Avoid Christmas crap
Hold off, Dancer, Prancer
Donner and Vixen …
Opinion, page 4

Through the uprights
Mustang football kicker gets to do what he does the best Sports, back page

Capture a costume
How to find the look to spook the spooks
Arts Weekly, page 5

Cal Poly’s connected to the candidates for City Council

By Kristin Dohse
Mustang Daily

There will be three candidates vying for two spots on the San Luis Obispo City Council in the Nov. election. San Luis Obispo residents John Ewan, Marc Brazil and Jan Marx are running similar platforms on city issues such as securing a water supply for the city and tightly controlling growth and development. All of the candidates support more Cal Poly-related issues and all say they have the students’ interests at heart.

In Ewan’s 28 years as a San Luis Obispo resident, he believes he has shown a strong commitment to public service. He sells heating systems at his Santa Barbara Street business, Pacific Energy Co. He is currently a city planning commissioner and the county business representative to the Minerals Management Services COOGER Steering Committee
(the California Offshore Oil and Gas Energy Research Study).
Ewan has also served as chairman
see COUNCIL, page 2

By Cristin Dohse
Mustang Daily

Settle faces competition for mayor in SLO resident

Incumbent Allen Settle is being challenged in his third run for mayor by retired PG&E engineer and San Luis Obispo resident Paul Dahm.
The two candidates are closely aligned on most city planning issues such as obtaining reliable water resources through the Lake Nacimiento Water Project, restricting large commercial development and annexing the airport area into San Luis Obispo.
Settle said he believes he is
see MAYOR, page 2

No sequel to Isla Vista Halloween
Policy aims to prevent repeat of 1,092 arrests in ‘92

By Jessica Niland
Mustang Daily

For many people, “Isla Vista” is synonymous with the word “party.” The University of California, Santa Barbara student community has a well-earned reputation as a mecca for drunkenness and debauchery, especially during Halloween. However, the community has been working to change their Halloween rep since 1993 and will continue to do so this year with a strict “No Tolerance” policy.
The policy stems from Halloween 1992, when there were 1,069 arrests and 11 major injuries, according to Lt. Butch Arnoldi of the Isla Vista Foot Patrol. A major injury is one which requires ambulance transportation to the hospital, Arnoldi said.
“In 1992, we had three people fall off the cliffs on Del Playa (a beach-front street in Isla Vista),” Arnoldi said. “One guy impaled himself on the steel reinforcement bars at the bottom of the cliff.”
UCSB Student Life officers are working especially hard
see HALLOWEEN, page 3

