With the ASI election less than a month away, it's time to start examining the issues the people elected will have a say about. For the next three weeks, Mustang Daily will print verbatim responses each of the three entrances to Cal Poly for electronic signs, or marquees, at ASI. I believe one way to come to ASI is to provide resources and services for students from these changes. "We have at least one person or couple come here from the train station every day," Elaine Simer, hostel owner, said. "The new location is much more suited to our needs."

The hostel hosts about eight to 10 guests on any given night. Simer said there haven't been any complaints from neighbors since the move. In fact, some of our neighbors have come over to welcome them and look around, she said.

Lambda Chi Alpha had been looking to relocate closer to campus for about four or five years, said Simer. In December, Simer came to the fraternity to suggest the swap.

"We were so confident that it was the best move for everyone involved that we started packing before we went to the city," Simer said. "We were committed to making it happen." The use-permit hearing was held in February. The permit was approved, but Cal Poly Men's Soccer Head Coach Wolfgang Gardner and his wife Susanne, who live three doors down from the Santa Rosa site, appealed it.

What do you see as the role of the ASI President/Chair of the Board and the role of ASI in general?

Fraternity and hostel swap locations

By Jessica Mihed Daily Staff Writer

While other students basked in the sun or swaddled down the slopes over spring break, Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity members were busily unpacking boxes and hauling furniture.

On March 25, the Fraternity of Sigma Chi, Lambda Chi Alpha, and the SLO Coast Hostel swapped sites, following a controversial and drawn-out permit approval process.

The fraternity now resides at 1292 Foothill Blvd. and the SLO Coast Hostel has moved to 1617 Santa Rosa St.

Simer said the "switch was completed during spring break.

Greeks more likely to graduate and donate, study finds

College students who join a fraternity or sorority seem more likely to stay in school than other undergraduates, according to a study of alumni. This was true for each era of graduates from 1945 to 1994. In general, Greek alumni felt more positive about the social aspects of their college experience than did other alumni. This was true for each era of graduates from 1945 to 1994.

When asked whether “alcohol was abused when I was in college,” the number of Greek-organization graduates who agreed increased regularly from 1945 through 1994. CSU spending less on administration, more on education

The California State University (CSU) system has increased productivity, spending more money on education rather than administration, according to the CSU’s second-annual productivity improvement report.

The report, through direct savings, cost avoidance, cost reductions and reallocations, CSU productivity has increased by $16.7 million. The surplus pays for the Governor’s compact agreement and it increases CSU productivity by at least $10 million annually.

“These improvements were accomplished during a year in which enrollment grew by 7,000 full-time equivalent students above our estimated enrollment,” said Richard West, CSU senior vice chancellor for business and finance.

The fiscal report states that most of the $16.7 million came from increased academic and administrative efficiencies.

Liberal Arts Week to run April 13-17

Next week is Liberal Arts Week, a time for students in the College of Liberal Arts to attend forums, meetings and seminars which relate to their fields of study and general college experience.

The week begins with Academic Day Monday, April 13. A panel of professors will discuss the issue of “Ethics in the classroom.” Does the university have a responsibility to graduate ethical students?”

The discussion will take place from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. in Chumash Auditorium, UU 207. Everyone is welcome. For more information on Liberal Arts Week, keep reading Mustang Daily.

People’s Choice vote underway at U.U. Galerie

Now’s your chance to vote on “A Jury of Your Peers,” the art show featuring student artists currently underway in the U.U. Art Galerie. Though winners have been selected by the show’s judges, the Galerie will also award a $25 prize to the artist who receives the most student body votes. All students can vote once for their favorite piece until April 30, the end of the show.

Merry Christmas: Report says it’s too easy to get fake license

Sacramento — Five merry Californians are driving around with the same jolly old name on their drivers’ licenses: Santa Claus.

That’s because California law allows a motorist to use a fictitious name on a license. And that, according to a new legislative report, is one reason why it’s way too easy to get a fake driver’s license.

The report was issued Monday by the Joint Staff Task Force on Government Oversight.

“The driver’s license is the prime form of identification in California, and for that reason it is an essential tool for people who want to assume another identity for purposes of breaking the law,” said Sen. Steve Peace, D-El Cajon, who released the report.

