LIMA, Peru - In a bloody lighting assault, Peruvian troops stormed the Japanese ambassador's mansion Tuesday, freed dozens of hostages and ended a four-month standoff with leftist guerrillas.

All the rebels - believed to number 15 - were reported killed. President Alberto Fujimori said one captive, Supreme Court Justice Carlos Giusti, and two soldiers also died.

At least 159 members of other hostages were injured in the gunfire and explosions that followed.

California Highway Patrol's K-9 unit searched through cars and buildings for additional drugs.

Entzi set to step into presidential shoes

Her high school principal laughs when telling the story of how Cindy Entzi saved a homecoming a year ago.

"If I feel as if ASI hasn't moved in the right direction this year," Entzi said, "Particularly where the money is concerned." A member of the ASI Board of Directors for the past two years, Entzi said she disagreed with many of the changes made under ASI's current president, Steve McHale.

Entzi tells of embezzled funds - around $90,000 - that ASI recovered last spring and decided to put into use this fall.

"They said that the money would be offered to student clubs, but that never happened. The Executive Staff came to Finance Committee with a proposal to increase their budget from $9,000 to $25,000. Finance Committee approved an increase to $19,000. So some of that money went to increase the Executive Staff's budget, and there is still some money that's just sitting there," Entzi said.

Juan Gonzalez, Vice President for Student Affairs, was working with ASI during this time.

ASI discovered in May 1994 that they were victims of embezzlement. In November 1994 there was another embezzlement. Several employees of ASI, not students, were found responsible.

"I don't have all the facts to substantiate whether or not all the money was accounted for," he added.

Renovation of Chumash and U.U.

up for ASI debate

It can't handle dancing, and it's only 26-years-old. That's why speeches, symposiums and forums are about the only things ever featured in Chumash Auditorium.

"We are unable to hold dances because it is not able to support large rhythmic bouncing motions," said Jason Brooks, the Vice President of Operations on the ASI Board of Directors.

This will all change if the Board of Directors votes to retrofit Chumash Auditorium. The Facility Operations Committee has been researching the student demand for a dance facility on campus. They will present their findings to the board tonight for a vote.

The project consists of steel beams that will be placed inside El Corral bookstore to support and relax the tension in the concrete beams Chumash Auditorium rests on.

This gives the program board flexibility to schedule smaller concerts for more intimate shows," Brooks said.

This project could be completed as early as this coming fall since El Corral will be closed this summer for renovations. It could be available for a dance during the Week of Welcome, in early fall.

The money for the $80,000 to $120,000 project will come from the Chancellor Office Reserve repair and replacement fund. According to Brooks, ASI puts $68,000 to $100,000 a year into this fund for necessary renovations.

The newest big renovation coming up to vote by the board is a $1.6 million refurbishment project for the University Union.

San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara sting nab eight suspects, $160,000 in drugs

By Leone Chandler
Special to the Daily

Eight suspects were arrested Tuesday night on suspicion of possession and conspiracy to sell about $160,000 in methamphetamine, cocaine and marijuana. More than $10,000 was seized, and more than 10 vehicles were confiscated for allegedly transporting narcotics.

Five suspects were arrested in San Luis Obispo, while another three were arrested in Santa Barbara.

Suspects Efren Hernandez, 25, of Santa Maria; Juan Dieguez, 32, of San Luis Obispo and Pismo Beach; Jesus Castro, 23, of Santa Maria; Alberto Alvarez, 24, of Santa Maria; and Carmen Elloqui, 20, of Santa Maria were arrested at the Central Coast Auto Detail on 12 Higuera St. and Castro Automotive at 14 Higuera St., which was allegedly the hub of the drug operation.

The Santa Barbara suspects' names were not available at press time. According to Gardiner, more arrests were expected throughout Tuesday night.

San Luis Obispo County Narcotics Task Force (NTF) prepared for a month for this particular sting. Gardiner said the drug ring was a six-month investigation by 11 federal, state and local agencies has resulted in what San Luis Obispo Police Chief Jim Gardiner called the largest drug bust in his 10 years on the job.

Speaker defending women wins gender superiority debate

By Rachel Brody

Daily Staff Writer

Are men superior to women? Former teacher Mark Roland and James Ethan Whitt, a Cuesta College student and Donna's waiter, debated the question Monday night before about 60 anxious spectators in the community room of the San Luis Obispo County Library.

Roland’s commentary about male superiority has sparked community uproar since it was published in Mustang Daily and later on Jan. 9 in New Times. His commentary challenged anyone who disagreed with his statements to defend their arguments in an open debate. Whitt decided to take him up on his offer.