Iowa State negotiates for $100 million cola contract

AMES, Iowa (U-WIRE) — Talks of a single-beverage cola contract for Iowa State is currently being considered by the university.
A final decision will be made by late fall or early winter, said Warren Madden, vice president for Business and Finance.
A single-beverage contract is being explored by the University Purchasing Department and operators of the ISU facilities, in conjunction with administration and faculty.
Cola companies being considered for the single-beverage contract include Coca-Cola, Pepsi and Royal Crown. The single-beverage contract would last about five to 10 years, Madden said.
“So far, Coca-Cola has provided the best bid in the four-single contracts by offering services in maintaining and providing new vending machines, including some with
see COLA, page 3
COUNCIL
continued from page 1
for the Environmental Center of San Luis Obispo, and on the board of directors for both the San Luis Obispo Chamber of Commerce and ECOLOG.
Ewan, who graduated from Cal Poly in 1973 with a bachelor's degree in political science, said an important issue for him is that Poly should take responsibility for creating additional on-campus housing in the near future.
"When I was going to Cal Poly, there were 11,500 students. There are now 17,500 and the university hasn't built any new housing for students," he said. "The university has a responsibility to the students to build inexpensive on-campus housing that would be of the type and quality that students would want to live in." Another important issue for Ewan is keeping the campus transit system free to all students. He said the cooperation between Cal Poly and the city is vital.
Candidate Marc Brazil is a Cal Poly political science senior who wants to bring a student voice to city government.
Brazil ran unsuccessfully for city council in 1994 and has not held a public office. He worked as a White House staff for the Reagan administration and as personnel director for the National Security Council.
"I'm in a unique position as the only candidate entering into this service without a predetermined view of students in San Luis Obispo," Brazil said. "At city forums I've heard blanket indictments against all students for causing the overall demise of city neighborhoods."
Brazil said the community's attitude toward students is unfair and largely unfounded.
"Students are the economic engine of this city," Brazil said. "I'll work to make Poly students, through sororities, fraternities, campus clubs and individual public service contribute a lot to this community."
More shopping areas and retail stores are not what San Luis Obispo needs, Brazil said.
"People can't afford to live in San Luis Obispo on retail wages. We need to attract small, high-tech electronic firms that will offer high-paying salaries to Cal Poly graduates who want to stay in the area."
But, Brazil added, opening these small firms has to be supported by the entire community.
"If we can't reach a consensus, we will lose the opportunity to have more high-paying jobs in our city," Brazil said. "The companies will take their products and services elsewhere.
Brazil is supported by outgoing council member Doug Williams, former city council member Dave Romero and many Cal Poly students.
"It's about time we have some representation in the way this city government is run," said forestry junior Jennifer Brennan. "He's got my vote because I know he'll look out for the students' interests.
"We should make up almost half of the population in a city that is largely conservative," said architecture senior Matt Davis. "Brazil will give the council a young, student perspective that is often overlooked and is appreciated in the San Luis Obispo's unique aesthetic surroundings."
Candidate Janice Marx said she became involved in the city council race to protect the special interests of women.
A resident of San Luis Obispo for 11 years and a city planning commission member, Marx said a gender-integrated council is a necessity.
"If I hadn't decided to run, there would be no women on the council and that is not something I would be comfortable with," Marx said.
Marx runs her own law practice in San Luis Obispo. She also has taught business law at Cal Poly and was director of student housing at Stanford.
Like Ewan, Marx has a history of working with President Baker on building a development of upscale-level houses that are located on or very close to campus," Dahan said. "It would be like a student community, with restaurants and supermarkets just for those students.
Dahan has said he already approached local investors who have expressed interest in such a project."
"The time is now," Dahan said. "I think it's and outrage that students and other people of the city have to live as far as Paso Robles and Santa Maria because they can't find housing in the city where they went to school and grew up.
In addition to housing, Settle believes Cal Poly's parking facilities are inadequate and efforts to alleviate the problem are long overdue.
"The university needs to stop adding facilities like the Performing Arts Center, the Rec Center and now the new sports complex without adding additional parking on campus," Settle said. "Both students and faculty who just want to get to class on time would often be forced with a hunting license than a useless parking permit.
The candidates both support limited development within the city, but Settle wants to concentrate growth in such a way that it benefits students.
"Once the airport area is annexed into the city, I want to stimulate industrial expansion in that area by approaching small, high tech and software-related companies to locate in San Luis Obispo," Settle said. "We have high-skilled Cal Poly graduates that are leaving the area to find good jobs, and I want to change that.
Dahan said that he plans to work with President Baker on building a development of upscale-level houses that are located on or very close to campus," Dahan said. "I want to work with Cal Poly to leave the area and open their own businesses to the Performing Arts Center," Marx said. "When I attend events at the Performing Arts Center, I enjoy the open seats that could have been sold at a reduced rate to students who wanted to attend."
Dahan said he would like to work with Mr. Madonnette on building the Eagle Hardware project Madison has proposed. "I want to work with Cal Poly to leave the area and open their own businesses to the Performing Arts Center," Marx said. "When I attend events at the Performing Arts Center, I enjoy the open seats that could have been sold at a reduced rate to students who wanted to attend."
Dahan said he would like to work with Mr. Madonnette on building the Eagle Hardware project Madison has proposed. "I want to work with Cal Poly to leave the area and open their own businesses to the Performing Arts Center," Marx said. "When I attend events at the Performing Arts Center, I enjoy the open seats that could have been sold at a reduced rate to students who wanted to attend."
Dahan said he would like to work with Mr. Madonnette on building the Eagle Hardware project Madison has proposed. "I want to work with Cal Poly to leave the area and open their own businesses to the Performing Arts Center," Marx said. "When I attend events at the Performing Arts Center, I enjoy the open seats that could have been sold at a reduced rate to students who wanted to attend."
Man pleads guilty to threatening Clontons’ daughter

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A South Carolina man who threatened to kill Chelsea Clinton has pleaded guilty in federal court.

Robert Wayne Tidwell of Easley faces a maximum of three years in prison and a $250,000 fine. He will be sentenced in six to eight weeks, U.S. Attorney Rene Jones said Tuesday.

Tidwell, 19, wrote to President Clinton in April and made several demands, Jones said. The letter included giving millions of dollars to breast cancer research, handing over nuclear missiles to the U.S.S.R. and killing Chelsea Clinton has pleaded guilty the exception of Onion's convenience store and the individual franchises in the MU Food Court.

Coca-Cola also has obtained a contract with the residence halls, the Iowa State Center and the athletic program.

Halloween continued from page 1

to keep outside visitors from coming to Isla Vista for Halloween. According to a flyer they've been distributed to various other institutions, between 85 and 90 percent of the arrests each year are from out of the area.

The "No Tolerance" policy specifically means that "instead of giving warnings, citations will be issued, and instead of citations, arrests will be made as long as the requirements of the law are met," according to the flyer.

The most common violations in Isla Vista on Halloween are possession of an open container in public, minor in possession of alcohol, public intoxication, urinating in public and disrupting the peace/liking in public.

Fines for these violations range from $100 to $1000. There will be 20 extra police officers on duty in Isla Vista on Halloween to enforce these fines and make arrests, Arnoldi said.

According to Alonso Gonzalez, External Vice President for the Associated Students of UCSB, the school is making an effort to make other events available to the students for Halloween.

"We are going to have an on-campus event including a carnival and four local bands," Gonzalez said.

That was the activity will be moved away from Del Playa to a more controlled atmosphere.

Daniel Gómez, UCSB senior, said Halloween in Isla Vista is not like a typical weekend there.

"There are a lot more people in town, but not as many cool parties because of the presence of so many more police officers," Daniels said.

"It's not as fun to cruise the streets randomly because there are no big parties with bands that weekend.

This is because as part of the "No Tolerance" policy, a country-wide noise ordinance is put into effect which doesn't allow any penciled or live music which can be heard 100 feet from an individual's property. No warnings given in this weekend, citations are given immediately. While Cal Poly students may also partake in Halloween, the disruption caused in San Luis Obispo Halloween weekend is nothing compared to Isla Vista's San Luis Obispo Police Sgt. Bruce Langseth said.