A fake license can be used by an illegal immigrant to establish residency, by a registered sex offender to create a new identity, by a driver with a suspended license to keep driving, or by a teen-ager to buy liquor.

The Department of Motor Vehicles contract with the Polaroid Corp. to produce a “tamper-proof” license by the end of the year could help. The new license will include instant photo images and the thumbprint- ing of applicants, allowing DMV staff to consistently identify an applicant moving through the process.

Among the findings of the report:

— California is the only state where applicants are allowed to use a fictitious name on their license by filling out a form and paying an extra $12.

— Social security numbers must be given, but are not verified. The DMV says it won’t be able to link up with the federal government to check the numbers until December 1998 at the earliest, and perhaps as late as 2000.

As was created to “enrich the lives of the university community.” Whether it’s art, nature, athletics, or leadership, ASI sponsors a program that allows students to explore their interests.

The Board has two responsibilities, to make decisions regarding the ASI Corporation and to act as the student voice to the University President and other organizations. The Board must always guide the corporation in the direction that the students would like it to go.

One important role of the Chair is to teach and inspire the Board of Directors. Directors must realize the importance of exchanging information with their college councils and effectively expressing their college’s concerns to the rest of ASI. The Chair needs to ensure that the Board is well informed on all university issues, and the by laws of ASI. This takes experience with the corporation and a good working relationship with the ASI Business office and other Directors.

Trotter said African American history and culture are not separable from American history. He said he hopes the group will help to recognize African American contributions to modern-day America.

"The group will help its members learn about the self and constructing oneself as an American," Trotter said.

Trotter formed the group to resemble the Children of Light, an African American literature discussion group at Cal Poly last year. The group will run weekly discussions on different topics concerning African Americans and their role in today's society. Each topic will be presented by a speaker with knowledge about specific issues and will be followed by an open forum for discussion and questions.

America's most popular big bill getting a new look

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON — The $20 bill—the largest denomination most Americans use in their daily business—is getting a new look.

Like the $100 and $50 notes before it, the $20 is being updated with anti-counterfeiting features, including an enlarged, offset portrait.

Andrew Jackson, the nation's seventh president and hero of the 1815 Battle of New Orleans, will retain his spot on the front of the double-sawbucks—so named because the Roman numeral XX on 19th century versions of the bills looked like sawblades. The White House still will be portrayed on the back.

The Treasury Department said Monday that Secretary Robert Rubin and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan would reveal the new design on May 20 but the bills won't show up in automated teller machines and cash drawers before the fall.

In the meantime, the Treasury Department is preparing a public education effort to persuade Americans to stop and look at money they receive before tucking it into their wallets.

Even the most sophisticated anti-counterfeiting features don't work if cash handlers don't check them. After the introduction of the new $100 note in March 1996 and the new $50 last October, bankers said some businesses were stuck with bogus bills simply because employees weren't suspicious of the new designs.

"It's a way it's a tribute to the job the Secret Service does that people don't give a thought to the bills they receive," said Howard Schloss, assistant Treasury secretary.

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is considering bringing a case against Microsoft Corp., involving the new Windows 98 software, officials said Monday.

Justice investigators issued a new round of civil subpoenas to major computer makers concerning Microsoft Corp., but haven't decided yet if they will file a case.

A Microsoft spokesman said Monday that no decision has been made yet if they will file a case.

Meter maids from Hell

By David Isham

Great, ANOTHER ticket! I wonder what those meter maids are up to this time? I walk over to read the ticket and discover that I have been given a ticket for not having a permit, again.

I quickly glance at my car to see my permit hanging on my rear view mirror. This is a typical day in my life as someone who is just trying to get through school without going broke paying bogus fines to "Parking En-force-ment." I have been at Cal Poly for many years now and I will finish my Master's degree in June.

Sometimes I feel I spend more time at the Parking En-force-ment building pet-itioning my parking permits than I do studying for exams.

It seems that the meter maids have done away with permits for the sole reason that the hanging permit is facing the wrong direc-tion. Parking En-force-ment officers like to give tickets to people who give their permits facing forward and some give tickets to those having back-facing permits. I always wonder why the officer has enough energy to walk up to the front of the car to give you the ticket... as if they don't have enough energy or wits to realize that the permit might actually be facing the right direction.

