Student vote shuts down health-fee increase

By Mark Hartz
Daily Staff Writer

Students won't be paying more for health services next year.

The majority of the 971 students who voted Wednesday and Thursday voted against the $25 health-fee increase.

Of the nearly 17,000 students at Cal Poly, only 6 percent registered their votes on Wednesday and Thursday—587 against the increase and 384 in favor of it.

"With a low turnout (at the voting booth), it isn't what people think, it's what the people who vote think," Martin Bragg, director of health services said. "The students have had every opportunity to know what the issue is about. But trying to pass a tax increase is difficult."

The fee would have increased by $14 in Summer 1998 and by another $9 in Summer 1999. Right now the fee is $28 and is incorporated into the total registration cost.

The money raised would have gone to decrease the Health Center's drain on the Cal Poly General Fund and its own true fund. One-third of the money would have been added to finance.

The money would also have expanded some specialty services, including dermatology and psychology, kept the center open an extra eight hours a week and paid for an after-hours advice nurse.

Cal Poly students probably won't be faced with a similar vote again next year.

"It's pretty unlikely that I'm going to go through referendum next year," Bragg said.

He said he might go to student groups or Cal Poly President Warren Baker to look for other alternatives to raise money for the Health Center, which has been running on a deficit since 1995.

Technically, Baker has the final say on the increase, but he is expected to follow the student vote.

Outside the polls, set up in Kennedy Library, the U.U. and the Business Building, students expressed their opinions on the increase.

"I voted no," Kim Wendell, graphics communication junior said. "I think prices are too high already. I pay enough already."

Grace Fleming, biochemistry freshman, said, "I voted against it because it means I would have to pay more money. My mom is already complaining because (school) costs too much."

Anne-Marie Devine, speech communication sophomore, said, "I voted no because I feel our fees are high enough right now. I wouldn't mind paying money for an individual health visit, but we put enough already."

A few students felt the money the fee could generate would be put to good use.

"I voted yes," Sireah Abdulahab, biochemistry junior said. "I think the (phone consultation) nurse is a good idea."

"I voted yes," Sireah Abdulahab, biochemistry junior said. "I think the (phone consultation) nurse is a good idea."

The League of Women Voters administered the vote. League member Adelle Stemm said she was hired to make sure no one campaigns within 100 feet of the voting booths and that no one votes without having their IDs checked.

"Even if you are charming and attractive, you only get one vote," she said.

She said in the past, when students were allowed to run the vote, they would let their friends vote twice under different names.

CAPTURE registration schedule revamped

By Britte Sobates
Daily Staff Writer

Beginning fall quarter, students will not worry about having two low registration priorities in a row. The Registration and Scheduling Committee approved a new rotation schedule last week to ensure good priority for students every-other quarter.

This means that every-other quarter, excluding summer, students will register in one of the top six priorities.

Under the old system, summer was included in the regular CAPTURE registration. This resulted in many students, because they didn't attend summer quarter, missing out on their good priority.

The new system gives summer quarter its own rotation.

The schedule was created by Samuel Aborn, industrial engineering sophomore and member of ASI Board of Directors.

Aborn said he wanted to come up with a schedule which would change the occurrence of two good priorities followed by two bad priorities.

"In the current system there (are) repetitive quarters of lower emphasis, and priority I know there had to be a solution. I just had to find it," he said.

Aborn said when he started working with the committee in January, schedule changes were already being looked at.

"When I stepped in they were looking at previous summer quarter and something like that, of how to change the policy. They were already looking at the dates we would have been in previous quarter on its independent rotation," Aborn said.

Hospice Bereavement Workshop Series

After losing someone we love, we often find ourselves filled with questions, doubts and uncertainty. In addition to general grief support meetings, Hospice is offering a series of three workshops titled "Life After Loss."

The second in the series of workshops called "Dealing With Grief," will be held Monday, March 16. In this session, facilitators will discuss many of the feelings that accompany grief, along with suggestions on how to manage these responses. Workshop subject matter will also address why it's often difficult in this society to grieve or to feel support during this time of loss. Additionally, this session will take a look at the new roles those in the bereavement process often have to deal with when losing someone close.

The next and final workshop called "Moving On" will address such questions, doubts and uncertainty. In addition to general grief support meetings. Hospice is offering a series of three workshops titled "Life After Loss."