"How busy Halloween is for us depends what day of the week it falls on," Langseth said. "Over the years it has ranged from extremely busy to hardly anything at all. But I don't think Chelsea Clinton ever reads what they do in Isla Vista.

Langseth said there will be a full deployment of officers on duty this Saturday, but no more so than on a typical weekend.

---

Mustang Daily

Mustang Daily needs more advertising designers!

- Must be able to work at least 10 hours each week and be reliable.
- Macintosh knowledge required.
- QuarkXPress & Photoshop knowledge required. Illustrator and/or Freedom a plus.
- Art and Design or GRC majors strongly encouraged to apply.

For more information please contact:
Melissa M. Geisler, Production Manager
756-6795 or 756-1143
Graphic Arts Building, Room 226

Wednesday, October 29, 1998 3

If a can of cola is sold for $1, then 23 cents of this revenue would go back to the school as commission.

---

Warren Madden
vice president of business and finance at Iowa State University

---

Wednesday, October 29, 1998 3
Our Politicians rely too heavily on negative ads to get votes

The state of California has its elections in just a few short days. Political commercials are saturating the airways with pie-crust promises and empty ideals. As the time draws near, I find it more and more difficult to make a choice for governor. On the one hand, California has been Republican-controlled for 16 years, and it has done fairly well, despite a recession and two. On the other hand, it is time for some new blood to flow through the veins of California.

Here’s the deal. Davis is a true politician, a man so far from altruism and the ideals of helping others, it is sickening. On the other side you have Lungren who is so conservative that if we were to elect him it would set California back 50 years. "Gray Davis fights for the children of his ad claim. He proposes sweeping changes and uses words like accountable. What does that mean? How general a term can you get?"

If anything, Davis is a wise politician who knows what to say and how to say it. His plans for reform can’t be that incredible, he has the teacher’s unions from all over the state behind him. Do you honestly think the union would be behind him if he were planning to destroy the current system and start from scratch? No way, no how, it just makes sense. Both Davis and Lungren are just playing the crowd—an old rhetorical technique you could pick up by taking a class in speech communications.

Here is the real reason for writing this column. Politics has truly become a boxing match, the more money you spend and the more you can discredit your opponent, the better. Gray Davis has an ample supply of funds and plenty of ammunition when it comes to negative ads. From this we see his lead in the polls.

So I must ask the question, why is it that politicians spend all their time and money blasting their opponents? Are they just saying, "Hey I am not as bad as this guy, so elect me." That’s just ridiculous.

In an ideal world, California’s politicians would have the dignity of ASI officers here at Cal Poly. Last year during elections, not one negative comment was aired to the students, no posters discrediting candidates were displayed and no inter-candidate wars were present. Modeling California races after a pulp like this would be an incredible improvement.

As for me and this election, I think I’ll vote Libertarian.

Eddie Drake is a political science sophomore.

Thanksgiving comes before Christmas

Christmas. It’s the most wonderful time of the year. It’s candy canes, wreaths and people spending money they sometimes don’t even have. We’ve lost the meaning, the symbols. These days it’s more about shopping and giving than it is about giving. It’s also about which store can grab your money the fastest.

Take for instance the downtown shopping area. Bath and Body Works has already decorated their windows with fake snow. But then, who knows with that place. Their whole reasoning behind decorating their windows could have been so their employees no longer constantly use them as mirrors to groom themselves. But that’s beside the point.

The point is, Christmas season has already begun, and the little children of this town haven’t even gotten their candy-fix yet. The next thing you know, Santa Claus costumes will be a popular Halloween item. You want to buy things so early that you either end up giving the present to the person too soon and have to buy another, or you shop around longer and buy more for the same people.

We should make a law: "We, the Residents of San Luis Obispo County, do decree that from this day forth there shall be no sign of Christmas until after Thanksgiving dinner."

Hey, it could happen, it’s not like San Luis Obispo is at a loss for stupid laws. And it’s not like we couldn’t promote it, either. With all of the stuff stories that disguise themselves as lead stories on KSBY. We can just picture it now. Tony Capolla and Jennifer Mandeljohn could do a live broadcast from the San Luis Obispo Farmer’s market, with Rick Martel singing Christmas Carols in the background.

Everyone in town could join in the celebration as they wash shop owners try to throw all of the Christmas cheer they possibly can onto storefront windows. We might finally be able to have our Mattei’s Gras parade, except instead of beads, we could throw all types of different candy canes, hard mints and greens and red M & Ms. But spectators had better remember to bring their snow-boots and parkas, because with our luck the only day it will snow here in San Luis, is the day we decide to hold the parade. And, SLO forbid, we hold parades in anything but perfect weather.

But since none of this will happen, we do propose something that can. Don’t buy anything having to do with Christmas until after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Don’t fall into the trap of those businesses advertising their goods so early. “In the season to be jolly,” not to get screwed.

Our voice

Staff editorials reflect the views of Mustang Daily. Editorial policy is determined by the editorial board, which includes all student editors of Mustang Daily.

Columns, cartoons and letters reflect the views of their authors and do not necessarily reflect those of Mustang Daily.