Just recently, I received a ticket for an expired meter. I have not used a meter on campus for several years now since this one dark and gloomy evening when parking was at a premium, even for those with state permits. So I pulled into a small, obscure lot with several meters. It was 25 minutes after 6 p.m. and the sun was setting.

Trying to figure out the meter's hours of operation I poked into the meter's glass but was dismayed because I couldn't read the times since the glass was severely chipped. I then took the time to walk to the huge sign at the entrance of the park-ing lot to read the hours of operation. The sign is incredibly detailed with city ordi­inance numbers and section numbers of the city parking code, but it makes no mention of parking meters, only permits. I made a reasonable assumption that the meter would work on the same times that the City of San Luis Obispo's meters work on.

Big mistake.

Arriving back to my car one minute after the hour, I found a Parking En-force-ment officer writing me a ticket for an expired meter. I informed the officer that I could not read the hours of operation.

He pulled out his D-M Mag Flashlight from hell, and together we tried to read the hours. We could hardly make out some of the words on that meter. The officer agreed that the words could not be read. I was told to keep in mind that most people don't carry around giant flashlights that could easily double as weapons of mass destruction, but he said I would have to go see (yes, you guessed it) "Parking En­force-ment" if I wanted to appeal the tick­et.

Once you get a ticket, the real fun begins. If you do appeal the ticket, the odds of winning are astronomically low. If students run­ning the front desk have an unaccountable and inexplicable attitude toward people disput­ing their tick­ets, as if they were being held at gunpoint for high treason. I once asked a politi­cian, "Why did I get this ticket when I do have a per­mit?" The droid student worker replied abruptly, "Well, the yellow appeal form on the wall sir." I then proceeded to ask the student who would review this appeal, and she then proceeded to ask the student who was being appealed, and the student worker replied abruptly, "Fill out the yellow appeal form on the wall sir."

As I see it, there are two possible solutions to the "Poly P" Problem. Education might be a third, but I think we have pretty much ruled that one out.

Solution number one is your basic bureaucratic solution, one that involves two four-letter "P" words. The word that I think is most interesting is appeal. Appeal is a legal word, and it means how long will it be before some airplane crashes into the side of Bishop Peak because they mistakenly thought they were near Athens rather than San Luis Obispo? Not likely.

Another thing Mr. Kunz, most of the population here at Cal Poly chose to attend this school. Let me reiterate that last point: the decision was made by CHOICE.

Something like that will run around to more than 10,000 students desiring to become Mustangs. It certainly got around to more than my few classmates here and, low and behold, you even came. So you can drink your problems away, you can bitch and moan, you can stand in line at the gym to do whatever, but save your breath and computer space, because complaints like that don't bear on the rest of us. There are students here who are going to actually make something of themselves. We will add you yet substantial proof to that "so-called rumor" about what a great school Cal Poly is.

The reason rumors like that get started is because they're true. When intelligent and capable people come out of here and do something remarkable, others see that they graduated from Cal Poly and the word spreads: Cal Poly is good. And in closing, Mr. Kunz, you are entitled to your opinions and I shouldn't judge you by them, nor should anyone. I'm sorry, but we just don't want to hear them.

At this point, we haven’t discovered a legal way to recognize and build a diversity in the student body through the admissions system.

—Philip Bailey, Jr.
Dean of the College of Science and Mathematics

The success of higher education and the strength of our ongoing, yet unfinished, democracy require that we join with public schools, state and federal governments, and the private sector in efforts to eliminate the unequal educational opportunities that can shackle many minority groups from one generation to the next,” Zingg said.

But, some people believe that reinstating affirmative action is the way to increase this diversity.

"Whatever has been done in the past 12 months has failed," said William Little, dean of the modern languages department. "The only thing to do is repeal Prop 209.

"I believe when affirmative action is in place, no one gets hurt in any group or ethnic group in society," Little continued. “Affirmative action is win-win. No affirmative action is lose-lose.”

Giants to raise championship flag today

SAN FRANCISCO — Before their home opener today against the Houston Astros, the San Francisco Giants will raise their 1997 NL West championship flag and Dusty Baker will be honored as NL manager of the year.

Woods returns to Augusta as champion

By Ben Skok
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods returned to Augusta National Golf Club the way he left it a year ago — in a class by himself.

For the first three years that Woods came to the Masters, the always-thinking Butch Harmon made certain his star pupil played practice rounds with former champions.

