CSU strikes tentative deal with faculty

Proposal moves to CFA members

By Jessica Hagans

The California State University and the California Faculty Association reached a tentative contract agreement Monday, signaling a victory for eligible junior faculty, who could receive yearly salary increases based on service.

If ratified by the CFA, the contract will extend for three years. Back pay will start with the 1998-99 academic year. "We are very pleased to have a tentative agreement," CSU Chancellor Charles Reed said in a statement. "The CSU and the CFA leadership worked exceedingly hard over the past two weeks to reach this point."

Academic Senate chairman Myron Hood agreed that Reed made a lot of movement toward the new contract. "We worked exceedingly hard over the past two weeks to reach this point," Hood said. "There were compromises on both sides and what matters now is supporting an ongoing agreement that is beneficial to faculty and moving on to our mission — which is providing a quality education to our students," he said.

The agreement includes a 5.4 percent average salary increase for the 1998-99 academic year. Merit pay is included in the contract, but will include the appeals process for which the CFA held out.

"Now you have a way to ask for a review by your peers," Hood said. "It's not just a punitive merit system."

Search for suspect

A California Highway Patrol helicopter helped San Luis Obispo police and Cal Poly police search for the suspect in a theft Monday. For complete details, see story on Page 2.

Remember Week hopes to prevent future violence

By Kathryn Tschumper

Remember Week, initially planned to remember all violence victims, became a tearful memorial for slain students Rachel Newhouse and Aundria Crawford.

The Remember committee was founded after the disappearances of Kristin Smart and Newhouse, both Cal Poly students, and Crawford, a Gauchos College student. The week's events, between April 25 and 30, focused on raising awareness of safety issues and on communicating the stories of violence victims.

Sharon Perkins, a co-coordinator of Remember, said the committee worked closely with Take Back The Night, a nationwide campaign that aims to increase awareness of violence against women. Cal Poly held Take Back The Night on April 1.

"Remember is an action committee set up as a means of keeping awareness raised and remembrance raised so this type of stuff doesn't happen again," Perkins said. "They (Take Back The Night and Remember) both work hand-in-hand."

Sister Mary Pat White of the Cal Poly Newman Center, who was in the Silent Candlelight Walk through Farmer's Market on April 29, said it brought the community and students together.

"We were walking four or five abreast, and people were pension for us as we walked by," she said. "I think it raised consciousness for people who are young and new on campus to recognize violence signs and be aware of their surroundings."

White hopes other universities in California will look at Cal Poly as an example and create a Remember Week, along with the Take Back The Night event, to help spread violence awareness.

Koch Nurseries donated the 325 roses that were placed on the Mission Plaza steps, and Take Back The Night provided the 520 candles that united the community in silence.

White, who also participated in last year's Candlelight Walk through Farmer's Market, said this year's walk was larger, with almost 600 people.

"There were only 50 people (last year) and we carried posters," she said. "It was more extraverted in its energy, and this year was more serene and quiet."

Police hunt for suspect in theft

By Jeremy Roe and Joe Nolan
Mustang Daily

Police are looking for a man who allegedly stole a backpack and a small amount of cash from a Senior Glen apartment Monday morning.

A California Highway Patrol helicopter helped officers from the San Luis Obispo Police Department and Cal Poly Police search near the northeast entrance to Cal Poly along Santa Rosa Street between California Boulevard and Highland Drive where the suspect was last seen.

Jim Kilbride and Lance Cowell, groundskeepers at nearby Woodside Apartments, said they saw a man jump a fence and dive into some bushes.

"I got out of the truck and I said, 'You might want to stop,' and (the man) said, 'No way,'" Kilbride said.

English sophomore Amanda Leon, a resident of Woodside Apartments, said she saw a man running across Santa Rosa Street toward the Chevron station at about 11:15 a.m.

"I thought he stole something from the guys who were chasing him," Leon said.

Police had stopped searching the area Monday afternoon.

They are looking for a black male, about 6-feet-1-inches tall, with short, black hair. The suspect is missing one of his front upper teeth. He was last seen wearing a short-sleeved, button-up shirt, but according to police, he had changed into a windbreaker.

Anyone with any information is asked to call the San Luis Obispo Police Department at 781-7821.