Article about insensitive acts misses mark

Editor:

I was appalled after reading Whitney Plummer’s article, “Poly responds to hauling of gay student,” which ran October 22. The article details incidents at Cal Poly where there have been insensitive acts committed against members of the gay community. However grotesque and incomprehensible the actions against gay Cal Poly students might be, there is no justification for comparing verbal banterment to murder. I’m sure the kid in Wyoming would’ve much rather lived for life in a dome under constant torment by ignorant assholes instead of having his head smashed in. I believe Plummer’s intentions for her article were good, but she missed the mark a little. In the future, it would be nice if correlations fell under more scrutiny.

Alan Dunton is a journalism senior.

Letter policy

Mustang Daily encourages comments on editorial policy and university affairs. Letters should be typewritten, double-spaced, signed and include a phone number. They can be mailed, faxed, delivered or e-mailed to opinion@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu.

Mustang Daily

Thursday, October 29, 1998

Volume LXIII, No. 35 © 1998 Mustang Daily

Graphic Arts Building, Suite 226
Cal Poly San Luis Obispo
San Luis Obispo, CA 93407

Editorial (805) 756-1796
Advertising (805) 756-1143
Fax (805) 756-6764

mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

editors@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

Printed by University Graphic Systems

Can I still jump on that naked calender thing?

Ryan Beeker editor in chief
Kim Kenney managing editor
Jeremy Roe news editor
Joe Nolan sports editor
Jaimie Zufeltto opinion editor
Jessica Nils Arts Weekly editor
Michelle Bokinsky photo editor
Justin Goo illustration
Mark Arnold faculty adviser
Double Loftus circulation

A.J. Schueremans business manager
J.Paul Rebert information technology
Melissa M. Geisler production manager
Sarah Wheeler assistant production manager
Jane Wooding national/local ad director
Allison Kr. account manager
Emilio Pasky, Randy You designers
Trevor Barter, Alan Dunton, Kim Deblank, Aarons
Garret, Sarah Goodbye, Sean Kalbi, Xavier
Larner, Ryan Short ad reps
Laura Brooks classified ad manager
Searching for the perfect costume is half the fun

By Mike Munson
Mustang Daily

It's the one day of the year you can forget fashion and let go of your inhibitions. Halloween is Saturday, and students are hanging up their khakis and sweaters in favor of fun, fantasy and the bizarre.

Graduate student Marie Agnoli likes the idea of dressing up and being someone different for the day. She is considering dressing as either Princess Leia from Star Wars or the Mistress of the Night, Elvira.

"I think my favorite part is thinking about what to be, going to costume shops, looking around and seeing what other people are going to be," Agnoli said.

Costume Capers is a costume supply store in downtown San Luis Obispo. The owners provide costumes for area musicals and plays year-round, but Halloween is their busiest time, with lines stretching out the door.

Costume Capers employee Ed Stanaway said there have been many requests for Bill Clinton and Monica Lewinsky outfits this year. He said customer wants can be much more unusual though. One shopper wanted to be "Admiral Ackbar in a white leisure suit" for a "disco Star Wars" theme costume.

Many students opt for more traditional costumes. Employee Dolly Hernandez said space aliens are always very popular. This year, black-masked heroes are also in demand following the release of the "Zorro" movie, Hernandez said.

Christina Elgorriaga and Oriana Carvalho, both agriculture science juniors, said they will probably dress as a fairy girl and a nurse, respectively, as they browsed through the shop's offerings.

see HALLOWEEN, page 6
Dewey Weber legacy lives on through Cal Poly grad

By Steve Noone
Mustang Daily

Shea Weber, Cal Poly graduate and son of surfing pioneer and 70s longboarding legend Dewey Weber, is making his own waves here in San Luis Obispo.

He has made it his goal to rebuild the surfboard business his father started and to reestablish "Longboards by Dewey Weber" as the premier manufacturer of boards and clothing for the longboarding community.

The name Dewey Weber means more than just boards manufactured to the highest standards. Weber said, "It carries with it a sense of history and a reminder of a time when surfing was less commercial and more spiritual. "The soul of surfing has always been in the longboard market," he said. "The market is healthy today because people still have a sense of history. The history behind Dewey Weber Surfboards is really the history of surfing."

"My dad started surfing in his early teens down in Hermosa Beach on beauty redwood boards that must have weighed about 100 pounds," he said. "It used to take four kids to carry one of those boards to the beach."

When boards moved to balsa wood, Dewey Weber set up his own shop and soon realized it was a profitable endeavor. By the mid-60s Dewey Weber Surfboards was the largest manufacturer in the industry, producing more than 250 boards a week.

"Just to put that in perspective, Rusty makes about 150 boards a week now, and those are shortboards, which are easier to make," Weber said.

Dewey Weber used an assembly line in his factories which were the first to use kegging on the ceiling to move the boards around the shop floor. He hired women whenever he could because he felt women were more meticulous.

Lydia Gaines, a longboarder and an English graduate student, remembers visiting Dewey Weber's surf shop in Hermosa Beach. "I remember my dad taking me to the shop when I was five or six," she said. "He didn't surf, but he wanted to make sure I got a chance to meet the great Dewey Weber."

