diaz, vice president of the fraternity, said 55 members met earlier this month and offered helping hands.

"We did a lot of the labor-intensive work," he said.

The groups duties included chopping trees, pulling weeds, building a retaining wall, digging post holes, cleaning out an overgrown ditch and preparing soil for planting.

"The guys worked hard," said the agricultural engineering junior.

Eva Vigil, board member for the Friends of San Luis Obispo Botanical Garden, said the work done by those men were valuable.

"They were wonderful. They did a whole range of jobs and worked quite hard. It was the largest group of volunteers from the university," she said.

Diaz said 10 chapters were involved in helping the project. Fraternity brothers from Chico State, Sonoma State, San Jose State, U.C. Santa Barbara, Stanislaus State, Santa Clara University, Sacramento State, San Diego State and Fresno State helped out.

After three hours of working in the garden Diaz said the community organizers were appreciative of their efforts.

"The people were really grateful. I was blushing because they were praising us so much," he said.

Diaz said he hopes to continue working with the project since there is a lot of work that still needs to be done.

"We will see if we can continue to help them," he said.

In addition to the fraternity, another student group helped out with the garden last weekend. For two and a half hours, 13 members of the Environmental Council cleaned up debris from a creek that runs through the 150-acre plot.

Most of the current efforts are focused on completing the preview garden, a smaller version of what is to come on designated land directly across Highway 1 from Cuesta College. It has been developed to inform the community of the elements that will be featured in the future botanical garden. It will feature plant life that will be displayed throughout the completed garden, a children's area, butterfly garden, amphitheater and docent-led tours.

Completion of the entire botanical garden is scheduled for next spring.
FBI debunks Salinger charge that another jet swerved to avoid missile

By Pat Milian
Associated Press

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. — When Pierre Salinger charged that TWA Flight 800 was brought down by "friendly fire," he bolstered it with a claim that Air France jet had to swerve wildly to avoid a missile that same night.

But just as the TWA missile theory was quickly dismissed as "utter nonsense," the chief FBI agent on the case called the Air France theory "utter nonsense," too, bolstered it with radar data, and Air France said radar data, "utter nonsense," the FBI agent quoted in the New York Times. "The TWA theory was based on a two-page document that has been circulating for months, and which investigators say is worthless." The FBI agent told in a Nov. 9 CNN interview, came from a man Salinger met who said he was on an Air France flight that took off from Kennedy Airport for Paris minutes after Flight 800. The man said that a few minutes into the flight, the pilot made a wild right turn.

Salinger said the passenger — whose name he doesn't know — told him that when he went into the cockpit and asked what happened, the pilot said: "We can't go in that region. They're sending missiles up there. It's very dangerous!"

Investigators and airlines agreed the latest rumor would be impossible because there was no U.S. missile training in the area on the night of the July 17 TWA explosion. They said that the closest Navy ship was 180 miles away, out of missile range, and that the military aircraft in the area did not carry armed missiles.

Further, FAA spokesman Mark Hess said there were no

Cancer test not needed for some women

By Janet M(Connaughey
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Women who have had hysterectomies for some reasons other than cancer don't need Pap smears anymore, a study found.

Pap smears are used to check for signs of cancer, primarily in the cervix but also in the uterus or vagina. But in hysterectomies, the uterus and cervix are removed, and vaginal cancer is extremely rare and can be detected visually.

"We studied everything in the skies that night and Air France made no such maneuver, nor did any other aircraft," FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom said Thursday. "The Air France pilot told in a Nov. 9 CNN interview, came from a man Salinger met who said he was on an Air France flight that took off from Kennedy Airport for Paris minutes after Flight 800. The man said that a few minutes into the flight, the pilot made a wild right turn."

Pap smear was removed, and vaginal cancer is extremely rare and can be detected visually.

The use of the Pap smear after hysterectomy for benign disease should become a thing of the past," Dr. Kenneth L. Noller wrote in an editorial accompanying the study published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine. That could eliminate nearly one-third of the 50 million to 60 million Pap smears given each year, saving hundreds of millions of dollars annually, said Dr. Thomas E. Nolan of LSU Medical Center, lead author of the study.

A Pap smear, in which cells are swabbed from the genital canal and put under a microscope, costs $20 to $30. Currently, Pap smears are recommended every one to three years, even for women who have had hysterectomies for reasons other than cancer, such as fibroid tumors or endometriosis, a painful growth of the uterine lining.

Dr. Jonathan S. Berek, vice chairman at the UCLA Medical School and director of the Women's Oncology Center at UCLA, said he and many other doctors have already dropped Pap tests.

