ASI Board questions financial aid fees

By Calvin Liu
Daily Staff Writer

The ASI Board of Directors have drafted a resolution opposing a CSU Board of Trustees requirement that one-third of all mandatory fees be set aside for financial aid.

In May 1996, the Board of Trustees approved Executive Order 661, requiring universities to funnel 33 percent of any new, mandatory campus-based fee increase to financial aid. This means, for example, that an $18 UU fee increase, only $12 would be used for the UU. The would go toward financial aid.

Only those fees considered mandatory are affected by the set-aside. These include health service fees, the UU fee and miscellaneous course fees.

"Executive Order 661 was a response to the budget crunch in the early 1990s," said Juan Gonzalez, vice president for student affairs.

Furnishing the money into financial aid was meant to offset the burden mandatory fees place on students who struggle to afford college.

However, the set-aside required by Executive Order 661 has caused reluctance on the part of students to approve fee increases. At CSU Fullerton, for example, students rejected a fee increase to subsidize a new recreation center.

A resolution similar to ASI's has already been passed at CSU Fullerton, according to Lisa Bamicoat, ASI director of legislation.

Musical evening helps students through the early 1990s," said Juan Gonzalez, vice president for student affairs.

Funneling the money into financial aid was meant to offset the burden mandatory fees place on students who struggle to afford college.

How the set-aside required by Executive Order 661 has caused reluctance on the part of students to approve fee increases. At CSU Fullerton, for example, students rejected a fee increase to subsidize a new recreation center.

A resolution similar to ASI's has already been passed at CSU Fullerton, according to Lisa Bamicoat, ASI director of legislation.

Cal Poly Takes Back the Night

By Christine LaDower
Daily Staff Writer

Informational booths, live music, a speech on stalking and many emotionally-charged testimonies were main aspects of Wednesday night's Take Back the Night event held in the Auditorium.

"I started speaking for my colleagues at first, just to get them educated on the topic," Spencer-Diehl said. "Now, I have gotten the chance to speak all over the country and let people know that stalking runs deeper than just excessive phone calls."

Spencer-Diehl's speech was entitled "I never felt more helpless and powerless about an issue like stalking I look in the newspaper every morning and worry that one of my students is dead as a result of stalking."

Spencer-Diehl said she has been speaking on this topic for the past nine months and really had no idea her speeches would take her nationwide. See ART page 5

Nude photo exhibit inspires class forum

By Shoshana Hechbi
Daily News Editor

Two weeks after launching their controversial "A Photo Exhibit of Women Through the Eyes of Two Photographers," the photographers held an images and fielded questions during an art class.

The exhibit, which brought together two views of the female form, and still lingered in controv-

Art and design professor Jean Wetzel invited both photographers, Keith Selles and Renate Randall, to lead a forum in her Art 316 class "Women As Subject and Object in Art History."

"It is perfect confluence of a topic we were going to talk about today anyway," Wetzel said. "All the readings we were going to do today were about the modernist period in art and representations of women by male artists and by female artists. I couldn't ask them to set up an exhibition that worked out better for our class."

Approximately 40 students, art majors and non, listened and questioned Randall and Selles, both photography juniors. Many expressed feelings of exploitation, distaste and offense, others were curious about the photographers' intentions and their individual idea of art. Most of the outrage and confusion centered around Selles' images.

Wetzel said in all her years at Cal Poly she has never seen any reaction like this to an exhibit, although she considers the subject
Agribusiness students win first place

Five Cal Poly students used Bugs Bunny, the "wascally wabbit," in a marketing plan that earned top honors in the National Agri-Marketing Association's student competition held in Dallas.

Meghan Judge, Filmare Kids member, Kristina Kovakovitch, Brannan Lucas and Bret Venable were the big winners.

Cal Poly's team was one of just a few to use an actual client, Salinas-based producer Taniuma and Antic. The students suggested the company buy the rights to use Bugs Bunny on packages of baby carrots and ranch-dip dressing designed to fit into kids' lunch boxes.

The product with Bugs on it went on sale nationwide in January and sales rates have been strong in all areas.

Faculty surveys about El Corral due today

To help improve its operation, El Corral Bookstore wants to know the perceptions that Cal Poly's faculty have about the bookstore. From textbook availability and pricing to book selection, academic software, store hours and special events, faculty opinions of the store play an important role in its operation.

That's why El Corral sent out a survey of faculty members. It's due back today.

"The bookstore is providing to our customers with quality service in support of the academic mission of Cal Poly," said Frank Casley, director of the store.

AVID kids on campus to read essays, check out Cal Poly

Students write to specific prompts and then score each other's work. Students will be reading their essays to the group.

AVID students will be reading their essays to the group.

That's why El Corral sent out a survey of faculty members. It's due back today.

"The bookstore is providing to our customers with quality service in support of the academic mission of Cal Poly," said Frank Casley, director of the store.