By the mid-80s, Longboards by Dewey Weber had expanded to include a clothing line started by Shea Weber, and Dewey Weber was hosting an annual longboarding competition in Hermosa Beach. But the boards being produced were still the old 70s style, with the classic names from the early days of the company.

"When my parents split up in the mid-80s they sold everything and split it up," Weber said, "his smile fading for a moment. "My dad tried to buy back part of the business, but it was in serious financial trouble and he had to close up."

"His drinking problem kind of consumed him — it was a holdover from the 60s surfing lifestyle," he said. "The damage was irreversible, and Dewey Weber died in January 1993 from cirrhosis of the liver."

"That would have been my freshman year at Cal Poly, and I remember spending a few days in Hermosa Beach for the funeral to put his life in perspective. There were over 1000 people at the service, and when I scattered his ashes off the back of the boat — about 100 guys paddled out to catch his last wave," Weber recalled.

"I had never planned to make this my life, but this has too much value to just let go," Weber said as he polished the red Dewey Weber logo on the binder he had brought.

Weber, now 27, graduated from Cal Poly in 1994 with a degree in business, and began working at Kennedy Fitness Center where he heads the spinning program.

"I was thinking that health was the direction I wanted to go, but I know that if I don't do the surfing business now I'll be kicking myself later," he said. "We're up to about 100 boards a month now, and we're growing slowly. I'd rather move slowly and stay true to the original vision then go too fast and lose focus."

Weber said he is keeping the same names and same style boards that his father used because his customers are looking to own a piece of surfing history they can't get anywhere else.

"We do carry a lot of Webers — the Performer is probably our best seller," he said. "The people who buy these boards are usually about 35 and have been surfing all their lives. They recognize the history here."

"I remember hearing about Dewey Weber when I was a kid," Bruebaker said. "I think it's cool that while other longboard makers have been changing designs, the Weber boards are the same."

A couple walking by Uptown Espresso recognized the large framed pictures of Dewey Weber that Shea Weber had brought, and stopped to talk for a moment.

"How does it feel being the son of a celebrity," one asked him.

"I never really thought of him as a celebrity," Weber said. "He was always just my dad. He taught me to try everything and to give everything you do 100 percent. I'm just stoked to be able to do this."

---

The history behind Dewey Weber Surfboards is really the history of surfing.

— Shea Weber son of Dewey Weber

---

Five-Time Grammy Award Winning Vocalist
AL JARREAU IN CONCERT FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30 8 P.M.
PERFORMING ARTS CENTER, I A N L UIS O B I S P O
Special Student Price: $15 (remaining Balcony and Gallery Seats)
Student prices good October 28 – 30 at Performing Arts Center Box Office
M-F 10 a.m. – 6 p.m.
SLO Film Festival offers diverse, student-friendly films

By Whitney Phaneuf
Mustang Daily

Watching a movie on home video can never compare to experiencing a film in the medium for which it was intended: the big screen. The sixth annual San Luis Obispo International Film Festival provides a rare chance to see many restored classics and cult favorites in local theaters through Nov. 8.

"College students complain that there is nothing to do here, but this is an opportunity to see many films you could never see on the big screen again," said Jon Wilson, philosophy major and founder of the festival, who hopes it will attract students and spark more involvement. The board of directors tried to choose films which will interest college students, such as "The Man," a 3-D movie made in 1953. The film is about a Scooterman who disappears into a castle, only to discover he's inherited a terrible family curse.

"We tried to diversify the lineup this year and keep it fun," Harris said.

This year the festival will honor producer-director Stanley Kramer with his highest honor, the King Vidor Memorial Award for his lifetime contribution to film. The festival will also focus on Kramer's films, a salute to sound in film, classic and restored films, new features and award-winning documentaries.

Tonight the festival kicks off with a gala celebration at the Fremont Theater at 6 p.m. Kramer will be presented the King Vidor award by film and television comedian Jonathan Winters. Students may remember Kramer's Emmy award-winning role on "Davis Rules" as the voice of Papa Smurf.

Kramer directed Winters in "It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World," which will be shown after the presentation.

GUESS WHO: One of the films to be featured at the SLO Film Festival is the 1967 film "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," starring Sidney Poitier, Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy, and directed by Stanley Kramer.

It is the 55th anniversary of this comedy, which started every major comic movie that followed in the 14 months before its release.

Kramer's career in film spanned 65 years, and he has won 15 Oscars from his 85 Academy Award nominations. One film to be featured in the festival is his cult favorite, The 3,000 Fingers of Dr. T, written by Theodore Geisel (better known as Dr. Seuss).

He also directed the highly controversial, "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," which opened the door on color in the white American families. This 1967 film, which will also be featured at the festival, shows what transpires when the daughter brings home her black fiance, played by Sidney Poitier, to her parents, played by Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy.

Kramer was picked for the award by the festival's board and all the films were chosen by the film selection committee, Harris said.

She pushed for certain favorites of hers to be included, especially "It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World" and the musical "Funny Face." Harris saw the restored version of "Funny Face" a few years ago at another film festival and was captivated.

"Audrey Hepburn is so appealing on screen, it takes your breath away," Harris said.

Harris founded the San Luis Obispo International Film Festival in 1993, because she saw the need for a cultural event dealing with film. From the beginning she said the town was very supportive and she has never had trouble finding sponsors. The most difficult part is acquiring the often obscure films, Harris said, which is why a committee works year-round to arrange the festival.