Tough times: Megan Carter and Taryn Franks lean on each other during a memorial service for slain Cal Poly student Rachel Newhouse. The service was part of Remember Week, held the week of April 25.

Traveling abroad? Don’t forget your shots

By Andrea Parker

Students planning to travel abroad this summer need to get their immunizations and vaccinations up to date. "If you’re going to the Middle East, you need to get your vaccinations and certification for yellow fever," Ruiz, a licensed vocational nurse, said. "And I recommend that people come in six months to a year before going on a trip so that there is time needed for certain shots to be administered." Ruiz, a student nurse in a child care program at Cal Poly, said that students need to get their vaccinations at least three months before leaving.

"We have all the vaccines here except yellow fever," Ruiz said. "And that has to be done through a certified health department."

Rui: explained that travelers have to present yellow fever vaccination certification when they enter certain countries. The San Luis Obispo County Health Department provides the vaccination and certification for yellow fever. Other vaccinations are not required but are recommended for a safer trip, she said.

Before students come to the Health Center, they need to know what countries they’re visiting, how long they’re going to stay and if they’re going to be in rural areas or in cities. Travelers to more exotic places — Mexico, South America, China, India, and Eastern Europe — need more shots. If someone plans a short stay in a main city, however, fewer immunizations may be needed.

"Basically, if you’re traveling anywhere, you want to make sure you’re tetanus (immunization) is updated," Ruiz said.

It’s also recommended to get vaccinated for hepatitis A, especially if someone is traveling to Eastern Europe or Mexico, she said. Hepatitis A can come from waste in the water and from shellfish out of season.

Rui: said that students need to take time to schedule their immunizations and vaccinations. She also recommended that students check with their insurance companies to see if their shots are covered. The students can then get information from the Health Center about the needed immunizations and take it to their general physicians. Ruiz said it is important to get a hepatitis B vaccination in case an accident happens while traveling and blood work is needed.

"The country screens (blood) really well," she said. "That’s not the case for the rest of the world."

Hepatitis B attacks the liver and is transmitted either sexually, through contaminated needles or blood transfusions.

Rui: said the center also sells a traveler’s emergency kit for about $10 in case an acute problem, such as diarrhea, develops.

"People with severe bowel problems and allergies may get a vaccine before going on a trip," she said. Ruiz said it’s important to get vaccinations at least three months before leaving on the trip.

"We’d have to juggle some things, and maybe you wouldn’t get optimum coverage," she said. "Four months before leaving is good. Six is great."

Rui: said the time schedule for some of the shots series are flexible.

"Some things we can speed up," Ruiz said. "Some people come in six months ahead, and that works the best."

Julie Marshall, a liberal studies senior, said she planned to go to a Christian mission trip this summer to teach English in Antigua, Guatemala.

"I’ve learned from people who visited Central America that she would need immunizations before leaving, and has over a month to get her vaccinations before she leaves," she said. Ruiz also said taking care of the immunizations months in advance makes the remaining tasks easier.

"It’s nice if all your shots are out of the way, relieving the before-you-travel stress," she said.

Rui: recommended that students come to the center before 10 a.m. if they want faster service. It takes about half an hour to get the vaccinations organized, she said, and there is usually a long line in the afternoon. The World Health Organization publishes recommendations based on what diseases are prevalent in a particular country. The Center for Disease Control also has information booklets the nurses use to look up which shots are recommended before traveling in a certain country.

"You want to get informed with out being scared to death," Ruiz said. "It will increase your chances of having a safer trip."

Rui: said students travel abroad, especially in the summer, for various reasons. "A lot of the kids that come in here are going on missions," Ruiz said.

"It’s a devastating loss," said his longtime friend and lawer Sheldon Vuldor of Los Angeles. "I’m numb."

Children’s writer Shel Silverstein dead at age 66

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Shel Silverstein, the author of such acclaimed children’s books as “A Light in the Attic” and “Where the Sidewalk Ends,” was found dead Monday morning of a heart attack. He was 66.

Silverstein had severe coronary artery disease. Friends said he had recently complained of an upset stomach and “didn’t feel quite right,” said Associate Medical Examiner Richard Ficht.