“I responded to the New Times article,” Whitt said. “I hate the idea that was presented there and based on the argument he presented, it’s easy to win.”

The debate, sponsored by Roland, did not include an open forum where audience members could voice their own opinions. The floor was given to both Roland and Whitt for five periods each lasting seven-and-a-half minutes. During this time they were to present facts and rebut anything previously presented. At the conclusion, audience members were asked to vote on who made the better argument for their case. This vote was not supposed to reflect their personal belief.

Women won. When the votes were tallied, Whitt had defeated Roland by a score of 49-51. Neither Roland nor Whitt spoke during their opening statements. Roland then cited statistics to defend his argument and Whitt countered.

Roland rebutted Whitt’s argument by claiming that moral values were man’s creation.

“The values that we hold dear are of our own creation. It’s wrong to say that since we already believe women have these values it’s our duty to prove it.”

Roland then cited statistics that said women were the most frequent users of violence in families and assaulted their partners at about the same rate as men.

One such example was that murderers tend to be the “most frequent users of violence in families” at 4.2 percent compared to men’s 2.7 percent, which is stated in “Behind Closed Doors” by Murray Strauss.

Whitt was not convinced by Roland’s statistics.

“None of what Mark says proves what he’s arguing,” Whitt said.

Whitt presented a cooperative effort between men and women as a way to see both of their roles in society. He said that he didn’t want to denigrate one in order to make the other look better.

“I am not going to make male bad in order to make women look better,” Whitt said.

Roland was not satisfied with Whitt’s cooperative approach to men and women’s roles in society.

“We are cooperating, but if I carry 40 pounds and you carry 10, together we are only 50. Men are doing more,” Roland said.

Roland then went back to his list of statistics and finished his moral superiority point by citing that male discrimination is three to four times higher than females.

Roland proceeded to move to points about physical superiority, citing that men have more muscle than women.

“Men are likely to be 40 percent muscle and 15 percent fat; women tend to be 25 percent muscle and 25 percent fat,” Roland said, citing “Sensing of the Brain” by Darden-Starr.

“Muscle is what builds the bridges and buildings,” Roland said. “Men are doing the work.”

Women's studies lunch-time

By Rachel Brody
Daily Staff Writer

A panel of graduate and undergraduate students involved in the women's studies program attempted to answer the question "Why Women's Studies?" Monday afternoon.

During the first spring quarter lunch-time seminar held in Staff Dining Room B, panelists discussed personal experiences and hopes for the Cal Poly women's studies program.

Catherine Redstra, a graduate student in education counseling and former women's studies minor

"It was the faculty and the students who brought the women's studies program to its present state," Redstra said.

-Catherine Redstra, a graduate student in education counseling and former women's studies minor education and a former women's studies minor and member of the women's studies advisory board also spoke at the panel. Castle spoke about the enriched experience that the women's studies program provided during her time at Cal Poly. "I felt that I was part of a smaller unit in a large institution," she said. "The women's studies minor and program gave that to me." Castle also praised the instruction within the program. "I am so grateful, and I so appreciate the wisdom that the people who started the women's studies program have shown," she said. "The program provides a framework for understanding women's issues and life itself."

This insight into her own life brought about positive changes within her husband's life as well. "Through my growth and his growth, he is a feminist," Castle said. "As I change, I change those around me."

A change of pace came from the next speaker who was the only male member of the panel. Dave Morgan, English graduate student and an advisor to women's studies advisory boardmember, shared his experiences that transformed him from what he called a sexist to a women's studies supporter.

Morgan said that he had to learn about all aspects of women's studies before he rid himself of his negative views toward women. "I was like Scrooge in 'A Christmas Carol.' I was visited by the ghosts of sexism past, sexism present and sexism future," he said. "In order to deal with sexism present, you need to learn about sexism past."

Morgan also said that his classes in women's studies will help him to understand his students better when he becomes an English teacher.

TAKING THE SUMMER QUARTER

Cal Poly is gearing up for an even richer Summer Quarter 1997...

• More classes in your major
• More General Ed courses to choose from
• More full-time faculty to teach and advise you
• More opportunities to finish your degree so you can start earning some decent money

...and you will find campus life a lot more relaxed...

• Ample parking close to your classrooms
• No lines in the Avenue and El Corral
• A laid back, shorts and sweatshirt atmosphere

...in one of the most beautiful places on Earth.

• Avila Beach and Montana de Oro
• Lopez and Nacimiento lakes
• Black Lake and Hunter Ranch golf courses

Talk it over with your folks.

Going to Summer Quarter makes a lot of sense.

Our report from England

"I think English people could stand on a street corner shouting out obscenities and still sound proper."