The festival committee also brings in many professionals and renowned experts to answer questions and provide insight following the films.

In the Creamery 570 Higuera #18 SLO

'Pleasantville' provides more than 1950s sitcom memories of "Alice In Wonderland" when Alice goes into the looking glass, but the reality will put everything right back into the perspective of today.

The movie makes it appear as though everyone turns into color when they have sex, which isn't anything you'd find in an oldury tale.

David, played by Tobey Maguire from "Decomposing Harry and "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas," film and Jennifer, played by Reese Witherspoon, who starred in "Fear" and the independent feature, "Freeway," are whisked into their television set and are transported into the black and white world of "Pleasantville" where they become the stars of the show, Bud and Mary Sue Parker. They go along with the flow, but not for too long.

Witherspoon is anything but the typical girl-next-door, and she acts a little too much like her real self while trying to be Mary Sue. It sends the show into a tapisrin, and what was fake becomes real right in front of their eyes.

It's a story that might spark your imagination.
Art historian showcases eclectic collection at UU Galerie

By Rachel Roberts Shaw
Mustang Daily

The artwork of Peter Meller, a Hungarian-born art historian, is being displayed at the University Union Galerie in the first show of 1998-99. The exhibit, "Andante Allegro Rubato," is a collection of prints and drawings on paper and films that will be on display through Dec. 6.

This is the first time the UU Galerie has featured a single show for the entire quarter.

UU Galerie curator Jeanne LaBarbera has enjoyed the work of Meller in the past, and was enthusiastic when he was referred to her by one of his colleagues.

"We are honored to present the work of this respected international artist and scholar," LaBarbera said.

Meller was pleased when LaBarbera invited him to exhibit his work. He said that displaying his work in the UU Galerie is a great challenge.

Many of the prints displayed portray mythological characters. One of Meller's personal favorites at the show is "Daedalus and Icarus" which pictures the mythical pair of brothers, one of whom was a great mathematician, and one of whom could not resist flying too close.

Other works include "Aristotle and Phyllis," "Pandora," "Vagyi" and "Cyrophobic Child."

Meller's exhibit includes some touching pieces, as well as some humorous ones. According to LaBarbera, the show includes figures from art, literature, mythology and music.

Anne Jarke, an ecologist and systematic biology senior, works at the UU Galerie and said people enjoy Meller's art for many reasons.

"His work has so much meaning," Jarke said. "Since he's an art historian, it's like his art is a whole lecture."

As an art historian Peter Meller is well-educated, although he had no formal training as an artist.

"That (art history) is my main occupation," Meller said. "Art is a different thing. It is mainly for enjoyment, for people to enjoy."

While growing up, Meller was in contact with many avant-garde artists, friends of his architect father, Dies-Meller.

Meller studied classics and art history at Budapest University. He has worked at the Museum of Fine Arts and taught art history at the Academy of Applied Arts and the Academy of Fine Arts in Budapest.

After the Hungarian Revolution, Meller, with his wife and daughter, escaped to Vienna. He lived in Florence from 1958 to 1966 and worked at the Kunsthistorisches Institute at the Michelangelo Museum.

In 1966 Meller was invited to the Freie University in West Berlin. He was later invited to UU Santa Barbara where he taught in the art department until becoming professor emeritus in 1994.

Meller has published studies on Titian, Masaccio, Leonardo, Giorgione and Tizian.

The title of the exhibit at Cal Poly, "Andante Allegro Rubato," translated from Italian means, "moderately slow, lively, and temporary disregard for music."

According to LaBarbera, this title is appropriate, because Meller uses such a variety of styles, techniques and subjects.

The UU Galerie is open to visitors Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.

HALLOWEEN

continued from page 5

Stanaway said kids love the scary masks in the shop, but college students usually stay away from them. "Masks don't sell big because you can't drink in them," Stanaway said.

Some students choose to make their own Halloween costumes from thrift store items to save money.

Jason Grennier, a Cuesta College sophomore, tried the Old Mission costume Capers employee.

HANG-UPS:
The work of Peter Meller is on display at the UU Galerie for the entire quarter.

According to LaBarbera, this title is appropriate, because Meller uses such a variety of styles, techniques and subjects.

The UU Galerie is open to visitors Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.
John Glenn, Texas A&M team up in space

Colleen Shales/Kirby Lee

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Nation of Islam leader Minister Louis Farrakhan, marking the 26th anniversary of the Million Man March, criticized independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr, saying he was like “swine” dumping “garbage” in the hands of the American people.

In his nearly four-hour address at Crayon Auditorium, which was broadcast via television, radio and the Internet, Farrakhan told leaders of last month’s million-man marches that they should have worked harder that M4ultl to have the ideal university look like in the next century?

First of all, sexual orientation should be included in the excision of sexual orientation in the strongest push in years to change the University of Missouri system’s non-discrimination policy.

“IT is an omission,” said Kendra Smith from the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Resource Center.

An omission strongly felt on the MU campus, as proved by the number of rallies and protests held in the past few weeks. On Oct. 13, a vigil in Shepard’s honor was held, several rallies were held to push the addition of the clause, and protests were held at the Oct. 16 Board of Curators’ meeting because of the omission of the clause on the agenda. Smith feels that sexual discrimination is “a problem for every community.” It may be a problem here, as well. During last year’s Gay Pride Month, signs advertising the event were torn down after being hung up for barely 12 hours. The Hate Report, which documents hate activity on campus, says that an overwhelming majority of those hate crimes are against gays and lesbians.