Cash offered for best library posters

Calling all artists' Kennedy Library has announced its 1998-99 Annual Library Poster Competition. Cash prizes will be offered for the top two posters, and this year's theme is "Where to go when you need to know.

The disk with a color printout of the original design should be delivered to Library Poster Competition, Kennedy Library Circulation Desk. Include your name, address, e-mail addresses, and phone number. The prizes are: $250 for first place, $50 for the runner up and a free library T-shirt for the People's Choice award.

For more information, call 756-2245 or check out the contest guidelines at lib.calpoly.edu/contest.

Greek Week boasts myriad of events

By Jon Rogen
Daily Sun Writer

Let the games begin for the annual Cal Poly Greek Week, a campus version of the Olympic Games put on by the fraternities and sororities.

"It's like the Olympics and a big party all in one," said business sophomore Santos Mommum, Phi Kappa Theta member.

One new event this year will be a lip sync competition at the SLO Vets Hall tonight at 8, entered by Madison's Bar and Grill. It's the first lip sync at a Greek Week party.

Other events today are the horse show at Santa Rosa Park from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. and the sorority volleyball game in Mott Gym at 3 p.m.

Philip Morris, physical education senior and co-chair of the Greek Week board, said anyone is invited to come and watch the events.

Thursday was Greek Awareness Day, created by Morris as a tribute to Greek Week participants.

"I found if you make a sign and sound official, people start to believe you," said Morris, a Phi Theta Delta member.

Greek Week is a tradition at Cal Poly and at campuses across the country.

"It's a time for all Greeks to come together and participate in events," Morris said.

This year's Greek Week was Morris' branchchild as well as his senior project.

Morris, also the president of the Inter-Fraternal Council (IFC), has done most of the planning, organizing and legwork for the events.

Wreaths were held Thursday in the men's locker room in Mott Gym for all fraternity members who participated in the tug-of-war or the arm-wrestling competitions, just two of 14 competitions during the week.

Journalism sophomore Matt Reagan, Delta Upsilon member, weighed in at 167 pounds Thursday and will compete in the tug-of-war.

He said he's been training one to two times per week.

"Other houses don't have the intensity we do," Reagan said.

Agriculture senior Dave Kelly, also a public relations member of the Greek Week committee, was at Mott Gym Thursday for the weigh-in.

Kelly, also of Delta Upsilon, said his house has been preparing for the competitions by holding miniature tournaments on brotherhood nights.

Mommum, who weighed in at 190 pounds, said he's only practiced once for the arm-wrestling event.

"We don't need to practice — we're ready. I'm just gonna go out there and arm wrestle," Mommum said.

Greek members will also face off in a chess tournament, tug-boat, trap shoot, bowling, dodge ball, basketball, soccer, swimming and a pizza feed.

Morris said this is the first year there has been a Greek Week committee, so more preparation went into the event.

"We fraternities and sororities know how to party responsibly if we just take the time to organize," Morris said.

This is the first year there will be team Greek Week, in which teams of four houses — two fraternities and two sororities — compete against each other.

Each house will earn points individually, but those points will also contribute to the team total.

"That will get the different houses to root for each other and support each other," Morris said.

In the past, each house competed separately against each other and didn't really know the other houses," Morris said, adding that the new team format brings unity to the games, which could spill over to the Greek system in general.

"Separate parts are as strong as a whole, and we could be better in more effective programming on campus functions if the work we fought together," he said.

Morris said his favorite event is swimming, which will be May 15 at 3:30 p.m. at Mott Pool. The event will be DJ'ed by S6 FM, who will also announce the awards at the ceremony following.

The tug boat will be May 9 at 4 p.m. at the OH hill at 2 p.m.

The soccer game will be May 11 in Mustang Stadium at 4:30 p.m.

Basketball play will be May 12 at 4:30 p.m. in Mott gym, and the trap shoot will be at the range at 7:30 p.m.

"On May 13, there will be a pizza feed at Backstage Pizza at 5 p.m.," sorority bowling will be at the same time at McPhees, and the soccer finals will be at 6:30 p.m. in Mustang stadium.

"Arm wrestling will be May 14 in the UU at 11 a.m., and dodge ball will be behind Mott gym at 2:30 p.m.

Morris said. "But what's the reality of that? You have to (raise alternate sources) will jump on the bandwagon."

"The resolution does encourage the university to seek alternative sources of funding for the set-aside," Gonzales said. "It's a discussion item for next week's ASI executive board." Gonzales said. "What's the reality of that? You have to raise (the money) or we have other means of identifying where the other money would come from."

"Technically, we wouldn't have to raise the (money) if we have other means of identifying where the other money would come from."

Greek members will also face off in a chess tournament, tug-boat, trap shoot, bowling, dodge ball, basketball, soccer, swimming and a pizza feed. times you have to take from the rich and give to the poor...I strongly urge (the board) to think about who this resolution will be affecting.