The members of the board considered that affordable housing near campus is highly desired and is also becoming increasingly scarce. They said many students would appreciate the opportunity to both join a fraternity or sorority, and live near campus as well. This also allows members of the Greek system to live in close proximity to each other.

The resolution states that the Cal Poly student body supports the location and development of fraternity and sorority housing in close vicinity to the university's campus, and requests that the City of San Luis Obispo adhere to the policies set forth in the General Plan.

College of Agriculture board member Jeremy Kreck developed the housing resolution and said passing it is definitely a step in the right direction.

"He worked so diligently on this," Murarka said. "He went through and researched and I'm fully behind this resolution."

The resolution will now be copied and sent to the San Luis Obispo City Council, the SLO Planning Department, and the SLO Police Department, to let the city know the stance of students at Cal Poly.

The Expo features health information for the whole family. Activities include blood pressure screening, body fat composition testing, back/purpose evaluation, fitness testing, dental care information, mini-massages, healthy food sampling, fitness demonstrations and the latest in health and wellness.

Each year the Cuesta College Health and Wellness Expo features information booths, demonstrations and the latest in health and wellness from healthcare organizations throughout the Central Coast. This year's Expo, free and open to the public, will be held in the Cuesta Student Center on Tuesday, March 17, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

In honor of St. Patrick's Day, participants can enjoy live Celtic music and dance between 11 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Visitors can also get their heart pumping with an aerobic step-a-thon fundraiser between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the cafeteria.

I have read and heard the arguments against and for the problem of the pollution of our campus, the misrepresentation of those painted red hands, other body parts painted across campus and the global catastrophe of the depleting ocean layer. These however have been raised in a very unethical, yet familiar, problem. I am talking about traffic.

Traffic is the occasional swipe of the backpack or scuff of the shoe, I don’t mind the people overflow that floods the campus area. But traffic is a time in-between when the unwary student carelessly walks across campus, immersed in the latest “Leave the P alone”...Stop stereotyping Greeks, uh, bro,” or “Spice girls v.s. Matchbox 20” dots in the Dabakar and walks straight into a busy intersection.

What intersection?” you ask. Via Carta and Campus Walk. They are typical for that matter. I cannot count on both feet the number of times I have almost had my.book crushed by a Campus Dining truck, nor do I want to think about the times I’ve nearly been hit by a roving freight.

This is both dangerous and unfair. My position as a pedestrian and music lover alike is for the ban on the headphones. With Ski 96’s Chumbawambas booming in his ears, he cannot hear the Utility vehicle sneaking up behind him. We will get knocked down, and most likely not get up again. Aside from a loss of human life, it’s deceitful to his backpack will be the most extra据了解 the problem of littering, as pieces of books and electronic equipment will be scattered across the scene—not to mention the unrended Mustang Daily be once held in his hands. One must also account for blood, which the unknowing forlorn, which has probably traveled further down the road, and most likely hit two or three more students in its path.

This domino effect is dangerous, but on. the other hand, it is another argument for some vehicles. What is to be said of the SLO transit buses that are forced to travel only on quiet streets, as they are the precious few that this? In fairness, why not create bus stops in some places. And we have made comment on the obvious racist column written up by the Daily. “It seems to me that my own race hate each other more than the enemy” hates us. That’s why you? Your answer probably lies in the fact that the problem of littering. We have to make sure that our campus is clean. We have to make sure that our campus is clean.

So why, after three weeks of heartfelt debate, do we not decide to seek one? It’s just a small information booth. Something that would help students and faculty. It is a good idea. It is a small information booth. It is a perfect way to get in touch with our constituents.

We at the Daily are fairly certain students would not know what their elected and appointed student government officials are up to. Students would like to know what our concerns are. Students would like to know what our concerns are. Students would like to know what we care about. Students would like to know what we care about. Students would like to know what we care about.

Viva MEXA my Xicano brother

Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to invite Omar Barcenas to come speak to me on a personal level about how he feels about MEXA. Stop hiding behind the words and come and confess what the student union’s philosophies, which, by the way, you seem to have misunderstood are and completely ignorant to.

Another question that I would pose to you is: “Why did you not have the motivation to write about the obviously racist column written up by the Daily? It seems to me that my own race hate each other more than the enemy” hates us. That’s why you? Your answer probably lies in the fact that you are trying to make sure that our campus is clean. We have to make sure that our campus is clean.