Silverstein’s books, which he illustrated with his own humorous images, are packed with colorful characters like walruses with braces and canals in brassiers. His poetry is light and irreverent and humored children and adults alike.

"It’s a devastating loss," said his longtime friend and lawer Sheldon Vuldor of Los Angeles. "I’m numb."
‘That Guy’ at the party and ‘Magic Juice’

I spend the majority of my time keeping various items out of my shoes. When I’m not protecting my feet from lepers and colitis monkeys, keeping my sneakers void of beer, vomit or urine is of utmost importance. That’s why I hate parties.

Parties invariably end with some poor sloth lampong home in a litter brimming with a foreign substance. It’s irrelevant whether vodka or vomit causes that peculiar sloshing sound; the smell is going to linger. My desire for a good night falls far behind my efforts to prevent a shoe full of Matt’s Magic Juice.

Which brings me to Matt’s Magic Juice. At some point during a party, a person you once considered a friend will invent something they will label “a drink.” This is highly subjective and open to interpretation. Ingested demonia will give birth to a concoction that includes equal parts orange juice, tequila, cat, weapons-grade plutonium, broccoli and fear. The only thing “magic” about Matt’s Juice was its smell and corrosive properties. Fears or any juice, tequila, vodka or vomit, causes that peculiar ‘That Guy’ smell.

It’s juice was its smell and corrosive properties. Wake up in a Peruvian jail next to Kstelle’s juice with cat and peppermint Schnapps.

That Guy IS always a major reason for party downfall. You know that Guy, you’ve been offended by That Guy and there is even a good chance you’ve been That Guy. In between belting out a menacing rendition of the Beastie Boys’ “Brass Monkey” and exposing himself, That Guy will decide he’s Tom Cruise in the movie “Cocktail” and spray the room with a bottle of peppermint Schnapps.

“That Guy that I got in a fight with,” you’ll tell a friend. “The one who started a tire in the toilet. He kept telling all the girls he was an official pants inspector. That Guy.”

And what is the worst part about going to a party where That Guy makes an appearance? When he spills Magic Juice in your tub sock.

Brent Marcus is a journalism senior.

Keep sex off of our walls

Editor:

Sex is a private matter. I do not care who you have sex with or how you do it, but I don't want to see you doing it and I don't want you to see me doing it. It belongs in your own private place. The Guys, Lesbians, Bisexuals United campus posters are not mine. I have no choice to go into a "Gallery" to view what I have been told is a display of sexually explicit art. Rather, you do it, but I don't want to see you doing it, the last thing I need is to worry about whether you should be fined. You have no less than right to your personal agenda on students, since you are neither a student yourself nor an impartial observer, and you were certainly not hired because you respect my own reactions or your apparent desire to evangelize them.

While this topic could be endlessly debated, I do believe that Bisexuals United's posters are sexually related and not political. Instead of using a general definition of nudity as to what is, he stated. Well, the serene sights of the budding rose window, the air, I could use my own snot to choke on it. Isn't it nice, however, the wherewithal to keep up with the debilitating, and keeping some of it for future generations.

Maurine Archer is a liberal studies senior.

Posters not pornography

Editor:

"Its pornography — two nude people in the picture, doing a sexual act."

Paul Richards said in the May 5 article, "You can see this is not art."

"If that's pornography, I don't know what it is," he said. Well, Mr. Richards, you're absolutely right. It's not pornography, and you don't know what is. Even if you do possess the power to impose (which less force) your definition on other by tearing down campus posters from the dignity of the GLBU.

GLBU stand behind the argument thatGuys, Lesbians, Bisexuals United group's recent advertisement to make individuals more aware of the "heightened sexual activity."

GLBU can stand behind the argument that Guys, Lesbians, Bisexuals United group's recent advertisement to make individuals more aware of the "heightened sexual activity."

Yesterday's story refers to hugging and kissing, it should be downright hilarious to consider this a sexual act. And sex is a private matter.

You have less than no rights to inflict your opinions so much that I refrain from suggesting such abhorrent equality. As a final note, I would like to touch on yet another moron-headed assumption by Richards: "Pornography is illegal in this state."