“Take a look at your desk next time you are in class, or look at the bathroom stall; it is all over,” Smith said.

MU, along with 27 other major universities, is an ARLA and Research University alum, who, as a law school graduate, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“Shabazz, a Washington attorney and an At-Large City Council candidate, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard

WINTER QUARTER CLASS

HUMANITIES X490

The President’s Seminar: Science, Society, and the University

Taught by Col Poly President Warren Baker

Course Coordinator: Prof. Ron Brown, Prof. Nancy Clark, History

What are the primary goals and functions of a university?

What is its role in creating a diverse educated society?

What are the important developments in science education?

What is the role of science in the modern world?

What is the role of science in the modern world?

How do we teach these developments as part of our polytechnic mission?

How do we teach these developments as part of our polytechnic mission?

What are the primary goals and functions of a university?

What is its role in creating a diverse educated society?

What are the important developments in science education?

What is the role of science in the modern world?

What responsibilities do students have in their education?

What would the ideal university look like in the next century?

If you have senior status by Winter Quarter and are interested in questions like these, you are invited to apply for admission to the seminar. Admission will be limited to 20 students.

For application forms available in the Humanities Office (47-28), in the College of Liberal Arts Dean’s office (47-31), or from Ron Brown (52-E37) or Nancy Clark (47-25L), the course coordinators.

Additional information is available along with the applications.

Please apply by Friday Nov 13. We will let you know if you have been admitted into the seminar by Monday Nov 23.

“IT is a rare opportunity for a group of students to participate in an open and wide-ranging dialogue concerning the future of higher education. Do not let this opportunity slip away from you.”

University alum, who, as a law school graduate, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“We contacted Min. Louis Farrakhan,” said Shabazz, a Howard University student, and a Washington attorney, said in an interview Tuesday that organizers of the New York march, known as the Million Youth March, contacted Farrakhan.

“The new generation of leaders is willing to take the guidance from our elders. But we cannot sit back and wait for someone else to give us the baton,” Shabazz said.

Farrakhan criticized Kenneth Starr

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Nation of Islam leader Minister Louis Farrakhan, marking the third anniversary of the Million Man March, criticized independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr, saying he was like "swine" dumping "garbage" in the hands of the American people.

In his nearly four-hour address at Crayon Auditorium, which was broadcast via television, radio and the Internet, Farrakhan told leaders of last month's million-man marches that they should have worked harder
NEW YORK (AP) — David Stern cut two more weeks off the NBA schedule, delayed the finer points of the lockout with Michael Jordan, and then met with the players to see if the sides could compromise on the "guts" of a new deal.

"I feel neither optimism nor pessimism. I just think that we've got to talk," the NBA commissioner said. "We may have the skeleton of a deal, but in terms of a hard negotiation on the guts of this deal, I would say we're no place yet."

The cancellations, which wiped out the rest of the November schedule, came after a meeting of the league's Board of Governors at which some owners asked when the "deep deal" date would be for losing the entire regular season.

Stern said he did not want to set a deadline.

"One, we want to be ready to be imaginative," he said. "Two, we don't want to make threats; we want to make a deal."
BEILKE continued from page 12
trips, came along when his brother was checking out Cal Poly. And though his brother chose Sacramento State, Beilke liked the area so much he decided to come to school here.
"I always knew I was going to go here no matter what," he said. Beilke was originally recruited to punt for Cal Poly, but another player filled the position. After that, he decided to try out for the soccer team.
Beilke redshirted his first year and saw only playing time as the back-up goalie his second year. His sophomore year, the opportunity to play football presented itself to play football for him, but on his first day of practice, Beilke was made a punter. Beilke asked Beilke if he wanted to temporarily join the team to fill in for kicker James Tuthill who was ineligible. But the timing still wasn't quite right, and Beilke only practiced once before Tuthill became eligi­ble.
Beilke thought it was the end of his football career, but on his first day back from winter break, Patterson called him and asked if he wanted to play for the team next season. He already had a punting scout because I didn't like being the back-up guy, so I said, 'Sure, that works out fine,'" Beilke said.
His first season kicking for the team Beilke made 10 of 18 field goals. During the 1997 season he made 12 of 17 field goals and had a total of 76 total points. When the team was also in need of a punter, Beilke volunteered.
"I became a punter last year," said head coach Larry Welsh. "He was a good one and is a super­b punter now."
While Beilke said he wants to do all that he can for the team, he feels he is better at place kicking than punting. "I think I'm a place kicker that can punt," said Beilke. "I don't think I'm the greatest punter out there. I struggle more with punting than I do with place kicking. I think it's because I enjoy place kicking more."
Beilke said he has to give credit to long-snapper Adam Herzing and holder Chris Jones.
"Adam is a really good long-snapper and is doing a really good job for us," Beilke said. "Without those two guys my job would be impossi­ble to do."
Welsh agrees that Beilke is a great team player. He said he's also a tremendously clutch performer.
"He is Mr. clutch guy," Welsh said. "Any time there is pressure, he's right there. He understands pressure. They all believe in him, they've got to. He's seen them through some of the biggest wins in history.
Beilke said the strong competitiveness of soccer seems to have helped Beilke do well in pressure situations. In fact, according to Beilke, several of his favorite memories are when he has succeeded in highly pressured situations.
Beilke especially remembers last season's game against Montana State.
"We were down by two with only two seconds left in regulation when I kicked a 50-yarder," he said. "It was freezing outside and all I wanted to do was kick it out and get it over with. I wasn't too optimistic about making that kick.
He also kicked a 34-yarder in overtime during a game against New Mexico State last season to win the game for the Mustangs.
"It was two years ago, however, that Beilke kicked a record-setting 54-yarder in a game against Western Illinois. The Mustangs lost, but the record still stands.
"It was the end of the half and they were really cleaning our clocks, said Beilke. "I knew I kicked it pretty far, but I didn't even know I broke a record until the end of the game."
Beilke, an industrial technology senior, is hoping that plans for a future in professional football fall into place as well as his past football career has. "It's tough this year. I almost wish last year was my senior year," said Beilke who is 2-for-3 right now. "I had more kicking last year. But I'll just have to take the opportunities I get this year and I'm going to have to try really hard!"
"Welsh and Beilke said he has a chance as a free agent in the NFL. Beilke said he should know by January or February if he will make it that far.
"He should have an opportunity to try for the pros," said Welsh. "He's really good leg strength."
He has gotten a lot of help from his coaches. Defensive coach J.D. Williams has directed scouts Beilke's way and agrees the kicker should have the opportunity to try.
"All there is an opportunity for," Williams said. "It's how you perform when you get there that counts. His definitely got a will to win in everything he does and he will somehow come out on top."
Thursday, October 29, 1998 11