LA county jail system in lockdown amid racial brawls, injuries top 200

By Mkhelle DeArmond

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The injury count from two days of racial brawls at Los Angeles County jails climbed above 200 Wednesday as all male prisoners throughout the huge system remained under lockdown.

AP-STATE

Fighting that began Monday afternoon continued late Tuesday — hours after the lockdown was imposed. Eight disturbances left 188 inmates with major injuries, 26 with minor injuries and three deputies with minor injuries, Deputy Bill Martin, a sheriff's spokesman, said Wednesday.

"We restricted them to their dormitories and cells ... but within those contained cells and dormitories they still have potential for confrontation," Martin said. "It compartmentalizes the situation."

Officials imposed the lockdown Tuesday afternoon after learning the fights at the Pitchess Detention Center facilities in Saugus were planned. They feared prisoners at other jails might start rioting.

"The entire situation appears to have been precipitated by a slight or altercation that occurred earlier," Martin said. "As a consequence, we were able to determine those were planned."

The medium- and maximum-security complex 35 miles north of downtown Los Angeles has been plagued by racial tensions for years. It houses about 8,000 restrictions that night affecting commercial airplanes.

"If there were sudden maneuvers or a missile, you can rest assured that it would definitely have ended up in the pilot's log," said Bruce Haxthausen, Air France spokesman. "But it wasn't there. That is absolutely definite." Kallstrom said Air France officials also told the FBI there was "absolutely nothing unusual on the flight and the plane did not make any movement like those described by Salinger."

We verified this through the FAA, which reviewed both the radar track and cockpit communications," Kallstrom said. "I hope this puts Mr. Salinger's latest theory to bed."
Get on The Bus

A timeless trend since the 60s, the VW bus is alive and well (minus repairs) in the 90s

By Traci Roach
Daily Staff Writer

Right around the time Ronald Reagan accepted the presidency I thought America would have retired all of their Volkswagen buses. Thinking back to my pre-driving days I can remember that noisy engine as my mom putted down the street to pick me up from soccer practice. My family was the proud owner of one of the final models, a 1979 Volkswagen van — bright orange, no less.

My traumatic carpool days were filled with breakdowns, no heat and a fuzzy radio. But now when I look around and see the family car of the '60s and '70s replaced by the minivan or Suburban, I miss our bus.

"It's cool. You buy a van and instantly you have all these cool friends, outside the car I don't know if we'd have anything in common, but when we're behind the wheel it's a different story."

— Justin Kerr on owning the VW bus

However, the Volkswagen is not completely lost. In fact the trend of owning one is alive and kicking even in San Luis Obispo. Many local owners not only use the classic bus to get around, but they also consider it a hobby, a way of life.

"The ones that adopt the lifestyle, they're the ones that stay in it because they like the cars," said Chris Storke, owner of a 1960 single cab pickup and a 1963 double cab pickup. "They don't think they're just cool, they really like them."

According to Storke this lifestyle means spending a lot of the time and energy maintaining the car. If you have a mechanic do (reps) it will break you and you'll say 'why do I have this car?'" Storke said.

Another dual Volkswagen owner, Jon Lichty said that they don't break down a lot, but they do require a lot of maintenance. "There's a lot of tinkering with a Volkswagen," Lichty said. "You have to work on it yourself because that's the only way you can afford to do it." Lichty bought his first Volkswagen, a 1966 camper van, when he moved to San Luis...

The Cal Poly Wind Orchestra and the University Jazz Bands will open their 1996-97 concert season this Saturday with the 12th annual Band test. The performance starts at 8 p.m. in Harmon Hall in the Performing Arts Center.

The performance will bring together more than 100 student musicians, and will feature works written for the modern-day wind orchestra and a “West Coast” style of jazz. William Johnson, the conductor for the two groups said that this year’s performance has something in it for everyone.

The 70-member wind orchestra will play musical selections including the “Olympic Fanfare and Theme” from the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles, and “American Symphony,” from the movie “Mr. Holland’s Opus.”

The orchestra’s performance of “Festive,” a contemporary piece written by British composer Edward Gregson, will be conducted by Cal Poly music senior Anna Binneweg.

This is Binneweg’s fourth year playing clarinet for the Wind Orchestra, and her third year studying conducting. “We have a good mix of returning and new students in the orchestra,” Binneweg said. “We have a strong band this year.”

The two, 20-member university jazz bands will perform jazz pieces “Slightly Off the Ground” and “An’ It Wonderful!” by Tum Kuhia. They will also play “Starscape” by Tom Dossett and “My Romance” by Richard Rogers.