BY REMI SKLAR
DAILY FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

Walking through the daffodils in Regent's Park, taking in the London skyline all around me, it hit me for the twentieth time that I was actually going to be living here in England. It is impossible not to notice all of the cultural differences between the United States and England. I'm going to share a few of the interesting lifestyle differences and some of the lingo I've picked up so far.

An obvious difference is the language. In the U.K. where men are "blokes," *they have the same language, but you would never hear any of the following phrases in California.

A fascinating phrase like "taking the piss" out of someone isn't forcing them up to the bathroom (or "loo"). It is, however, fooling or joking around with them.

A "dodgy geezer" is a shady or weird person of any age. You could also describe a dark alley or something of poor quality as being a "bit dodgy."

"Pardon me, but can I trouble you for a fag?" is not an everyday question in London, but in the United States it might get you some weird looks or into some trouble. In London, it's a polite request for a cigarette.

You have to learn these little words to avoid confusion. I probably pick up a new phrase every day. It is amazing how an ocean and eight hours apart can change the meaning of words.

Then there is the pronunciation of words to contend with. The British accent completely alters the tone of the language. I think English people could stand on a street corner shouting out obscenities and still sound proper.

It isn't just the British speech which is more formal, British mannerisms are much more reserved in everyday situations. In the London Underground or "tubes" (the subway) everyone is reading the paper or looking down. Very few people talk to each other. A new British "mate" told me that if someone tries to make a lot of eye contact on the tubes, then he is probably a pervert.

At first the silence is unnerving, but I've adjusted. When groups of Americans are on the tubes or in restaurants here, you can spot their chattering of American life, they might get you some obscenities and still sound proper.

I think English people could stand on a street corner shouting out obscenities and still sound proper.

I love California, but I really, really love living in London. I am grateful and willing to go into debt for this journey.

Remi Sklar just couldn't handle being a Mustang Daily staff writer, so she tried to escape to England, but we tracked her down.
Utilidor man strikes

Editor:
As I was walking at the noon hour today along University Drive in front of the Dexter building I was solemnly wondering, for whatever reason, what it must be like to be an Utilidor wor­ker, in the midst of 18,000 university students.

Pacing on the new minor detour near the kiosk I wondered no longer as I, or any other member of the student body who wondered the same and was within earshot (NOT a difficult task), was miraculously answered by one very vocal Utilidor man who for reasons I am unaware of was condemning the lot of us in general as “stupid,” questioning how we “had even gotten here,” and trying to convince his Utilidorts of the same.

The answer in question: apparently, it sucks. I was too near to him to avoid taking personal offense and sent a gong-sho “Fuck off!” over my shoulder, somewhat regrettably as I later realized I was uninterested in contributing any fuel to his starving fire. Nor was I aching to be knocked in the head by the Utilidor. That aside, I would simply request that in the future you would keep your lowly, skewed opinion of Cal Poly students on yourself. Save me the trouble of doing the chiding. You guy ARE the Utilidor. Don’t instill it with a bad spirit. Thank you.

Open season on humans? Hope not

Editor:
In regards to Johnny Vandal’s column last week, I would like to affirm to him that yes, Open House is in fact a cult made up of Johnnie Vandals. In fact, after being involved for two years now, I’m ready to kill myself just to get away from it. Also, I would like to scream earger support for Jonny Vandal as a write in candidate for ASI President. Not more rich kids with no concept of the need for financial aid.

INTOXICATING NEWS: ENCOURAGING HEALTHY DRINKING

We, the Alcohol and Other Drugs Team, have a bone to pick with the students of Cal Poly. AOD received no questions for Introduction News which means nobody at this body gets the free Ride-On pass. But since we like you, were willing to keep the contest open for another few weeks. Now onto the subject at hand.

Just about everyone knows what is happening just in a week and a half. Yep, the infamous Wildflower! Fun, sun and, of course, drinking. For some, that weekend is a preview for the summer to come and AOD has a few tips to offer. Fun, of any kind, can be had as long as it’s done responsibly. If you choose to drink, we have some basic information that may or may not make drinking be just that, RESPONSIBLE.

Know your limit.
Intoxication depends on both your body structure and your past drinking experience. If you don’t drink heavily or on a regular basis, don’t try to break your drink­ing record in one night. Also, don’t try to keep up with your friends who are more experienced with drinking. Drinking isn’t a contest, so do what your body feels comfortable with.

Space your drinks.
Drinking is not a race. It takes 20 to 30 minutes for an alcoholic drink to hit your system. This is why pounding drinks isn’t a good idea. If you begin the night by taking three shots in a row and don’t feel anything, you might think you can keep going. But in under a half an hour, your body will begin to feel the effects of the alcohol. Another key point is that it takes approximately one hour for a drink to be processed from your system. Remember: one drink, one hour.