The resolution does encourage the university to seek alternative sources of funding for the set-aside.
Assembly, sheriff candidates meet students

By Kelly Victoria Towner
Daily Jiff Note

Sharp suite helped State Assembly candidate Rick Bravo and sheriff candidate Pat Hedges meet students because they make up a large percentage of the population.

The two candidates answered students' questions at the Cal Poly College of Republicans table. The club has endorsed both candidates.

Rick Bravo is a San Luis Obispo pediatrician and is one of the Republican candidates in the race for the 33rd Assembly seat. Steve MacElvaine are the three other Republican candidates in the race for the 33rd Assembly District office.

As former chairman of the county Republican Central Committee, Bravo helped to start the College Republican Club in January 1997.

"Cal Poly students are an important part of our community," Bravo said. "I am not a climbing, municipal politician or a lover of government. Basically I believe the twin enemies of freedom are big government and high taxes. I am a strong believer in individual freedom.

Bravo's basic philosophy is that government is too big, taxes are too high and criminals must be punished.

"You won't have to wonder about my position on every issue if you understand my basic core philosophy," Bravo said.

Fat Tuesday is a 20-year com­ mander with the San Luis Obispo police department who's now run­ ning for the position as county sheriff. Other candidates for the office of sheriff are San Luis Obispo Police Chief Jim Gardiner and Tom Garrity, a sergeant at Atascadero State Hospital.

"This is a good forum to speak to the students," Hedges said. "I want to get feedback and, as sheriff, it is important to reach these students because they make up a large percentage of the population."

Hedges came to Cal Poly to make students aware he is a can­ didate.

"I know the department and I know the county," Hedges said. "I am familiar with the issues and am the only candidate that is with the sheriff's department. I like to go with the idea that I will be the real sheriff as sheriff."

The Cal Poly Republicans often bring candidates to speak to stu­ dents at club meeting and UU hour.

"We have established ourselves in the community and provide a forum where candidates can come out and speak to students," said Craig Prestininzi, the club's presi­ dent. "We have a good time and inform the students."

Rick Bravo will be at next Thursday's UU hour again.

The U.S. envoy rushed to Mideast

WASHINGTON — With the peace process stalled for more than a year, the United States created a sense of urgency by demanding Israel agree to a 13 percent pullback of the West Bank as the price for attending peace talks in Washington beginning Monday.

The U.S. plan would require Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to reverse himself and give up more territory than he has been saying is safe to return to the Palestinians.

As Ross headed for Israel, State Department spokesman James Foley said, "Time is urgent. We regard this as a strategic opportunity not to be missed because the clock is ticking."

The White House said the U.S. terms, announced Tuesday by Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, would not be relaxed. "Secretary Albright has made clear, and we would reiterate, that we are not going to water down our ideas," McCurry said.

Administration officials, how­ ever, said Ross would explore with Netanyahu how Israel could meet the U.S. target, suggesting there was flexibility in how to achieve the goal. Foley said Ross would discuss possible "refinements" to break the deadlock and permit the Monday talks to take place.

Amid fresh Republican criti­ cism, Clinton said he was trying "simply to regain the momentum that has been lost in the past few months by imposing our ideas on anyone."

"What we’re searching for is some kind of a breakthrough," Prime Minister Netanyahu asked us to pursue a year ago: the start of serious and permanent negotiations.

Congress debates how much alcohol is too much to drink

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The sun was shining, beers were selling for $1 and Tequila Grill was having a "Cinco de Mayo" party as Dave Carlisle met his friends for an after-work drink.

Before taking his first sip, Carlisle let loose against efforts to enact tougher drunken driving standards nationwide.

"I appreciate responsible drink­ ing, but I think it’s going a little overboard," Carlisle, 36, said as he unbuttoned his double-breasted blazer. "I don’t think the social drinker should be stigmatized because somebody’s mother got killed by a drunk driver."

Sixteen states already have tightened their standards for drunken driving from a blood alco­ hol concentration level of 0.10 per­ cent to 0.08 percent. Now Congress is debating whether to push states nationwide to make the change, one of the most divisive issues as House and Senate negotiators try to com­ plete work on a $220 billion highway bill.

The 130 states cite numbers from the same set of government statis­ tics.

Critics point out that a 120- pound woman having two glasses of wine over two hours could be branded a drunken driver. Supporters say a 170-pound man wouldn’t reach the limit unless he downed four beers in an hour.

"Four drinks in one hour on an empty stomach for a 170-pound male is not social drinking," said Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y. "I’m not passing judgment on whether peo­ ple should drink or not. That’s their business. But it’s society’s business if they get behind the wheel of a car."

The fate of the drunken-driving proposal lies in a joint committee ironing out differences between the House and Senate versions, along with Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Among the opponents are the American Beverage Institute, a trade association for restaurants.

Supporters say making the change could save as many as 600 lives per year. As for penalizing social drinking, they note that France — a nation renowned for its cafe life and fine wines — has a blood-alcohol standard of 0.66.