Johnson said that there are two jazz bands this year because there were about 50 talented musicians trying to get into one band. See JAZZ BANDS page A4.
Zany foursome juggles music laughter, learning on stage

By Sandy Naughton
Daily City Editor

Although they don’t soar through the air nor share a common ancestry, the Flying Karamazov Brothers can juggle music, slapstick comedy and entertainment — literally.

“Music is rhythm. Juggling is timing,” proclaimed one of the faux brothers as he skillfully juggled pins and jockeyed for center-stage at the Cuesta College Auditorium Friday.

Before launching into one of their zany, fast-filled introductions to music genres or instrument history, the four displayed their ability to induce waves of awe and laughter.

Following the best of the tossed pins slapping against their hands, the three-skilled men provided a glimpse of their juggling abilities between winnerracks — Rakitin (Michael Preston) made a jumbled recovery when he fumbled and his bell-lined pin crashed and rolled onto Ivan (Howard Jay Patterson) foot.

“I love it when you imitate,” Ivan said as the brothers quickly regained confidence with the audience’s laughter.

By no means was that the last glitter-turned-gag in their two-person parodies as the brothers’ fine-tuned routines indicated their seasoned skill.

The maraudy juggling troupe has tossed Slinkies, pepperoni pizzas and fresh trout before audiences in Singapore, the United Kingdom and Australia since their Broadway debut 13 years ago.

Whether they bust a move in pink tutus in Carnegie Hall or toss cleavers as the opening act for Frank Sinatra, the Contract looking men almost always perform.

Challenging the audience to produce three objects “heavier than an orange, lighter than 10 pounds and no bigger than a breadcrumb,” Ivan, donning shiny pink boxing shorts when he held up with suspenders, bet he could juggle them or else face a whipped-cream pie.

As toddlers to courageous preschoolers deposited random items on the stage, the foursome decided on a 20-ounce plastic bottle, a skateboard and about a size 11 cowboy boot, courtesy of a heel dragging, polka-dotted man.

“That is one hell of a boot,” Smeryakov (Sam Williams) said, looking up to an expected stinger after calling the audience “anty-pants,” “flatulences,” and “carbohydrate” throughout his high-speed monologues. “His shoe size may exceed his IQ.”

“Or his IQ,” quipped Rakatin.

Luckily for the bold and feisty four, Ivan successfully juggled the bodgepodge of items for the contracted 10 seconds on his third attempt.

Although the first half of the show kept stomachs acheing from laughter with witty remarks on the past political election to slapstick “Who’s on first?” scenarios, the brothers’ artistic talents dom-

FOOD COURT

As a self-proclaimed food critic, I chose The Old Custom House Restaurant to review this week

Recommended by several starving students who enjoy it on parental visits, I thought it was time to find out for myself.

So, let’s get to the food.

Our waiter suggested that we start off with sauteed mushrooms. At $6.25 for an appetizer I was a bit shocked, but when the skillet full of mushrooms, sauteed red and yellow peppers and onions arrived at our table, I quickly put aside my fears and dug in.

After finishing off the first beer, we decided to eat dinner. Our waiter suggested we try the tri-tip. As the price came on a pretty high plate with the rice pilaf, fresh steamed vegetables, and your choice of clam chowder or green salad, the lowest price on the menu is $11.95. Other choices on the menu include a variety of steaks, chicken and seafood.

The average cost hovers around $15.63.

My roommate and I swapped clam chowder and a salad. I like to think of myself as a clam chowder connoisseur at times, so I carefully tasted each bite. It came in a little cup, so I only had a couple of bites to test it out. It was slightly spicy and thick. The square bread that comes with the dinners was sweet and drew me in for a second piece.

The Old Custom House also has a wide variety of imported and domestic beers like Pirate Ale and Sam Adam’s Boston Lager with prices ranging from $2.50 to $4.75.

HARASSMENT: Chain letters are not permitted on Cal Poly e-mail

The problem is users aren’t reading the system news. The bulletin that appear while users are opening their accounts contain important rules about the system.

“I usually delete that,” Elena Echave, a graphic communications senior said. “Usually I’m in a hurry. I never have time to catch up on it.”

Many people don’t even know the real purpose of e-mail.

“Our system is set up for educational purposes,” Banks said.

“People tend to define for themselves what a chain letter is or is not,” Westlund said. He defined it as anything that asks to be passed on.

Most of the time when students get offensive e-mails they simply get rid of them and think nothing more. Few actually complain.