---

DUDE

He is Mr. clutch-guy. Any time there is pressure, he's right there. He understands pressure. They all believe in him, they've got to. He's seen them through some of the biggest wins in history.

---

Larry Welsh

head football coach

---

"Come see an original Cal Poly TV Sitcom Roomies Written by Gavin Hartley and Ben Miskie Directed and Produced by Ben Miskie Featuring: Cordelia Gilson, James Sarabia, Edward Pozni, Antonio Arrier, Airth Voila Dennis Frank, Kai McDonald-Withey Planner, Anant Bracht, James Bevridge, Joshua T. Burnett, Doug Belcher Ian Chase, Jon Tavendale, Chad Mayer, Aahir Kominsky"
Beilke kicks in clutch

Cal Poly kicker opts for football, not soccer balls

By Trisha Thorn
Mustang Daily

It took a while, but things have definitely fallen into place for kick-er Alan Beilke.
The senior place kicker and punter for Cal Poly football remembers following his older brother onto the soccer field in his hometown of Livermore as soon as he was old enough to play.

"He should have an opportunity to try for the pros. He has really good leg strength." — Larry Welsh, head football coach

Beilke played goalie all four years of high school, but wasn't persuaded to play for the football team until his senior year.

Beilke said his mom encouraged him to try out for football his freshman year when students usually start playing because he was already so involved with soccer.

"I knew a couple guys who played football and they kind of wanted me to play just for punting," Beilke said. "They knew I played goalie and could kick the ball pretty far." Beilke ended up playing wide receiver as well as punting which he really enjoyed.

"It was fun. The punting came pretty easy because of soccer. I actually had more fun playing wide receiver in high school," Beilke said. "Beilke said his brother had a lot of talent and he always wanted to play,

Beilke's football-playing friends convinced him to try out for the team.

It's GOOD: Senior place kicker Alan Beilke holds the Cal Poly record for longest field goal with a 54-yarder two years ago against Western Illinois.

"I knew a couple guys who played football and they kind of wanted me to play just for punting," Beilke said. "They knew I played goalie and could kick the ball pretty far." Beilke ended up playing wide receiver as well as punting which he really enjoyed.

"It was fun. The punting came pretty easy because of soccer. I actually had more fun playing wide receiver in high school," Beilke said. "Beilke said his brother had a lot of talent and he always wanted to play, but by his senior year, several of Beilke's football-playing friends convinced him to try out for the team.

Beilke's brother had a lot of talent and he always wanted to play, but by his senior year, several of Beilke's football-playing friends convinced him to try out for the team.

"He started playing first, before I was old enough to play, and I always wanted to do what he did so I got into soccer when I was probably four or five years old," Beilke said.

"I knew a couple guys who played football and they kind of wanted me to play just for punting," Beilke said. "They knew I played goalie and could kick the ball pretty far." Beilke ended up playing wide receiver as well as punting which he really enjoyed.

"It was fun. The punting came pretty easy because of soccer. I actually had more fun playing wide receiver in high school," Beilke said.

Field hockey prepares for first home game Saturday

By Jen Stevenson
Mustang Daily

Cal Poly women's field hockey is off to a 2-0 start as it gets ready for its first ever home game this Saturday.

The 3-year-old club, which expects to do well this year, just finished building goals on the track field this year, according to midfielder Jessica Dawson.

Beilke said he has high hopes for the team this year. Last season, they placed fourth in the Cal Cup Tournament, and this year McDonald said he's anticipating the players will take a medal.

"I expect to see more wins this season," he said. "We'll end up with a winning record."