Opponents of the change com­ plain that social drinkers could be transformed into felons in some states, paying higher insurance pre­
Chattering Box

A feminist is born

Wednesday night I had my first feminist experience. I attended Take Back the Night, the event put on by the Women's Center designed to expose everyone to the hidden problem of violence in the community.

Before you get scared, let me promise you it was not a night of anything other than joyous, fashionable lesbians telling the audience how they blame feminism for the end of their world. Instead, it was an empowering night, involving both men and women. It taught me a lot about myself and our society.

First, I learned that a rape occurs every twelve seconds in the United States. That equals 2,200 rapes per day. Also, women who are killed are killed as a result of an abusive relationship each day.

The keynote speaker, Emily Spence-Dech, was an expert on statistics. She informed us that only 70 percent of stalkers are male. It is one of the few crimes in which women make up a significant percent of offenders, mostly because it does not always involve force.

These are cold, difficult statistics to deal with, and it is easy to believe none of this goes on at Cal Poly. But at the crime reports and you will see that almost no rapes or stalkers are reported on campus. But do not let this fool you.

The women and men who spoke last night almost made me cry. They told stories of violence against them, or that they dealt with issues that many women's organizations were making sex. It taught me a lot about our society and the community when it comes to safety. It is about the fact that it pisses us off that we have to be afraid to walk alone at night. We can do more than just help victims, we can try to prevent new assaults from occurring.

I applaud all the men that attended Wednesday night's event. It is people like who are helping to fight violence by realizing that it can happen to everybody and that anybody is capable of it. Not only do women and men need to learn to protect themselves, they need to educate themselves and others to prevent violent acts in our community.

Christina Jamison is a journal-ism junior.

OPINION

By Erin Martin

In the aftermath of Take Back the Night (TBTN happened Wednesday night, maybe you've heard of it), I am sick to my stomach about what I saw and heard. Because of the beautiful state of mind that our mil­lions of campuses are in, these hundred people came to Chumash and showed their sup­port for the termination of violence against women and girls, where were you? Do you have any of the victims, sisters, friends, family, at your side, or other relatives or friends (male or female) that you care deeply about? Do you value their safety? Do you value your own?

President Baker, there was a seat reserved for you which remained empty for the 8th year in a row (this is the 8th year of Take Back the Night at Cal Poly). Your per­sence has not been expressed by your absence. But did you hear us as we marched up to your house? "It happens at Cal Poly too! Warren Baker, shame on you!" we chanted. Funny, I saw a little speed of your driveway as we stood on your lawn.

Chief Mitchell, I'm sure you too were there last night but didn't step forward to tell us how adequate the lighting or campus is now that we have Pepsi machines to illu­minate our path and ensure our safety.

Statistically, we have the safest campuses in California. Statistically, the propaganda is sent to our parents and that which is sent to those of prospective students is...well...propaganda. How do I know this? Because last night, several people, who I didn't even knew, shattered my naive beliefs about where the rest of all the women, men, and people who I didn't even know, shattered my naive beliefs about the way, chanted to dormies who couldn't make it to the Take Back the Night presentation. About 25 of us, yielding candles that illuminated our path...to the future.

One in four women will be sexually assaulted during her college career. One in 11 men are rapists. No, I don't blame men. I'm not trying to bash them. I'm simply trying to tear as courageous victims (both male and female), told stories of violence against them, right here in California. These are your peers. Have any of you noticed the red handprints that have evidence to violent and assault that happens at Cal Poly? They are now considered graffiti by the administration, so you probably won't hear me mention it anymore. There will be new perspectives and new students that need to know that violence does in fact occur here.

By Alberto Garcia

California's soup is still too cold

One might be tempted to think that since almost all are created equal, they are also treat­ed equal. Mr. Lawson has certainly fallen vic­tim to this fallacy. I do agree with his latest letter entitled, "Hey, I'm not a redneck," in that nobody has the right to call him a redneck. In fact, derogatory words such as redneck, southerner and wasterback should have no place in the well-educated society that we as college stu­dents represent.

However, I disagree with Mr. Lawson in his way of trying to depict California as a racism-free state and would like to acquaint him with the reality of the state which I personally am far more familiar with.

One does not need to travel the world to realize that California is far from being per­fect. In fact, one doesn't need to even travel through San Luis Obispo to find that. Have you, for instance, tried to ask a checker out at San Luis Obispo? I don't want to automatically brand all of San Luis Obispo as a racist town, but I want to list a few anedotes that might make you think twice.

Spring '94 — Three of my friends (two Mexican, one Japanese) and I went to see a new movie at Fremont Theater. It was an excellent show and we were still talking about it as we came out and walked toward the bank's parking lot. On Montoya and Santa Rosa streets. While we waited for the light to turn green, a nice red car drove by, making a right turn at the corner where we stood. A beautiful girl with long, blonde hair stuck her head out of the passenger's window at the same time as she flipped her middle finger out at us and yelled, "Hey-Eighty-Six-Rounders!"