Drink water between your alcoholic drinks.
Alcohol dehydrates the body which is why you are so thirsty the morning after a night of drinking. Drinking water will help reduce that effect. If taken before drinking, salt tablets also help because they keep water trapped in the body. Be careful not to con­fuse salt tablets with salty foods. Salty and greasy food will not minimize the effects of the alcohol, in fact they just make you thirstier.

Eat before and during your drinking escapade.
Eating may reduce the effects of the alco­hol. We are not saying that eating is a cure, but it can help. Food high in carbohydrates, like whole wheat breads and grains, and rich in thiamin, such as liver, are the best for you to eat. This means that a “run to the border” is not a big help.

Avoid carbonated or bubbly bever­ages while drinking.
These types of drinks help the alcohol absorb into your blood stream much more rapidly. Although they may make the alcohol taste better, they will not help in slowing intox­i­cation.

We, the Alcohol and Other Drugs Team, want you to have fun throughout the sum­mer as well as at Wildflower. We also want you to be around to read our next article, so please, party smart.

As said before, our contest for great ques­tions is still open. Drop your alcohol and other drug questions in the Letters to the Editor box in the Mustang Daily office or at the front desk of the Peer Health Network. We also welcome you to be around to read our next article, so please, party smart.

Entzi wants more money to be used for student activities and programs. Clubs are often turned down when requesting more funding from ASI, something Entzi would like to change. "McShane) did a good job, but he didn't do what he said he would. He didn't do enough.

Things haven't changed. Overall, students still aren't informed," Entzi said. "As a president, you have to do more than just say things and talk to people. You have to actually do things."

Entzi wants every Cal Poly student to be represented in ASI.

"I know that not all students want to be actively involved in ASI, but I want to make sure those students are still listened to," Entzi said. She would like ASI to take a weekly ad in the Mustang Daily.

Things haven't changed. Overall, students still aren't informed," Entzi said. "As a president, you have to do more than just say things and talk to people. You have to actually do things."

Entzi wants every Cal Poly student to be represented in ASI.

"I know that not all students want to be actively involved in ASI, but I want to make sure those students are still listened to," Entzi said. She would like ASI to take a weekly ad in the Mustang Daily.
Rehearing on affirmative action requested, with Clinton support

By Bob Egelko
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Civil rights groups with Clinton administration support, asked a federal appeals court Tuesday to reconsider its ruling upholding Proposition 209, the voter-approved ban on affirmative action based on racial or gender preference.

The April 8 ruling by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals conflicts with Supreme Court decisions striking down state laws that targeted minority programs for hostile treatment, said lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union and other organizations representing challengers to the initiative.

They also accused a three-judge panel of violating the appeals court’s rules by deciding the entire case after being assigned to rule only on whether Proposition 209 could take effect during an interim period. The panel said in its ruling that it had the authority to broaden the scope of its review.

The request for rehearing automatically extends a ban on implementation of the initiative. If reconsideration is denied, Proposition 209 could take effect a week later unless the Supreme Court intervened. There is no deadline for a decision.

In addition to a rehearing before the original panel, opponents asked the entire court to refer the case to an 11-judge court of appeals for a new hearing. A majority vote among the 19 judges eligible to participate - 11 of whom were appointed by Republican presidents - is required to order such a hearing.

Lawyers on both sides of the case have predicted it will end up in the Supreme Court.

President Clinton’s Justice Department, which joined the opposition to the appeals court, also filed arguments in support of a rehearing. Clinton, whose slogan on affirmative action has been “Mod if it, don’t end it,” opposed Proposition 209 during the campaign.

By passing the initiative, “California has effectively limited the access of minorities and women - the primary beneficiaries of affirmative action programs - to the local political process,” Justice Department lawyers wrote.

Proposition 209, approved by 54 percent of the voters last November, would prohibit preferences based on race or sex in state and local government employment, education and contracting.

Its enforcement was barred last December by Chief U.S. District Judge Thomas Henderson of San Francisco, who said opponents were likely to prove it unconstitutional.

Henderson said the measure, though neutrally worded, would only allow benefits programming minorities and women, while leaving other groups, such as veterans and children of college alumni, free to ask government agencies for special treatment.

He relied chiefly on a 1982 Supreme Court ruling upholding a Washington state anti-busing initiative on the grounds that it stopped local school boards from adopting transportation programs that helped minorities while allowing busing for other reasons.

But a three-judge panel of the appeals court disagreed April 8, ruling not only that opponents were not entitled to an injunction against the measure but also that it was clearly constitutional.