We are not separatist, the government is the one that sets up barriers and ghettos and makes it nearly impossible for us to escape. For you to state that we are indeed separatists is a false statement with no real proof. Once we escape the barriers, we end up forgetting about our roots and our people who are most in need of our assistance. They should abolish Affirmative Action and, instead, create a different form of Affirmative Action called persons. But those are not our concerns. Our people are in need of our assistance at this time, not in need of further divisiveness. If you ever decide to learn what MEXA is really about and not listen to misleading and false statements made by other people, then maybe you would understand MEXA. You call us radicals for fighting for the rights of all humanity, and you state we cause more problems than we solve. To this I ask, were you at the youth conference? Have you been to a statewide, a national or just a regular meeting? We discuss real issues, real problems and some possible solutions. If radical means fighting oppression, racism and discrimination then I am a radical and so are the other people that are against racism, oppression and discrimination of all kinds.

MEXA is not ruled by anybody, but instead, we practice a method of governing where our membership has the last say in what we do. We operate in a circle where everybody has an equal voice.

That’s the real problem. The first thing you feel the urge to voice your obviously angry and divisive letter in Mustang Daily, just go to a MEXA meeting and sit up in the front row, be prepared to hear the old D&D song. I would be more than happy to discuss your concerns with you and I would also be happy to discuss your concerns with you, face to face.

Remember, MEXA proved the way for us to have the opportunity to go to school. The people in Chiapas are our people, and we should support them. Do you feel it was right that 45 human beings were slaughtered? Do you support the people who committed this atrocity? If you believe it was right for them to do this to their people, then you agree with our brothers and sisters killing themselves in the barracks. But I am not angry about what you wrote. You are a little misinformed, but I will accept you as a brother no matter what. We must have an open heart and mind in order to accept our differ- ences. If not, Mexico remains divided and we will fall. Hasta la victoria siempre, my brother.

Carlos Antonio Arredondo is a biology junior.

Bragging rights

Editor,

I am writing this letter to commend Mustang Daily for its coverage of the Health Services Fee referendum. In my three years here, I’ve never seen a better job of reporting the Mustang. Your articles were clear, accurate and even-hand-ed. I even recommend that Becker both did excellent work in their informational articles that explored this complex issue. The editorial com- mentaries were also excellent in summarizing the referendum, while addressing the legitimate issues of the fee proposal, and the referendum process.

As I write this, obviously don’t know what the outcome of the vote will be, but you certainly gave the students several excellent views to acquaint them with the issues.

Thanks.

Martin Brogg is the director of health and psychological services.

Daily slime

Editor,

It is sad to see that Mustang Daily would rather print ignorant slime about MEXA than something positive. I invited MEXA members to a debate, can’t ASI decide to set it up? It seems to me that the information booth is a perfect way to get in touch with our constituents.

Maybe ASI members really think they’re better off copying up that U.T. office, guessing or just pretending they know what the students they represent want. It appears they don’t care enough to understand my issue. Maybe they will embrace this method. They should at least try.

ASI, wake up. Please don’t be sleeping at those meetings when you should be making those important decisions which affect the entire student body.

Viva MEXA my Xicano brother

Dearest mustang daily

Hello. For the past six and a half months I’ve been dating this really smart, funny and pretty girl. God, she’s great. The only problem I’m facing now is that I’ve recently been offered a very good position in Seattle with a substantial raise in pay. I’m not sure if I should stay with her or just pick up and leave her behind; and if I do leave will I regret it? I do stay what long term job could we have without our relationship hold?

Dearunsure and curious

A dilemma indeed! This must be very hard and trying time for you right now. Not easy for either of you. It appears if you have a lot of doubts to begin with. Is there a girlfriend someone you see yourself with in the future? Maybe she would look more attractive to you if you stay, but would she be the only reason for your stay here? If so, would you ever wait it against her in the future if you decide not to take the 20% position in Seattle. Relationships are a tricky thing. Let me ask you, have you talked this decision out with her yet? Maybe the two of you could come to a mutual agreement. Don’t ponder the “what if’s” in life, they’ll drive you bonkers. Just begin to weigh the pros and cons. However, this is your bright future you’re talking about, so make sure your decision is worth it—whether you want to choose. As for long term prospects with your girlfriend, only time will tell. Keep your chin up!

Big West winner Utah State falls to Maryland 82-68

By Steve Weinie
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — For a few scary minutes, Maryland wondered if it was doomed to a third straight year of one-game-and-out of the NCAA tournament.