Winter '96 — I was on my way to my friend's house on Highland Street. It was a Saturday night and an anonymous person was taking place. As I walked up the hill, a patrol car drove by, and I noticed that the two white officer­s turned their heads then. Before I could say "Hey, I'm just trying to say that," someone said, "Hey, not even in San Luis Obispo!"

"Even if California is seen by many as a wonderful and safe, petting oil, do we understand that we need to turn up the heat in the oven, because the pot sure isn't melting."

By Erin Martin

"SHUT UP OR I'LL RAP YOU!!"

Saturday Night, I looked out over the ever­changing face of this town. I was moved to tears by how beautiful it was. I was moved by how many a wonderful person I saw. From the young to the old, I saw people who I didn't even know, shattered my naive beliefs about the way the world is.

"If you don't shut up, I'll rape you!!" yelled one sweet boy.

"I don't care!" yelled one young woman from across the street. "I want to see the truth. I want to see the real California, who I didn't even know, shattered my naive beliefs about the way the world is.

E-mail: lora@polymail.calpoly.edu

Pacific Daily News

Graphic Arts Bldg., Suite 226
Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, Ca. 93407

Editorial: (805) 756-1796
Advertising: (805) 756-1145
Fax: (805) 576-6784

E-mail: poras@polymail.calpoly.edu

Editor in Chief: Julie Lavecchia

Managing Editor: B.J. Krause

Sports Editor: Milea Adams

Features Editor: Lisa Conlin

Art Director: Kim F, Stiles

Production Manager: John Martin

Ad Director: Ken Adams

Printed by University Graphic Systems

Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, Ca. 93407

VOL. 44 NO. 21 3/19/98

4"en just laugh.

There is always the possibility I might have been influenced by these incidents. Maybe it's all in my head, right? But after seeing her and by actually reading her words that bear fAridenoe to violence and peers. Have any of you noticed the red handprints that have evidence to violent and assault that happens at Cal Poly? They are now considered graffiti by the administration, so you probably won't hear me mention it anymore. Why? Because last night, several people, who I didn't even knew, shattered my naive beliefs about the way, chanted to dormies who couldn't make it to the Take Back the Night presentation. About 25 of us, yielding candles that illuminated our path...to the future.

One in four women will be sexually assaulted during her college career. One in 11 men are rapists. No, I don't blame men. I'm not trying to bash them. I'm simply trying to tell as courageous victims (both male and female), told stories of violence against them, right here in California. These are your peers. Have any of you noticed the red handprints that have evidence to violent and assault that happens at Cal Poly? They are now considered graffiti by the administration, so you probably won't hear me mention it anymore. Why? Because last night, several people, who I didn't even knew, shattered my naive beliefs about the way, chanted to dormies who couldn't make it to the Take Back the Night presentation. About 25 of us, yielding candles that illuminated our path...to the future.

One in four women will be sexually assaulted during her college career. One in 11 men are rapists. No, I don't blame men. I'm not trying to bash them. I'm simply trying to tell as courageous victims (both male and female), told stories of violence against them, right here in California. These are your peers. Have any of you noticed the red handprints that have evidence to violent and assault that happens at Cal Poly? They are now considered graffiti by the administration, so you probably won't hear me mention it anymore. Why? Because last night, several people, who I didn't even knew, shattered my naive beliefs about the way, chanted to dormies who couldn't make it to the Take Back the Night presentation. About 25 of us, yielding candles that illuminated our path...to the future.

One in four women will be sexually assaulted during her college career. One in 11 men are rapists. No, I don't blame men. I'm not trying to bash them. I'm simply trying to tell as courageous victims (both male and female), told stories of violence against them, right here in California. These are your peers. Have any of you noticed the red handprints that have evidence to violent and assault that happens at Cal Poly? They are now considered graffiti by the administration, so you probably won't hear me mention it anymore. Why? Because last night, several people, who I didn't even knew, shattered my naive beliefs about the way, chanted to dormies who couldn't make it to the Take Back the Night presentation. About 25 of us, yielding candles that illuminated our path...to the future.
I didn’t realize how sensitive these issues are," said she. "It’s a personal issue for me personally. I’m not very conservative. I’m not offended by anything Keith has done.

Selles said the reason he shoots these types of photographs is because women pay him to do it for them. He considers himself a commercial photographer rather than an artist.

"It’s all about what I’m passionate about, photography, taking pictures," he said. "This is what I’m good at.

"I try to do it as professionally as I can," he continued. "I’m not out there in the real world yet. I’m learning what’s acceptable and what’s not."

Another discussion topic was that the differences between the two photographers’ work.

"Selles’ women are always looking at the camera and I think that makes you uncomfortable as opposed to Renate’s. Keith’s are more real," one student observed.

"The looking in the camera I think is more personally—I’m referring to the person," Randall responded.

Another student chimed in: "These people (in Selles’ photos) were looking seductive, alluring, not powerful."