The opinion by Judge Diarmuid O’Sullivan said opponents of Proposition 209 were demanding a nonexistent constitutional right to preferential treatment.

He said affirmative action programs based on preferences are constitutionally suspect, hurt some while helping others, and can be abolished by a state. In language reminiscent of some of Henderson’s conservative critics, O’Sullivan wrote that “a system which permits one judge to block with the stroke of a pen what 4.73 million state residents voted to enact as law tests the integrity of our constitutional democracy.”

That statement was attacked in Tuesday’s rehearing request as “inconsistent with the tradition of Marbury vs. Madison,” the 1803 Supreme Court ruling that established the court’s authority to decide whether a law was constitutional.

Like the Washington anti-busing law and laws overturned by the Supreme Court, Proposition 209 discriminates “by treating racial preferences differently from all other preferences, such as legacy (college) admissions, political patronage, and geographical preferences,” wrote ACLU lawyer Mark Rosenbaum and Evan Cuminer, a UCLA law professor.

rocked the compound, including Peru’s foreign minister, Francisco Tudela, who a congressman said suffered a broken leg. In Tokyo, Japan’s prime minister called it a “splendid rescue,” but also said it was “regrettable” that Perú had not forewarned his government of the surprise, broad-day attack.

The 150-man military-police assault team struck at about 3:30 p.m. (1:30 p.m. PDT), pouring through the compound’s front gate, then blasting open the mansion’s front door. Others attacked from the rear, and a third unit climbed to the rooftop and sheepherder hostages down.

It ended quickly. As smoke billowed over the residence, triumphant soldiers hauled down the guerrillas’ flag, and ex-hostages and rescuers cheered and jubilantly sang the Peruvian national anthem. A large pool of blood could be seen at the bottom of a staircase.

The operation ended an international ordeal that had transfixed two nations and focused global attention on a little-known leftist guerrilla group, Amasiva, and its demands that jailed comrades be freed in exchange for the captive diplomats and businessmen.

Peruvian and Japanese news media reported all the hostages—holding at least two women and four diplomats, including one Japanese woman and a U.S. diplomat. Fujimori repeatedly ruled that out.

Fujimori had said he would use force to end the crisis only as a last resort, but Peruvian news media repeatedly reported military plans to raid the compound.

The heavily armed guerrillas stormed the residence on Dec. 17, killing 12 diplomats and businessmen, including at least two Britons and a Japanese woman and taking almost 500 hostages. They quickly released most of them.

The Japanese government had warned they had heavily mined the compound to prevent an assault, and staged blows for several months before this month to prepare for a raid.

The hostage crisis had sparked a political crisis in Peru, and Peru’s interior minister and national police chief stepped down over the weekend, apparently unharmed, to a military hospital.

From inside the caves, the freed men gave the thumbs-up sign and smiled.

Other hostages were rushed off in ambulances. Friends and family gathered at the nearby hospital to look for loved ones.

“We’re here to applaud the hostages and police for their brav­ ery,” said one woman at the hospi­ tal, Edith Gonzalez. “There was no other alternative but to attack.”

But the sister of one hostage said she wasn’t sure.

“I don’t know if the attack was necessary,” said Nancy Dominguez, 53. “All I know is it was a horrible shame.”

In Tokyo, Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said Perú had not told him in advance of the raid, even though the com­ pound is technically Japanese soil.

“Our country was not informed in advance and this is very regre­ table,” he said. But he expressed support for Peru’s leader, saying, “There should be nobody who could criticize Mr. Fujimori for his decision.”

Hashimoto said all the Japanese hostages were safe, but some were slightly injured. He also expressed regrets for “several people who are injured or lost their lives.”

Days after peacefully ending the cri­ sis broke down March 12 over the rebels’ demand that Perú free their jailed comrades, Fujimori repeatedly ruled that out.

What will you be doing in September? College? Job Hunting? Working?

JOIN THE DOMESTIC PEACE CORPS!

- Mentor high-risk teenagers
- Gain intensive work experience
- Earn money for college
- Make a difference!

The San Luis Obispo County AmeriCorps Program is currently recruiting 55 exceptional individuals to become AmeriCorps Members. Service is September 3, 1997 - July 31, 1998. All Members serve as mentors to high risk teenagers. Our goal is to decrease juvenile crime, substance use and teen pregnancy by providing prolonged intervention to youth.

If you're someone who is enthusiastic, highly responsible, can take on a challenge, be a good role model, and wants to work one-on-one with teenagers, AmeriCorps might be for you. Full and part time positions available, a living stipend is provided. A $2300 - $4700 educational award is given after completing service.