On Monday, Woods returned to Augusta as one of those former champions and fittingly played his practice round alone. It was symbolic of the way Woods finished last year at the Masters — 12 strokes ahead of his nearest competitor.

Woods’ victory was a tribute to his ability, but it was also a tribute to Harmon’s brilliant game plan. Local knowledge at Augusta is so important, Harmon wanted to make certain Woods had every opportunity to soak up information like a sponge.

"There is a route around Augusta," three-time winner Nick Faldo said. "You just have to find it and follow it."

In search of that route, Woods played practice rounds with Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Ben Crenshaw, Seve Ballesteros, Jose Maria Olazabal and other Masters champions.

"That was my main purpose in those practice rounds — to have him play with people who know how the greens break, know where the pins will be on Sunday, know what spots you have to hit on the green to have the ball funnel to the hole," Harmon said.

Harmon was the perfect schoolmaster, setting up the curriculum cleverly and selecting the best teachers who shared their insight willingly. And in Woods, he had a pupil whose learning curve is as impressive as his tee shots.

"One of the great things about Tiger is how open he is to information," Harmon said. "He knows that as good as he is, he can’t do it on talent alone. He listens and he soaks up information like a sponge."

One more makes 300 for Boyer

By Kimberly Konyei
Daily Sports Editor

One plus 299 equals 300. That one is all Cal Poly head softball coach Lisa Boyer needs to post 300 wins in her career.

But that one game has been hard to get. Cal Poly has been washed out of their last four doubleheaders.

Boyer, who is in her 10th year at Cal Poly, currently stands at 299-176-2 all-time in her career.

Boyer is looking for a sunny day and for her Mustangs to give her the win she needs over the Sacramento State Hornets today at 1:00 p.m. on the Cal Poly softball field.

Last season, Cal Poly swept away two of four games from the Hornets.

This will be Cal Poly's first Big West Conference game since March 22 when they fell 2-1 at home to Long Beach State.
The Cal Poly track and field team dominates its meets. Both the men and women are setting records in many events.

Daily Self Report

The Cal Poly track and field team keeps setting new standards and reaching just a few extra feet above the competition.

Led by a pack of pole vaulters, the Mustangs are clearing heights that leave the competition on the ground.

Both the men and women captured first place at the 70th annual Bob Mathias Fresno Relays on April 3.

The men faced San Francisco State, Cal State Los Angeles, Cal State Bakersfield, Humboldt State and Cal State Stanislaus.

In the end, Cal Poly beat out San Francisco State by 4.5 points to take first overall with 183 points.

The women faced University of Nevada at Reno, Cal State Los Angeles, Cal State Bakersfield, Humboldt State and Cal State Stanislaus.

Cal Poly women finished two points ahead of Nevada to barely grab first place overall.

The Mustangs got all the points they needed to edge into first place from their pole vaulters.

The Cal Poly men took first through fourth place, while the women took first, second, fourth and fifth.

Laura Nichols cleared 16-8 3/4 taking first. On his second try, Kris Mack cleared 15-1. To take second place. Then both Joel Kriwinski and Joe Konig cleared 15-1 in their third try to tie for third place.

On the women's side, Paula Serrano set a new school record clearing 12-4 3/4. This vault also gives Serrano a provisional qualifying mark for the NCAA Championship.

Bianca Maran placed second clearing 12 feet. Shannon Pearson took fourth at 10-6 and Shannon Fleet cleared 10-4 to finish fifth.

On the track, the Cal Poly women were edging out the competition also. The women took first in the 400-meter relay at 47.12 and first in the 1600-meter relay at 3:56.49.

Senior Tamatha Jackson blew past the others finishing first in the 100-meter dash, forty seconds ahead of the second place finisher.

Jackson also took first in the 200-meter sprint at 24.73.

Chad Stewart finished first in the 400-meter race at 57.08 and teammate Jill Santucci came in second at 57.99.

Shannon Pearson placed first in the 100-meter hurdle and Stewart picked up another first place finish in the 400-meter hurdle.

For the men, Matt Hubbard and Mitch Naber finished one-two in the high jump.

Darren Holman and Sean Phillips finished one-two in the 1500 meter race.

The men also finished first in the 400-meter relay at 40.6.

The Mustangs will travel next weekend to Berkeley for the Golden Bear Invitational.