Yet another common statement. Has he even read a comic book, or sex but we should put ourselves aside for the good of the environment, should we not?

So every morning you wake up with a tight, thick phlegm-wad in the back of your throat that shakes you from your deep sleep because you're choking on it. Isn't it nice, however, to walk to the bathroom and spit while looking at those beautiful butterflies your roommate picked that have come into bloom? So you can concentrate on your schoolwork because your eyes are both burning and puffing at the same time. What can you do to kill that classroom window and enjoy the serenity of the budding rose window? Not just any old thing, hell, then I don't know what is. Spring weather does have its drawbacks.

Danielle Samaniego is a journalism senior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

GLBU fliers help promote understanding

Editor:

Matt Cochot himself is immature and petty in his response to the article, "Cultural diversity at Cal Poly," the May 10 issue. Whenever he reads a statement such as "Students' unions and fight for decency on Capitol Hill. Maybe you'll succeed in persuading Americans that their bodies are pornography.

Svet Gavrilov is an architecture senior.

Spring is a beautiful time

Ah, the sweet smell of spring in the air. The birds and the bees are rejoicing and their sweet-scented scents to the crisp humid air. These are signs of the season. But look closer; the young couple strolling through the park as they whisper precious sentiments into each other's ears.

"Oh, my God, it is so cold out here!"

"Yeah, I know, that's why you're not getting my jacket."

"Isn't it supposed to be hot already?"

"I don't know how to answer that question. No. You see this is the season known for its fluctuating weather patterns for, cold, rain, sun, it is all a part of spring's charm, my friends, whether you like it or not. So let's go outside, take a deep breath, and think about the good things spring brings us.

The pungent scent of blooming May flowers. A witty phrase, isn't it? Spring is the time when California's poppies roar, the warmth of the sun, the freshness of the air, the new weather swings on a hilltop and when blooming daffodils dance to the rhythm of the soft winds. Poets and artists thrive on such visions as these given to us by spring.

"If there was any more pollen in the air, I could use my own snout to start a garden. I hate this hay fever!"

Yet another common statement. Hay fever is a pain, yes; but we should put ourselves aside for the good of the environment, should we not? Diversified weather has the ability to create a new experience daily and can allow you to enjoy all sorts of activities. One minute you might be getting ready to go to the beach and the next minute your drinking hot cocoa snuggled in a blanket with a video as you're keeping out of the rain. In the immortal lines of the Beatles: "When the rain comes, they run and hide their heads, when the rain is gone, they drizzle the shade and up their lemonade, when the sun shines, they flounce about and dance." This I mind. Streetlives were weather fine."

I couldn't have said it better myself. Nothing beats sitting here — let us bask in all its glory and quiet compelling.

Danielle Samaniego is a journalism junior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

Letter policy

Columns, cartoons and letters reflect the views of their authors and do not necessarily reflect those of Mustang Daily or Mustang Daily encourages comments on editorial policy and as last dimness of decency. But he fail to mention numerous "decency" laws. These societies are treating individuals, and particularly women, badly. They feel that their "decency" is so sacred that offending it should be seen to be a "little bit of shoulder." However, people like Matt are in denial of the same fundamental freedom it goes against the "conventional" Christian values.

Time to grow up, Matt, and learn some tolerance. I personally find the numerous Christian fliers calling for Bible Study or Crusade for Christ, quite offensive. They rape my consciousness and inside the spirit of academia, which for centuries fought against false theological dogs and Christian charlatans. Nevertheless, I do not take a responsibility to make sure that the school's halls are clear by taking down only Christian fliers, though, following Matt's logic (or, better, his absence of logic) I should (especially in the light that California State University is a secular, non-religious educational establishment).

Fighting homophobia in public is the best weapon to supress within yourself: Relux Cochot. And if you are still uncomfortable with the reality of people, just switch your mask to political science, join Jesse Helms' legion of conservative Protestant lobbyists and fight for decency on Capitol Hill. Maybe you'll succeed in persuading Americans that their bodies are pornography.

