Campus police must report more crimes

By Bryce Alderton
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Today marks another dimension in crime reporting across the country as Cal Poly embarks on a new wave of crime prevention.

On Oct. 1 of each year, university campuses nationwide are required to disclose campus crime statistics for the three previous calendar years. Crime statistics are scheduled to be posted today on Cal Poly's public safety website: www.police.calpoly.edu/public/annual/.

The requirement comes after a 1998 amendment to the Campus Security Act, now titled The Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act of 1998 by the United States Congress. It requires each institution of higher learning to include additional reporting obligations and a public disclosure from the previous act.

"Campuses must report disciplinary actions such as drug and alcohol violations and crimes that occur at off-campus organizations such as fraternities, sororities and at Seaworld Pacific Ranch near Santa Cruz," Mills said.

The law gets more specific in dealing with rapes.

"Disciplinary action concerning liquor or drug violations will be reported whether or not arrests were made," Mills said. "In the past, arrests for drug and alcohol violations were included in the report but for the crime to be reported, jail time had to be possible."

Cal Poly Vice President for Student Affairs Joan Gonzalez said, "(Cal Poly) is happy to comply with new requirements. The requirement is more stringent than in the past but we are doing everything we can to comply."

President of Delta Chi Fraternity Attilhano Rolleto said fraternities will have to be compliant with the new law.

"If you don't have these violations, you don't have to worry about the consequences," Rolleto said.

Debra Chi currently doesn't have its own house, but the issue of property crime comes into play with the new law.

"Successful homes live within the rules and hopefully they know that stuff can get traced back to wherever an incident occurred," Rolleto said.

Common incidents at parties, such as MIP (Minor in Possession) and drinking in public, will be monitored more closely with the new law.

Crimes reported include: homicide, sex offenses, theft, aggravated assault, burglary, motor vehicle theft, arson, liquor and drug violations, weapons possession, and other offenses.

The law mandates that a police or security department of any kind shall keep and maintain a daily crime log that can be easily understood, which records all crimes reported to the police or security department.

The nature, time and general location of the crime shall also be included in the log.

Each entry must be open to the public within two business days of the initial report being made to the department or campus security authority.

"Information is protected by law or the information would jeopardize the victim's confidentiality," Mills said.

The information would not be released if it was part of an ongoing criminal investigation, risk the individual's safety, cause a suspect to flee or evade detection or result in the destruction of evidence.

The law was originally known as the Campus Security Act when enacted in 1990 by President George Bush.

see CRIMES, page 2

Insuring student health

Cal Poly and San Luis Obispo County offer health insurance programs to help independent students

By Carolyn Ficara
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

The hospital bill comes in the mail and the amount equals a lottery winning. Spending one night in the hospital suits a broken arm will concern anyone about the necessity of medical insurance.

Time and money invested in medical insurance may protect against financial ruin in the future. For materials engineering junior Joel Lillich, the future is now.

"My parents' insurance company dropped me in May when I turned 25," he said. "I have a heart condition. I need insurance."

Lillich said he will take advantage of his company's insurance program as soon as it is offered.

For those who cannot rely on an employee insurance program, there are other options in medical coverage.

Cal Poly has ways of keeping students health care manageable, including no doctor's visits, inexpensive over-the-counter and prescription drugs and a reasonably priced insurance plan.

"There are different rules and programs for domestic and foreign students through the (California State University) system," said Shirley Beumant, Health Center insurance see INSURANCE, page 2

One in four Poly students switches majors

By Diane Farnsworth
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Changing majors at Cal Poly involves a lot of time and a lot of paperwork, but it doesn't seem to slow students down.

In spite of the sometimes difficult requirements and the length of time added to their stay at Cal Poly, 27 percent of freshmen change majors at least once.

According to a six-year study of the retention and graduation of full-time undergraduates attending Cal Poly, approximately one-third of the freshmen students changed majors, and 12 to 14 percent of upper division transfer students changed their majors.

Bonnie Kruep, Cal Poly institutional research and planning analyst, said students change their majors for different reasons.

"Freshman students start college not always knowing what they want to do," Kruep said. "Sometimes they feel the need to explore a few options. On the other hand, transfer students have had a little more experience behind them and have a few ideas for what they want. It's just a matter of knowing there are a lot of variables involved."

Sometimes students realize they don't like the major they're in, or that the major will not help them reach their specific career goals.

Environmental horticulture science senior Carrie McDonal found herself in this position.

"I changed from architectural landscape design to environmental horticulture because it seemed like the range of classes that were offered but I like the science part of the classes. The program seems more rounded and has a business see MAJORS, page 2

Many Cal Poly students are familiar with the 2000-2001 catalog, which lists required classes for each major.
Agents probe link between race mishap, Lowe's bombs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Federal investigators are said to be looking into a link between three bombs found at Lowe's stores and a fatal accident at a auto track named for the home improvement chain.