"I don’t know what you mean by ‘adequate nude photos and the woman’s body,’ another student said. "It’s because when women feel their beautiful form is being captured beauty.”

Selles requested that students examine each photo individually.

However, the exhibit was taken down Thursday night, leaving participants with no chance to review the photos after the discussion.

"When I first saw it and saw the first few photographs, I thought, ‘Oh no, not in the gallery.’" Randall said. "Then I took a step back and saw it a second time, and rather than reacting on ‘get the level to the subject matter’ I looked at the photographs a little bit more closely and the quality of the photographs was really quite high. They both know what they are doing.

"Seeing images in the book is not like seeing the actual things and being face-to-face with them. She continued and ‘I think this has forced people to confront their feelings about portrayal of the woman’s anatomy, about image and identity and how men construct that and how women construct that.”

Join the 1999 Mustang Daily

If you are a talented and enthusiastic writer, editor, illustrator, photographer or graphic designer, we want to hear from you.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE

- News Editor
- Sports Editor
- Opinion Editor
- Arts Editor
- Feature Editor
- Copy Editors
- Art Director
- Photographers
- Illustrators

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

Please send a cover letter, résumé, samples of your work and a brief proposal for the position to:

Ryan Becker
Graphic Arts Building, Room 226
Deadline: Friday, May 15, 1998
Vietnam vet to be exhumed from Tomb of Unknowns for identification

By Suzanne M. Schiefer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fourteen years after President Reagan presided over the burial of a Vietnam veteran in the Tomb of the Unknowns, the remains will be exhumed to see if they can be identified after all.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the exhumation is a result of a “very strong commitment that this president and this administration have to the fullest possible accounting,” said Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon.

“If we can identify the remains now we have an obligation to try,” Bacon said. “The families, he said, “deserve nothing less.”

Blassie’s family requested the remains be exhumed for possible identification in the hope modern and sophisticated forensics techniques can help.

“I can’t say we’re surprised, but we’re certainly pleased,” Pat Blassie, the pilot’s sister, said Thursday. “We’ve been told that in a best-case scenario, we will have word in one month. And the worst-case scenario is that it will take 10 to 12 weeks.”

The decision announced Thursday, “I think they can be identified after all. There are a row, directly in front of a sarcophagus containing remains of a World War I unknown. And accepted the interment flag at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery is dedicated to the nation’s unidenti­fied war dead. It is watched over 24 hours a day by a military honor guard. ‘The Vietnam remains are buried in a separate crypt between two other crypts containing World War II and Korean War unknowns.

‘Illegal Immigrant State’ billboard is message of hate, critics say

Associated Press

BLYTHE — Critics say a new highway billboard declaring California “the illegal immigrant state” carries a message of hate, but the group behind it said Thursday it’s only meant as a warning.

“We’re primarily putting the finger on those who truly belong, and that is on our elected representatives,” said Barbara Coe, president of the California Coalition for Immigration Reform, an Orange County-based group that co-sponsored Proposition 187.

“They have betrayed the American people by refusing to enforce our immigration laws and secure our borders and protect Americans,” Coe said.

The billboard went up this week along Interstate 10 near the California-Arizona state line. It reads: “Welcome to California. The illegal immigrant state. Don’t let this happen to your state.”

The sign also has a phone number for interested people to call.

“It is one of our tools of a ‘Wake Up America’ program — a warning to other states,” Coe said. “The coalition wants an end to illegal immigration and curbs on legal immigration, claiming immi­grants are taking jobs from Americans and draining the nation’s resources.

The sign is already reviving some of the rancor that accompanied Proposition 187, the 1994 state ballot measure that was approved by California voters but was declared unconstitutional by federal courts.

The measure sought to ban illegal immigrants from public education and most government social services.

The green official-looking billboard greets travelers shortly after they cross the state line. About 50 miles north of Mexico’s Tijuana border. “The billboard shows deep-rooted hate and anti-immigrant feelings aimed at Latins,” said Roberto Martinez, executive director of the San Diego office of the American Friends Service Committee, which supports immigrant rights.

Attorney Sylvia Argueta of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund was outraged by the billboard. “All it’s going to do is create more divisiveness in our state,” Argueta said.
NEW YORK — Marcelo Balbo and Tab Ramos of the United States were among 11 players picked Thursday for the World Cup team of the century by the former captains and coaches of the 40 teams that participated in the voting, sponsored by MasterCard. Included were 130 from Europe, 105 from South America, who voted on only their region, and select panels for the other confederation teams.

An international panel of writers will choose the world team of the century, which will be announced in Paris on July 9, three days before the World Cup final.

The teams:

North and Central America and Caribbean — Antonio Carbajal (Mexico); Marcelo Moreno (Costa Rica); Gilberto Yearwood (Honduras); Raul Wilser (Canada); Gustavo Pena (Mexico); Ramon Ramirez (Mexico); Jorge Gonzalez (El Salvador); Tab Ramos (Uruguay, N.J.); Julio Cesar Dely Valdes (Panama); Hugo Sanchez (Mexico).