GLBU posters raise concern with many students

Editor:

The posterizing campaign on campus is an attempt to turn our university into a "Gallery" to show what is, he said. Well, the serene sights of the budding rose window, the air, I could use my own snot to choke on it. Isn't it nice, however, to walk to the bathroom and spit while looking at those beautiful butterflies your roommate picked that have come into bloom? So you can concentrate on your schoolwork because your eyes are both burning and puffing at the same time. What can you do to kill that classroom window and enjoy the serenity of the budding rose window? Not just any old thing, hell, then I don't know what is. Spring weather does have its drawbacks.

Armstrong honored as NBA’s best off the bench

OLSANO, Fla. (AP) — Handoll Armstrong hosted the trophies and smoked for photographs. When he lowered the NBA Steak Meal washable back to the table, he shed the most coveted man in the NBA: the Dr. James L. Smith 122-pound award, along his arm. "This thing is pretty heavy.

The 6-foot-10 pro who helped the Orlando Magic to the second-best record in the Eastern Conference is honored Monday as the league’s best player whose come off the bench, in the NBA’s version of the game’s Most Valuable Player award.

Armstrong, a football backfielder in college who played in five different professional basketball leagues before finally catching on with the NBA, averaged career-highs in points (13.8), assists (6.7), rebounds (1.6), steals (2.1) and minutes per game (35) while appearing in a reserve in 35 of 52 games.

He led the Magic in assists and fourth-quarter scoring (4.5) and made 161 of 175 free throws from the foul line to rank third in the league in free-throw percentage (93.4)."When you look at stats at sixth and seventh men, there are a lot of very good ones in the league," general manager John Gabriel said. "But there are few who can come in and create immediate change. Harry has done that, and that’s why he’s the choice." Armstrong, 30, was undrafted in 1991 after finishing his college career at Fayetteville State where he was also a kicker in the football team. He played in the Global Basketball Association, Continental Basketball Association and United States Basketball League, as well as briefly with Portugal and Spain before signing with the Magic in April 1995.

During one brief stretch when he was out of basketball, Armstrong helped in a variety of roles in the team’s marketing department.

Affidavit: Tuinei obtained heroin before the night he died

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys star Mark Tuinei went to an apartment to obtain heroin before his death and apparently used it as well as the drugs Ecstasy, a hybrid of the hallucinogen mescaline and the stimulant amphetamine, at Tuinei’s house during the early morning hours of April 25, 1995, according to the document filed with Collin County (Texas) District Judge John Risch, who issued the search warrant.

Tuinei was arrested a number of times in college for drunk driving and he admitted to mixing alcohol with marijuana when he was young. In 1993, he told The Dallas Morning News that he could not drive drunk and his life around.

"It’s a day-to-day, year-to-year battle," he said. "I know that I’m always going to run into trouble somehow, somehow. I just need to make sure I handle it." Among other cases that have tarnished the Cowboys’ image, All-Pro receiver Michael Irvin was suspended by the NFL in 1996 after a cocaine charge, and then-coach Barry Switzer was arrested in 1997 for taking a gun to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. In between, several other Cowboys faced drug- or alcohol-related league suspensions.

Last year, there was a mysterious training camp scuffle in which in-laws Evan Melver and his wife, Melanie Irvin, got into a fight. Hall of Famer’s group recommended in A’s bid

OAKLAND, (AP) — A group headed by Hall of Famer Joe Morgan and former Oakland Athletics executive Andy Dolich received a recommandation from city and county leads Monday in their bid to buy the team.

The 3-1 vote recommended Oakland’s Dunluge suggestion that bids from two groups be forwarded to major league owners.

“I just decided the community doesn’t want to do it through bad special,” said Alameda County Supervisor Gail Steele. “I just have played the chess game differently but everybody involved wanted to play it that way.”

The Morgan group also includes Bob Piccinini, the chairman of Modesto-based Save Mart Foods, who provided the $32 million deposit for the group.

The second bid is led by San

Baseball has plenty of options for an encore it doesn't need

Fernando Tatís is going to save baseball.
I know, I know, Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa already did that for us last year, but we need a new cause. The only reason last year was so extraordinarily exciting was because of the 162-game homeruns deeds. Or maybe it was the Yankees' sensational year, when they blew out the Royals and Twins, night in and night out.

Who needs just 1 strikeout leader?

Police said he offered an underhanded play to the Big West (Championships May 20 to 22.