The News & Record quoted an unidentified source Thursday in saying someone called Lowe's to complain not enough was done for victims of the accident.

Three spectators were killed and eight injured May 1 at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Conard when debris from a wrecked car flew into the stands.

The person who called the chain's headquarters in North Wilkesboro claimed to be an "aggravated relative," said the source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Investigation also are looking into the possibility that the bombings are connected to recent efforts to unionize Lowe's workers, the source said.

A bomb that was found at a store in Concord on Tuesday was the third planted at a Lowe's in less than a week, police said. The bomb was found at a store in Mount Airy, police said.

Concord police employees found the bomb when they were working Saturday at the store.

Lowe's general manager of the store, and Lowe's spokesman Brian Page.

Page would not comment on the investigation by the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

INSURANCE continued from page 1

Health Center

Cal Poly's Health Center offers no-cost doctor visits and inexpensive over-the-counter and prescription drugs.

MAJORS continued from page 1

course included. I think I'll help me reach my career goals better."

McDonald said it wasn't that hard to change majors.

"If you're not happy in a major, you should change. It might be a little more work, but it's worth it."

Laura Glose

liberal studies junior

CRIMES continued from page 1

Jeanine Cler, 19, was a student at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania when she was assaulted and murdered while asleep in her residence hall.
BRIEFS

Saturday in the Park

The SLO Stewards host “A Saturday in the Park,” Laguna Lake this Saturday. The day includes a nature walk and a chance to meet volunteers. SLO Stewards are a group of volunteers that preserve the natural beauty of San Luis Obispo, and inform the community about nature. The meeting is from noon until 2 p.m., and includes refreshments, informative displays and learning about new programs run by the SLO Stewards. Call 689-9100 for more information or to volunteer.

Table tennis

The Grover Beach Chamber of Commerce and Parks and Recreation Department are co-sponsoring a table tennis tournament on October 9th, at the Grover Beach Community Center. The tournament registration is $12 for adults and $5 for children 13 and under. There are three levels of play — beginner (garage or patio player), intermediate (above average) or advanced (skilled competitor). The tournament is set up as double elimination and every player is guaranteed a minimum of four games. Cash awards are given for the top three players in the tournament. For entry forms or for more information, call the Chamber office or the Parks and Recreation department.

New golf lease

The Morro Bay Golf Course, a popular course for many Cal Poly students, has a new lease and will continue to be run by San Luis Obispo County for the next 20 years and not fall into private ownership. The course has been run by the county since 1949 and is actually a part of Montana De Oro State Park. Due to $700,000 in capital improvements to enhance the course, run by a private operator. Under the new lease, the county has also taken control of a small neighborhood park in Cayucos.

Golf thriving on the Central Coast

Tracy Brant Colvin

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

San Luis Obispo County is a golfer’s paradise. Every skill level, from first-time golfers to Bider Cup professionals, can find a course suited their needs not more than a 45-minute drive from Cal Poly. Here is a guide to some of the golf courses on the Central Coast. For novice golfers, nine-hole, executive courses are the best places to start. Executive courses help keep golfers’ frustrations to a minimum. However, golf is a frustrating game and there is no way around becoming anxious. Just look at Tiger Woods, who lost his cool at this summer’s British Open.

How do-par three courses help keep golfers calm and collected? First, the courses are usually a bit easier than 18-hole courses. Most holes are par threes, with a short par four thrown in for variety. Since they’re a little easier and a bit shorter, you can play these courses a lot more regular courses. Think of it as being frustrated for an hour and a half instead of being miserable for five hours.

The Central Coast has two par three courses that are great for beginners. The first is Laguna Lake Municipal Golf Course, on Los Osos Valley Road in San Luis Obispo. The green fees are reasonable so just about everyone can afford to play an occasional round.

Nine-hole courses also help experienced golfers polish their short games. If you’re looking for a chance, travel to farther than Los Osos. It is home to an excellent nine-hole golf course, Sea Pines Golf Resort on Salina Avenue. The prices are comparable to a six-pack. This course compares very favorably to Laguna Lake Golf Course. After mastering the par-three courses, it’s time to step up to the big leagues — the 18-hole, par-72 courses.

The nearest 18 holes to Cal Poly is Dairy Creek Golf Course. The cost is substantially higher than nine-hole courses, but golfers get more than twice the play and at least double the frustration.

Dairy Creek sits across from Cuesta College on Highway 1. This fairly new course is still evolving. One of Dairy Creek’s quirks is that some of the course areas are labeled “environmentally sensitive,” meaning golfers cannot retrieve balls hit into these spots. The other caveat of playing Dairy Creek is that golfers are strongly advised to play early in the morning since winds whip up around midday.