Europe — Lev Yanin (Soviet Union); Franz Beckenbauer (Germany); Bobby Moore (England); Paolo Maldini (Italy); Frank Rijkaard (Netherlands); Michel Platini (France); Bobby Charlton (England); Eusebio (Portugal); Ferenc Puskas (Hungary); Marco Van Basten (Netherlands); South America — Ulculo Fillol (Argentina); Daniel Passarella (Argentina); Nilson Santuro (Brazil); Elias Figueroa (Chile); Carlos Alberto (Brazil); Alfredo di Stefano (Argentina); Rivelino (Brazil); Didi (Brazil); Pele (Brazil); Diego Maradona (Argentina); Garrincha (Brazil).

Africa — Thomas N’Kono (Cameroon); Ali Shehata (Egypt); Ibrahim Youssouf (Egypt); Emmanuel Kunde (Cameroon); Ilunga Mwepa (Zaire); Segun Odegbami (Nigeria); Theophile Akeu (Cameroon); Alberico Piazza (Italy); Laurent Puskar (Ivory Coast); Bageri (Iran); Kim Joo Sang (South Korea); Masami Ihara (Japan); Suh Chi Aum (Malaysia); Cheo Chi Dai (Taiwan); Karim Bagheri (Iran); Kim Joo Sang (South Korea); Maged Abdullah (Arabia); Konomi Kamamoto (Japan); Khodadad Azizi (Iran); Cha Bum Kun (South Korea).

Asia — Clive Schofield (Australia); Matsubara (Japan); Abdullah Al-Razu (Kuwait); Shinji Ono (Japan); Hidetoshi Nakata (Japan); Park Ji-Sung (South Korea); Fredy Montero (Colombia); Carlos Alberto (Brazil); Alfredo Di Stefano (Argentina); Ronaldinho (Croatia); Hong Myong Jo (North Korea); Atsuo Owada (Japan); Viktor Vagner (Tajikistan); Yoshikatsu Kawaguchi (Japan).

Oceania — Sam Kekovich (Australia); Personen Jr. (Australia); Billy McLean (Australia); John Hartson (Australia); Martin Keown (Australia).

The teams:

North and Central America and Caribbean — Antonio Carbajal (Mexico); Marcelo Moreno (Costa Rica); Gilberto Yearwood (Honduras); Raul Wilser (Canada); Gustavo Pena (Mexico); Ramon Ramirez (Mexico); Jorge Gonzalez (El Salvador); Tab Ramos (Uruguay, N.J.); Julio Cesar Dely Valdes (Panama); Hugo Sanchez (Mexico).

Europe — Lev Yanin (Soviet Union); Franz Beckenbauer (Germany); Bobby Moore (England); Paolo Maldini (Italy); Frank Rijkaard (Netherlands); Michel Platini (France); Bobby Charlton (England); Eusebio (Portugal); Ferenc Puskas (Hungary); Marco Van Basten (Netherlands); South America — Ulculo Fillol (Argentina); Daniel Passarella (Argentina); Nilson Santuro (Brazil); Elias Figueroa (Chile); Carlos Alberto (Brazil); Alfredo di Stefano (Argentina); Rivelino (Brazil); Didi (Brazil); Pele (Brazil); Diego Maradona (Argentina); Garrincha (Brazil).

Africa — Thomas N’Kono (Cameroon); Ali Shehata (Egypt); Ibrahim Youssouf (Egypt); Emmanuel Kunde (Cameroon); Ilunga Mwepa (Zaire); Segun Odegbami (Nigeria); Theophile Akeu (Cameroon); Alberico Piazza (Italy); Laurent Puskar (Ivory Coast); Bageri (Iran); Kim Joo Sang (South Korea); Masami Ihara (Japan); Suh Chi Aum (Malaysia); Cheo Chi Dai (Taiwan); Karim Bagheri (Iran); Kim Joo Sang (South Korea); Maged Abdullah (Arabia); Konomi Kamamoto (Japan); Khodadad Azizi (Iran); Cha Bum Kun (South Korea).

Asia — Clive Schofield (Australia); Matsubara (Japan); Abdullah Al-Razu (Kuwait); Shinji Ono (Japan); Hidetoshi Nakata (Japan); Park Ji-Sung (South Korea); Fredy Montero (Colombia); Carlos Alberto (Brazil); Alfredo Di Stefano (Argentina); Ronaldinho (Croatia); Hong Myong Jo (North Korea); Atsuo Owada (Japan); Viktor Vagner (Tajikistan); Yoshikatsu Kawaguchi (Japan).

Oceania — Sam Kekovich (Australia); Personen Jr. (Australia); Billy McLean (Australia); John Hartson (Australia); Martin Keown (Australia).
SPORTS

Runners' play two must win games

The Central Coast Roadrunners host two games this weekend in Mustang Stadium. The Roadrunners hope to stay out of the reach of their opponents and remain undefeated.