It's hard work. It's team work. It's exciting work. If you're ready to make a commitment, we encourage you to apply. Call 805-549-7890 for more information. Applications due May 23, 1997.

stretches throughout San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties. He said there were 50 officers in San Luis Obispo and 50 officers in Santa Barbara. According to a press release, undercover NTF agents purchased large quantities from the organization.

At approximately 2 p.m. Tuesday afternoon Gardiner and the NTF purchased three pounds of methamphetamine. Shortly after, they served the search warrants in nine locations, four in San Luis Obispo, including the two locations on Higuera Street.

"It was an excellent investigation," Gardiner said. "There was no resistance, no one was injured and we have apprehended possible "concealment and destruction of evidence and intimidation of witnesses."

Prosecutors are looking into:

- Payments to Whitewater witness Webster Hubbard arranged by longtime friends of the president. The investigators are considering the possible payoff as a means to discourage Hubbard, a long-time friend of the Clintons, from giving prosecutors information about the president and first lady.

- Whether the president lied in sworn testimony last year that he had no knowledge of a fraudulent $300,000 federally backed loan to Susan McDougal, one of the Clintons' partners in the Whitewater real estate venture. Part of the loan was used to prop up the failing venture, and the $300,000 was never repaid. Mrs. McDougal refused to testify to any Whitewater grand jury and is jailed for contempt of court.

Bobby McDaniel of Jonesboro, a lawyer for Mrs. McDougal, said Tuesday the grand jury extension would not change her client's position.

"My reaction is that Mr. Starr just doesn't get it," Susan McDougal has been held in the most awful conditions in solitary confinement, essentially, and she's not going to cooperate with Mr. Starr and the extension of the grand jury will not change that," McDaniel said.

The disappearance and mysterious reappearance of Mrs. Clinton's law firm billing records that Mrs. Clinton's partner in the Whitewater venture, and the $300,000 savings and loan in Arkansas. The records vanished and turned up in the White House more than two years after investigators subpoenaed them.

Hubbell "knows where the bodies are buried" and holds the answers to many of the questions in the grand jury, prosecutors have said. McDougal said Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live." Hubbell and Mrs. Clinton were partners in the Rose Law Firm, which represented McDougal's savings and loan. McDougal has been cooperating with prosecutors since last Aug. 8.

Customers who tried to obtain their cars from the auto shops were turned away by dog searches and police officers from various agencies searched the building, cars and surrounding area to confiscate additional narcotics.

The agencies assisting the NTF in the investigation included FBI, Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Customs, the Drug Enforcement Administration, California Highway Patrol, the San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara County's sheriff's departments, and local police departments.

SAN FRANCISCO - Although the national average gasoline price fell for the third consecutive month, prices at California pumps have jumped in the past five months to as much as 12 cents in some cases.

San Francisco, Santa Cruz and Fresno have seen the sharpest increases, according to a California State Automobile Association survey.

Since March 17, for example, the average price of a gallon of self-service unleaded gasoline in San Francisco has increased 12 cents to $1.52.

The survey also found that the price of a gallon of self-service unleaded was up 11 cents a gallon in Monterey. The price was up 10 cents in Concord, 9 cents in San Jose and San Mateo, and 8 cents in Oakland and Sacramento.

Meanwhile, the national average price fell for the third consecutive month, and at $1.25 has reached its lowest level since last August.

Although the price of crude oil has been declining - largely explaining the national decline in pump price - supply-and-demand and other economic factors have caused increases in California, analysts said.

So if California refiners are producing 960,000 barrels of gasoline per day, what's going on?

"As everyone will tell you, California in so many things, especially gasoline prices, is a world unto itself," Mike Morrissey, a price specialist at AAA headquarters in Heathrow, Fla., said Monday.

Currently, there are about 4 million barrels in storage in California, compared with 4.2 million this time last year, said Bob Aldrich, a spokesman for the California Energy Commission.

At this time of year, refiners also are changing their products - for example, switching from diesel production to gasoline. That means, in the down time, the transition also causes supply to drop.

Aldrich and other analysts don't expect to see a price decline at the pump of more than a penny or so in May and the beginning of the summer peak driving season.

In Washington, the U.S. Energy Information Administration predicted that despite anticipated record demand for gasoline, lower crude oil prices would prevent a repeat of last year's surge in pump prices.

CHARLESTON, S.C. - The Citadel canceled classes Tuesday so its 16 female cadets could learn how to get along with the women among them, everything from avoiding language that isn't suitable for girls to not barging in on their barracks.

"Diversity Awareness Day," sensitivity training on the importance of women, was ordered as the formerly all-male military college reeks from allegations that two female cadets left because they were hazed and battered.