The Terps could hardly believe what was happening to them Thursday. So much bigger, so much stronger, and just as quick as Utah State, the Terps opened with a 14-3 spurt on the muscle play of Obinna Ekezie and Rodney Elliott. Then they watched it evaporate.

Suddenly, the Aggies ran wild, pumping in 13 straight points on Marcus Saxon’s outside shooting and taking a 20-18 lead midway through the half. Could history repeat itself again, ending the Terps home once more after the first round? They called timeout and decided, no, it wouldn’t.

“We got together in the huddle and said, ‘Look, we can’t let this happen again. We’ve got to pick it up big time if we want to win’,” said guard Sarunas Jasikevicius.

And the Lithuanian showed his teammates the way, floating in three 3-pointers to spark Maryland to a 44-36 lead at halftime that wasn’t threatened the rest of the game as the Terps beat Utah State 82-68 in the West Regional.

Ekezie, a 6-foot-10, 256-pounder from Nigeria, started the game with a two-handed dunk and finished with 17 points and seven rebounds. Elliott, leaner at 6-8, but strong and quick, posted 21 points and 11 rebounds.

“Their tallest player was, like, 6-8, so we just kept pounding the ball inside and they couldn’t stop us,” said Ekezie, who bullied around the basket like Shaquille O’Neal. “We were a little nervous. I think you saw that in our play sometimes. But we’ve got this first win and now we can go.”

Jasikevicius scored 16 points and had seven assists for Maryland, and Aron Profit added 12 points and six assists.

Maryland (20-10) ruled the boards with a 47-27 advantage, as the smaller Aggies (25-8) had to rely almost entirely on Saxon. That worked pretty well in the first half, when Saxon scored 18 points. But the strategy failed in the second half when Maryland made adjustments on defense to limit him to seven points and a total of 25.

“At this level, the NCAA tournament, one guy isn’t going to beat you by himself too often,” Maryland coach Gary Williams said.

“Late in the second half, I kind of got worn down,” Saxon said. “They kept a guy on me all the time, trying to get the ball out of my hands. “They got us down early, and we fought back once, but it wasn’t enough. It was just bad defense on (Jasikevicius). We worked so hard to come back and we expended a lot of energy. We tried to do it again but we couldn’t find a way to get over the hump.”

Mustangs mount home attack on Big West rivals

While most students are looking forward to a week of vacation from school, the Cal Poly baseball team will face some of its toughest opponents this season.

The Cal Poly baseball team has stepped onto their home field only five games this season. This weekend they are set to begin a two-week, six-game homestand.

After dropping their last four games, the Mustangs will face their toughest opponent so far this weekend, Cal State Fullerton.

Cal Poly is 6-17 overall and 0-3 in the Big West. The Mustangs are undefeated in the Big West Conference this season and 14-6 overall. Depending on the poll, Cal State Fullerton ranks anywhere from 14th to 21st in the nation.

The Mustangs and the Titans have each played Fresno State and Cal State Northridge. The Mustangs lost their only game against Fresno, while Fullerton swept a three-game series from the Bulldogs. Cal State Northridge defeated Cal Poly twice, but Northridge lost to Fullerton in the only game they competed against each other.

Cal Poly will start Jason Fieito (1-2) on Friday, fol-

Big West names Wyles; Lipana Scholar Athletes for 1997-98

Senior Louella Lipana and junior Eric Wyles have been named Big West Scholar Athletes for 1997-98. The two were recently honored at the Big West Conference basketball tournament in Reno, Nevada last weekend.

Lipana, who earned her degree in History from Cal Poly this past December, graduated with a 3.48 GPA while leading the Cal Poly Volleyball team to the second round of the Big West Conference tournament.

Lipana was voted by her teammates to serve as the team captain last season. She was a second team, All-Conference selection and was named to three All-Tournament teams this past fall.

Lipana, the team's starting setter, ranked second in the Big West and 26th nationally, averaging 13.2 assists per game.

Wyles, a junior on the Cal Poly men's swimming and diving team, holds the school record in the 100 breaststroke. Wyles also became the first Cal Poly athlete to win an individual Big West title when he won the 100 breaststroke at the 1997 Big West Swimming and Diving Championships.

Wyles successfully defended his title this season and earned an NCAA provisional mark with a time of 56.14. Wyles was also the Big West runner-up for the 1997 and 1998 seasons in the 200 breaststroke.