Senior Mike Zeller is the current Mustang pitcher who needs just 11 strikeouts to become Cal Poly's all-time career strikeout leader.

Congrats Billy Joe Richardson!

Police also said StrawFi'ee had a new case. The only reason last year was so extraordinary was because of the 162-game homeruns deeds. Or maybe it was the Yankees' sensational year, when they blew out the Royals and Twins, night in and night out.

Who is the Major League leader in home runs as a leadoff batter?

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees outfielder Darryl Strawberry finally was changed to non-bobbled Monday by Florida with possessing cocaine and soliciting a prostitute.

The New York Yankees outfielder is scheduled to be arraigned May 26, Assistant State Attorney Pam Bondi said.

Strawberry, who has a home in Tampa, was arrested April 14 a few miles from the Yankees' extended spring training camp. Police said he offered an undercover female officer $50 for sex.

Police also said Strawberry had 0.3 grams of cocaine stuffed in a $20 bill in his wallet. He was released on $50,000 bond.

Strawberry said the cocaine did not belong to him.

Poly track prepares for league championships

Mustang Daily

The Mustangs will send several track members to the Big West Championships May 22 to 22. Senior Andy Sverchek improved his Cal Poly best discus throw Saturday at the Modesto Relays, throwing a 184.1. The throw made him the first Mustang to reach a provisional qualifying mark for the NCAA Championships. He's also qualified in the shot put.

Pole vaulters Brad Pickert and Logan Nichols will also go with marks of 17-8.5 and 17-6.5, respectively. Paula Serrano will represent the women's team in the pole vault with a throw of 134.5. Shannon Patrick and last year's NCAA champion Biance Maran will also compete in the pole vault.

Tammara Jackson, who qualified with her Cal Poly career record 11.51 time, will run in the 100s.

Stephanie Brown, who set a Mustang record with a shot put of 50-8, will also go to the championships. She will compete in the discus.

The Mustangs will send Stephanie Chou to compete in the 800m (2:09.91).

Rose back on field, bat in hands, with independent team

SACRAMENTO, (AP) — It was a scene millions of baseball fans would recognize from their youth. It was a scene that could keep baseball commissioner Bud Selig awake at night.

Pete Rose, baseball's banned career hits leader, was back on a diamond with a bat in his hands.

Rose hit fungoes to outfielders for the Sacramento Streakheads of the Western Baseball League on Monday as part of his role as special instructor for the newly created team.

"I can still hit, but I can't run. I still have good hand-eye coordination," said Rose, who slammed liners and sharp grounders toward the aspiring major leaguers. "I'm 58 years old, I don't look it."

Rose, indeed, looks pretty good. He has gotten heavier and is slowed by arthritic knees. But he is tuned in, and retains the intense gaze and penetrative style that was among his trademarks.

He was a black-long-sleeved shirt Monday, along with designer sunglasses and a Steelheads cap. In addition to working with the players and giving them a 75-minute inspirational speech Monday, Rose will be back May 28 to toss out the ceremonial first pitch at Sacramento's home opener.

Rose, who insists the stunt as special instructor is not an effort to generate public support for his bid to overturn the ban, will get paid about $5,000 to work with players averaging $1,250 a month.

This is just to help Sacramento. This is not to help Pete Rose. This is fun," he said. "I don't go to bed every night and pray I can go to the Hall of Fame. I can't live my life in the past. Life goes on.

Rose, a 17-time All-Star and the NL MVP in 1973, agreed in August 1989 to accept a lifetime ban after confessing to the集成 s of more than 200 games. Rose was subsequently sentenced to five months in a federal prison after pleading guilty to tax evasion.

None of the 14 people banned for life by baseball for gambling has been reinstated. Rose was scheduled to give a 15-minute pep talk to the Streakheads Monday, but he called off the appearance because of a personal reason.

The career leader in hits with 4,236 and 5,362 is ineligible for the Hall of Fame as long as the ban is in effect. Rose applied for reinstatement in September 1997, but has not received a response from Selig.

Rose served five months at a federal prison after pleading guilty in 1989 to two counts of filing false income tax returns by failing to report $354,908 in income from photograph appearances, memorabilia sales and gambling.