"It's no longer that men are the bosses and the women follow orders," said Faye Crosby, a professor at all-female Smith College in Northampton, Mass. "You need to learn how to work with people who don't look exactly like you."

Classes were canceled and gray-uniformed cadets marched to the school's field house for the daylong training, beginning with lectures on gender awareness.

Sandi Thomas, the president of all-female Converse College in Spartanburg, said boys learn to be competitive while girls learn to be nurturing.

"Women must understand the culture of men, and men must understand the culture of women," she said.

But as the day wore on, such vast concepts were boiled down to concrete questions: Should female cadets wear skirts? Should sun-bathing be allowed outside the barracks?

The Citadel dropped a bitter lawsuit last year over allegations that girl cadets had several people just walk in without knocking.

The school has disciplined 14 male cadets and state officials and the FBI are still investigating possible criminal violations.

Senior cadet Sean McBride said he thought the sessions would help.

"We need to stop worrying about being the last class of men, he said. "We have this old corps culture that wants to live in the past. We need to be looking at the fact we're the first and be proud of that."

Thirty-five women have been accepted for this fall's freshman class, and 12 have already indicated they will attend. As many as five upperclass female cadets from Texas A&M may also be on campus in the fall as exchange students.

DENVER - Seven men and five women were selected Tuesday to hear the Oklahoma City bombing trial, with the judge using a bingo-style system to numbers of shield the identities of the already anonymous jurors.

"I now address you as members of the jury," U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch told them as they took their assigned seats in the jury box. "You've been selected as the jury to try this case."

Although their names, backgrounds, attitudes and races were not disclosed, sources close to the case said the jury consisted of seven men and five women, with an alternate panel of three men and three women.

A sloping wall keeps most reporters from seeing into the jury box, but members of the public have a better view. Audience members who appeared to have 16 whites and two whose race could not be determined, but who appeared to be either Hispanic or American Indian.

These jurors who could be seen by reporters included an elderly white man who leaned over and stared at reporters; a young white man with glasses; a young white woman with curly blonde hair; a white balding man with a mustache; a man with long dark hair who appeared to be an American Indian and a white young man with a beard.

Jurors return Thursday to take their oath and opening statements as Timothy McVeigh stands trial in the worst act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

The 28-year-old Gulf War veteran is charged in the April 19, 1995, truck bombing of the downtown Oklahoma City federal building that killed 168 people and injured hundreds more. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

Outside of court, McVeigh lawyer Stephen Jones said: "We're ready to go. Prosecutors declined comment.

Intent on preserving jurors' privacy, Matsch envisioned an unusual system of exercising peremptory challenges, in which jurors were identified by a letter and a number.

Lawyers called out the codes D-2, A-4, E-6 and the like - of the jurors to be dismissed. In peremptory challenges, no reason must be stated to excuse a juror. The process took about a half hour.

Prosecutor Richard Hargrave tried to make light of the system.

"Like bingo, your honor," Hargrave quipped.

Matsch glared at the prosecutor.

We are redoing the 1971 overhaul of the interior and exterior of the building to replace the old ones that exist now.

Part four of the project includes replacing all the furniture in the lounges and the lobby areas. Additional study tables will also be added.

The University Union’s refurbishment project will include:

- Auditorium
- Outdoor Plaza
- Signage
- Lobby and Lounge Area Furniture
- Conference Rooms
- Office Furniture and Work Stations
- Wall Finishes Upper Level Lobby Areas
- New Interior Construction
- Additional Costs

Total Project Budget Costs: $1,671,250

The plan encompasses eight elements: 1) Chumash Auditorium, 2) the outdoor plaza, 3) signage, 4) the lobby and lounge area furniture, 5) conference rooms, 6) office furniture and work stations, 7) wall finish in the upper level lobby areas and 8) new interior construction.

Refurbishing Chumash could include a new sound system, new draperies, clouds at the ceiling and video equipment.

Have you ever wanted trees in the UU plaza? Well your wish could come true. Along with new concrete, new steps, new lighting, benches and an information kiosk, trees for the outside plaza are in the plan.

The plan also calls for new signs inside and outside of the building.

The plan is to get rid of that by replacing the wood paneling or even some other alternative.

The University Union’s refurbishment project is in the final part. Plans include moving the ASI office, redoing the entry into the lower level restrooms and changing the lower level hall and entry into the game area. The most noticed change will be the enclosure of the covered walkway at the bookstore.

The facility operations committee is still reviewing the plan. Brooks hopes the board can pick an architect for the project by the summer so plans can be developed.