“Usually when I get these, I delete them,” said Phoebe Malabuyo, a graphic communications junior.

Jon Lowings, a recreation administration senior, said he does not favor broad changes or regulation by officials.

“If students have a problem with it there’s a way they can take their own actions,” he said in reference to reporting it to campus officials. However, Lowings admits he is only somewhat informed about the system rules.

“If I am not as (informed) as I should be, probably, I haven’t really been taught about it,” he said.

Banks wants to change that.

“The only thing that could be changed is maybe changing the way students are oriented to the computers,” he said.

However, Westlund said the orientation is there and students are not using it.

“People say, ‘I didn’t know.’ Well, the answer to that is, they should know,” he said.

be said, “because you campaigned on our message.”

Despite Gingrich’s re-election, critics claimed success in a modest reshaping of the leadership structure. Gingrich will disband an advisory group that functioned much like an inner cabinet, reviewing each major decision.

Groups of moderates and conservatives won the right to choose their own representatives to an expanded leadership group, and committee chairmen are expected to have more latitude than they enjoyed in the past two years.

With Gingrich under investigation, Army will have the responsibility for selecting the new members of the ethics committee.

The speaker’s most vocal critic of late, Rep. Peter King of New York, said, “I think you’ll see him stepping back a little.”

Gingrich’s renomination by Republicans makes his selection as speaker all but certain — barring a December bombshell from Gingrich’s renomination by Republicans.

Despite (Gingrich’s re-election, the ethics committee — and his remarks were designed to show an interest in bipartisanship with the White House and Democrats who are inclined to work with Republicans.

JAIL: Houses more than 19,000 inmates

Inmates. Most of this week’s riots were between blacks and Hispanics. One fight was between blacks and Asians.

Deputies were able to quell the fights without weapons in some instances, but had to use rubber pellet grenades, rubber bullets and pepper spray to subdue 499 inmates late Monday.

The last fight ended at 10 p.m. Tuesday. Martin said deputies were monitoring the inmates Wednesday to decide when to lift the lockdown. In the meantime, 110 additional deputies were on standby to help at Pitchess, he said.

An investigation into the exact cause continued, but the fights appeared to be related to some type of slight, Martin said.

“We’ve even had one occasion where a fight started because one inmate sat on another one’s bed,” he said. “Things that we don’t take particular notice of ... obtain a new and different significance here.

“A fight may occur and people are not pleased with the outcome and ... seek revenge or retaliation.”

The inmates’ injuries ranged from puncture wounds, possibly caused by homemade knives deputies later found, to broken bones.

Two inmates who suffered puncture wounds awaited surgery Wednesday at hospitals. One inmate, who was not injured in the fighting, was hospitalized for chest pain. None of the injuries were life threatening, Martin said.

One deputy twisted his knee and was treated and released from a hospital. One deputy slipped and fell and another one hurt his hand, but neither one required medical treatment.

The county jail system is home to more than 19,000 inmates, with about 6,000 of those at the Men’s Central Jail downtown. The downtown facility has been the subject of much criticism because of an unwieldy documentation system that has led to the accidental release of several dangerous prisoners.

However, Young's injuries have not gone unnoticed among opposing players and Washington safety Darryl Morrison said the Redskins would be going after Young, trying to knock him out of the game.

"We want to get some helmets on him and get him woowy a little lost and it will help us out defensively," Morrison said.

Seifert, who expressed worries about Young's ability to protect himself, said it doesn't surprise him that the Redskins seem to be targeting Young.

"It's a tough business and players do what they have to do to try to win ball games," Seifert said.

"But I think the officials and the rules will protect Steve.

"Plus, he's got to protect himself by just handling the offense efficiently, by setting up and mak­ing his reads properly," Morrison said.

"The officials will protect Steve."

"But I think the officials and the rules will protect Steve."

McClendon was especially worried, saying his moves properly. His move­ment should be better than in the Dallas game because he's had some time off since that time.

Young said quarterbacks are a target in every game and Sunday would be no different. He said the injury factor is something all play­ers deal with in a violent game.

"I don't think I'm taking any more risks this week than any other guys on my team," Young said.

Three women’s basketball recruits commit to Cal Poly

Three students have signed national letters of intent to play women’s basketball at Cal Poly next year.

Jennifer Barbone is a 6-3 center from Glendora, Calif. Booker says Barbone has great size and is "one of the purest shooters I have seen in a long time.

Sara Burt is a 6-0 guard from Aloha, Ore. Booker says Burt has a "tremendous post player with a lot of potential. She will bring the much needed size element to our team and also bring more aggressiveness to our post play," Booker added.