Friday night, the Roadrunners, 2-0, face the Silicon Valley Ambassadors, 1-1, in another U.S. Open Cup qualifier at 8 p.m.

Last weekend the Roadrunners were able to pull out a 1-0 victory over the Ambassadors in Palo Alto.

"The Ambassadors are a very good team and they showed that they will be a tough team throughout the season," stated Larry Smyth, the Roadrunners' head coach, in a press release.

Jose Espindola shot the game winning goal in the 70th minute. A throw in from Danny Risch, Jacob Carter crossed the ball to the back post for Espindola to head it in.

Goalkeeper Alan Beilke grabbed three big saves, late in the match, to earn his first shutout of the season.

On Saturday night at 7:30 p.m., the Roadrunners will open their league schedule. The Roadrunners will take on the Southern California Chivas.

The Chivas are currently 1-1 on the season with a win and a loss against the Los Angeles Fireballs of the U.S.I.S.L D3 Pro League. Last season, the Roadrunners went 3-0 against the Chivas, outscoring them 10-0.

This year, the Chivas are currently leading the Southwest Division of the Premier League with 3 points.

Baseball hosts season finale at home

The Cal Poly baseball team is clinched onto one final hope. The Mustangs could still squeak into the 1996 Big West Conference tournament. But two things have to happen.

One, the Mustangs have to sweep their series with Long Beach State this weekend. And two, Cal State Fullerton must win all three games at U.C. Santa Barbara.

UCSB will enter the tournament instead of Cal Poly if the Mustangs lose once or the Gauchos win once.

Cal Poly enters the series against the 49ers with a 16-39 record overall and a 7-18 mark in conference play.

Earlier this season, the Mustangs dropped three games to Long Beach State, 7-1, 26-8, 6-5.

The Mustangs are on a losing skid. Cal Poly made it eight losses in a row last weekend when they dropped a series to Cal State Fullerton.

Junior Mike Zereili, 3-11, will remain up the series against Long Beach State on Friday night. Zereili allowed just four earned runs, struck out six batters and only walked two Titan batters last weekend.

Saturday's pitcher is undecided and Senior Jason Porto will open up Sunday's game.

The Roadrunners came from behind last weekend to win their home opener against the Chico Rooks of the U.S.I.S.L - D3 Pro League.

The Roadrunners evened the match as Devin Smyth played a ball from the left corner back to Jacob Carter who took a rocket shot from 25 yards out.

Espindola deflected Carter's shot into the back of the net for his second goal of the season.

The match was headed into overtime until defender Ricardo Ramirez played a 35 yard free kick over the Rooks' goalie with less than one minute remaining.

Both matches last weekend were U.S. Open Cup qualifying matches and earned the Roadrunners six points.

With a game winning goal each, Ramirez and Espindola were voted U.S.I.S.L. Players of the Week.

Risch, who assisted on the game winning goal last weekend, injured his thigh in a collision with the Chico Rooks goalie.

Jensen is also injured after the Chico Rooks game. He rolled his ankle late in the match aggravating an old problem.

Dana McGregor might still be out of commission this week. He is still recovering from knee problems. McGregor was also out of last week's matches due to an allergic reaction to a bee sting.

The last ticket for the World Cup total tickets were sold?

SCHEDULE

FRIDAY

• Baseball vs. Long Beach State at San Luis Obispo Stadium in Sisoineuer Park at 1 p.m.
• Track and Field selected athletes at Texas Invitational in Austin, Texas and other athletes at Stanford Qualifier Meet in Palo Alto.
• Central Coast Roadrunners vs. Silicon Valley Ambassadors in Mustang Stadium at 8 p.m.

SATURDAY

• Baseball vs. Long Beach State at San Luis Obispo Stadium in Sisoineuer Park at 1 p.m.
• Track and Field selected athletes at Modesto Relays in Modesto and other selected athletes at Occidental Invitational at Eagle Rock
• Central Coast Roadrunners vs. Southern California Chivas in Mustang Stadium at 7:30 p.m.

SUNDAY

• Baseball vs. Long Beach State at San Luis Obispo Stadium in Sisoineuer Park at 1 p.m.

BRIEFS

Dancing Delights

Last weekend, the Cal Poly Ballroom Dance Club Danseport team traveled south to compete in Los Angeles hosted its annual Emerald Ball, a professional Danseport competition.

Cal Poly Danseport Formation Team Members Karan Greer and Kym Pohl placed first in all three categories they entered.

The pair took first in full bronze closed rhumba, full bronze open rhumba, full bronze closed cha cha cha. The closed competitions were choreographed routines and, in the open competition only, standard syllabus steps are permitted.

Greer and Pohl have been dancing together for a year and a half. Both travel to intercollegiate Danseport Competitions all over the nation.

The Danseport Team started up this past January and performed and competed for the first time at the U.C. San Diego Ballroom Dance Competition on March 7.