Willie Williams gets $375,000 taxpayer ‘golden handshake’ to leave

By Jeff Wilson

Los Angeles — Police Chief Willie Williams will get $375,000 in severance pay and taxpayers will leave quietly next month under a deal struck Tuesday despite political foes’ claims that it amounts to extortion.

The City Council approved the “golden handshake” package 8-7 after two hours in closed session. Observers said the session included quite a bit of arm-twisting by Mayor Richard Riordan who claimed the severance would allow the chief to leave with dignity.

“The idea that somehow this is going to enable him to leave with dignity is absurd. There is no dignity in extortion,” said Councilman Joel Wachs, who voted against the deal.

Williams’ management and honesty came under fire during his term as chief. The severance package sets a bad precedent, Wachs and other council members argued.

“I strongly opposed this package,” Wachs said. “Our lawyers have made it very, very clear that he’s not entitled to it, that he should finish and leave. He’s getting more money now for not working.”

Williams, whose five-year contract wasn’t renewed by the Police Commission, will leave May 17, six weeks before his term officially ends on July 6. The chief had earlier threatened to challenge the commission decision in court.

Mediator Richard “Skip” Byrne, a retired Superior Court providing judge, assured the council there would be no litigation if there was approval. Police Commission President Raymond Fisher also pressed for the deal.

“This is in the best interest of the city of Los Angeles,” Riordan explained.}

School records broken in Track & Field meet

Daily Staff Report

The men's and women's Track and Field teams turned in a solid performance at the Pomona PitzerMt. Sac Relays last week-end, breaking school records left and right.

Senior pole vaulter Sean Brown finished first with a vault of 18 feet, six and three-quarters inches. He broke his own school record of 18 feet, one inch that he set March 15. Brown earned an automatic qualification to the NCAA Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis in May.

Shot putter and discus thrower Andy Sverchek finished second in the discus with a mark of 176 feet, five inches, breaking his old school record of 175 feet, eight inches that he set at the Cal Poly Invitational on March 15.

Sprinter Kaaron Conwright set personal best times in both the 100m and 200m races. He placed first in his heat in the 100m and fourth in the 200m.

On the women's side, sophomore Cynthia Pettibon broke the school record by more than a foot in the triple jump with a mark of 40 feet, five and one-half inches.

Love beats out Mickelson in playoff for title at World Championships

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

EATONTON, Ga. — Phil Mickelson made a brilliant shot to advance to the American finals of the Andersen Consulting World Championship of Golf on Tuesday. Then he was beaten by one that was almost as good.

With winds gusting off Lake Oconee and a nearby approaching storm, Davis Love III put his tee shot within two feet of the hole on the second playoff hole and knocked in the birdie putt to beat Mickelson for the U.S. title in the match-play event.

Love's victory on the Great Waters course in east Georgia means the world's top-ranked player and senior pole vaulter Sean Brown finished first with a vault of 18 feet, six and three-quarters inches. He broke his own school record of 18 feet, one inch that he set March 15. Brown earned an automatic qualification to the NCAA Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis in May.

Love's victory on the Great Waters course in east Georgia sends him to play the European, Japanese and International champions in the world finals next January at Scottsdale, Ariz. He also assures himself of at least $500,000 in the $3.65 million event.

The first time he played he made 159-yard 17th hole, Love thought his tee shot was right on the flag, but it skidded past the green and he settled for a par. Mickelson birdied the hole to even the match.

After both players birdied the 18th hole, it was back to 16 for the playoff. Both men were drugging — Mickelson needed 18 holes to beat Fred Couples in the semifinal earlier in the day, while Love used 16 holes to defeat Tom Lehman 3 and 2 — and they both had shaky pars to force another extra hole.

"It was a tough match," Love said. "It was not a well-played match. I think we both ran out of gas."

But not before Love stepped up to 17 again, pulled out the same 7-iron he had used the first time and, with a nice, easy swing, knocked the ball just beyond the flag.

"Boy, if that's not right on it," Love said, admiring the ball as it sailed toward the green.

Mickelson went about 25 feet right of the cup with his tee shot and missed the tricky, downhill putt. Love stepped up and sank his winning birdie just in time to make it to the clubhouse before severe thunderstorms swept over the Jack Nicklaus-designed course.

"That was my best shot of the week," Love said, "and it was a great time to have it."

Mickelson knew that feeling earlier in the day. In his semifinal match against Couples, with the two golfers tied heading to the par-5 18th hole, Mickelson hit his 228-yard second shot to within six inches of the cup, just short of a double-eagle.

Couples conceded the eagle after that, 1 was too angry to play well," admitted Lehman, who also lost the 13th and 14th holes to doom his chances. "There are not too many times I get angry and it affects my game, but it hap-