Sara Burt is a 6-0 guard from Aloha, Ore. Booker says Burt is a hard worker and a competitor. "Sara is versatile enough to play inside or outside," says Booker. "She is very aggressive and has great fundamental skills. She can penetrate the basket as the Houston Rockets’ center was back to normal Wednesday, Hakeem Olajuwon’s heartbeat after drinking a Pepsi-Cola in Fulton County Stadium. "This organization has shown us how it’s done," Smoltz said during a news conference at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. "They were some versus that obviously made it clear they wanted my services."

"At least four teams, led by the Atlanta Indians, showed serious interest in Smoltz. The Indians reportedly offered him a $31 million, four-year contract — a record deal for a pitcher — the decision was easy. The best rotation in baseball will be intact for at least another season after the NL Cy Young Award winner re-signed with the Braves on Wednesday.

"This organization has shown me the ultimate in signing me to this contract," Smoltz said during a news conference at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. "There were some teams that obviously made it clear they wanted my services. But my main goal as an athlete has always been to stay in one organization as long as I possibly can. I want to play my entire career here."

"We showed last year how very important he is to the fortunes of our club," Braves general manager John Schuerholz said. "We’re absolutely delighted to have John Smoltz back as a member of our organization."

Smoltz worried that the Braves, knowing his desire to stay in Atlanta, would offer a deal at less-than-market value. But his agent, Lonnie Cooper, said Schuerholz made clear from the start of the negotiations that he was willing to spend to keep his pitching staff together.

"Pitching has been the dominant factor in Atlanta’s success this decade: five division titles, four NL pennants and one World Series championship," Smoltz said. "We want to make sure we do the best we can.

"It was very rewarding that they thought that highly of me," Smoltz said. "At the same time, I think Atlanta showed the ultimate concern.

"My career is ahead of me," he said. "I’m going to be a better pitcher than I’ve been so far back and keeping progress is very important.

Smoltz was accompanied to the news conference by his wife, Dyan, and their two children, 5-year-old Andrew and 3-year-old Rachel. While he discussed the deal, his wife and children watched from the sidelines as the Braves came up with a higher offer.

"We wanted to do the right thing," Smoltz said. "This, in my mind, is definitely the right thing, to carry forth the tradition that we started here."

Smoltz, 29, led the majors with 24 wins and 276 strikeouts, along with a 2.94 ERA. He added four more wins in the postseason before the Braves were beaten by the New York Yankees in the World Series.

His $7.75 million average is second in baseball behind the $11 million average in the deal Albert Belle and the White Sox agreed to Tuesday.

The breakdown for Smoltz’s contract: $7 million in 1997, $7.75 million the next two years and $8.5 million in 2000. The club also has an option for 2001 for $25 million. The total dollars, the previous high was $250,000 bonus if he wins two Cy Young Awards during the deal.

Baltimore, Toronto and the New York Yankees also had serious discussions with Smoltz agents, but Cleveland showed the most interest after losing Belle to the White Sox.

"It was very rewarding that they thought that highly of me," Smoltz said. "At the same time, I think Atlanta showed the ultimate concern."

"My career is ahead of me," he said. "I’m going to be a better pitcher than I’ve been so far back and keeping progress is very important.

Young to start on Sunday

Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Two days after expressing concerns about allowing Steve Young to play so long after his second concussion, coach George Seifert said Wednesday he has resolved his doubts and will allow Young to get his job as the 49ers starting quarterback.

Some unsolicited advice from broadcaster and former Raiders coach John Madden helped convince Seifert to start Young on Sunday at Washington ahead of Elvis Grbac.

Madden had said earlier this week on his radio show that if the doctors cleared Young and Young himself felt well enough to play, then Young should start.

"I said, ‘Gee, that kind of makes sense,’" said Seifert.

On Monday, Young received medical clearance to play. But Seifert said he worried Young’s lingering groin strain would affect his mobility, leaving him more vulnerable to the kind of hits that caused concussions Oct. 27 at Houston and Nov. 10 against Dallas.

"These were all legitimate concerns and they were all things I did evaluate," Seifert said. "I followed the whole process through and visited the coaches, visited with Steve, visited with the doctors and Steve is our starter. He feels like he is ready to go and the doctors have turned him loose, so he’s going.

Young, who has missed all or parts of eight games due to the groin and head injuries, said he’s sound physically and could have played last Sunday, when he watched from the sidelines.

Grbac led the 49ers to a 38-20 win over Baltimore.