Golfers willing to travel a little further west on Highway 1 can play at Morro Bay Golf Course, located across from the Marina. Morro Bay’s course is the granddaddy of golf on the Central Coast, serving the area since the 1940s. Although it’s a mature course, diseases and storms have killed many of its trees. Although fewer trees cleaned the fairways, the course remains one of the most beautiful on the Central Coast.

There is one trick to the course. All the putting lines travel toward the ocean.

Traveling cost on Highway 41 from Morro Bay takes you to Atascadero and the Chalk Mountain Golf Course. The course is in Chalk Mountain County Park.

Chalk Mountain is a fantastic course for the intermediate golfer. The course is fairly wide and free of sand traps, and the holes are straight-forward.

Also in Atascadero, a little south on Highway 121, is Eagle Creek Golf Course, a challenging nine-hole course.

The course is difficult because golfers must land their balls on the green from every tee to avoid water. Most holes have some kind of water hazard. The toughest hole is surrounded on three sides by a pond — the green is only size landing.

There is one course that’s a cut above the rest. Traveling south on Highway 15 from San Luis Obispo to Avila Beach takes you to one of the premier courses on the Central Coast. The Avila Beach Resort Golf Course is located between Avila and Port San Luis.

Morro Bay is the most beautiful course on the Central Coast, Avila is a close second. The first nine holes go back into the canyons surrounding Avila Beach. The back nine is a completely different course. It’s more open and is bordered by San Luis Creek.

The larger fairways allow golfers to take more chances and, with any luck, to score better.

Whatever your skill level, Central Coast courses offer challenges to all.
Get over your cell phone envy

Living amid the technology generation, one looks around and sees cell phones and pages. Often they fill rooms with an aura of noise, from the quiet "vibrate" to the loud and somewhat loud "Yankie Doodle" ring. People often complain that it's rude for people to talk on phones while in restaurants or that it is disruptive to have cell phones or pages going off in the middle of class. This is all very understandable, but I would be willing to guess that anyone with these complaints has never actually used one, or even thought about why it would be a good idea to have one.

Consider this: A teenage girl is out with her older boyfriend and was expected home two hours earlier. Mom is at home, about to go into cardiac arrest, worrying about all of the horrible things that could have happened to her daughter. Were they in a car accident? What if she was attacked? Is she on the side of the road somewhere calling for help with no one around to hear her? This scenario could call for every hospital and police station in town to look for her daughter or she could plug in her chance that the girl just lost track of time and needed a little reminder to go home. With one quick call to the pager, Mom is able to curb her fears and know her daughter is on her way home.

If that doesn't sound like a good enough reason to join the technology era, how about this: A man is driving on a Los Angeles freeway after a long holiday weekend. Traffic is heavy so he's gone about one mile in the last 45 minutes. All of a sudden traffic starts to pick up. He's driving at speeds of 55 miles per hour as he looks left to see if he can change lanes. At the same time, another car - two lanes over - decides that it is going to change lanes into another car. The man watches in horror as the car hits the other one, loses control, goes shooting across all of the lanes, flies back again, crashes into the center divider and finalizes its stop upside down on the other side of the freeway. Since traffic was still flowing along and he was on the other side of the freeway, there were no practical ways for him to stop and help. Instead he picked up his cell phone and called 911, and helped reach the scene in minutes.

Yes, these situations seem like tatched scenes and somewhat unlikely to happen to you or a phone. How often is your own mind upset because you're late getting home or how often do you commute a horrible distance? Not very often, but many more practical reasons exist for owning one.

First off, they're not very expensive. Cell phone and pager service companies continuously run promotions offering banner pages or cell phones in exchange for signing up for wireless services. Even poor, starving college students can afford many of these services.

Secondly, cell phones and pagers are great ways to get a hold of someone. Everyone has moments when they wish they could get a hold of someone right away, but they can't become the person's home. Cell phones and pagers are a great way to instantly contact people in an emergency.

Lastly, they're both great for traveling. Everyone takes trips once in a while, and it's convenient having a fast, reliable way to contact people. In case of an emergency, cell phones and pages come in handy if you need to call for help.

To those of you who still feel cell phones and pages are obsession and annoying, my response is, "Get a grip." They're not too distracting and they most certainly aren't going anywhere anytime soon, so you might as well admit defeat and join the rest of the world on the information highway.

Erin Crosby is a journalism sophomore and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

Point/Counterpoint

Virtual interactions won't cut it for long

Remember when the most time-consuming electronic device was the television? Those were the days. After awhile, you got bored sitting in silence and finally did your homework. Fast forward a year or two, and everywhere you look there are new arrivals.

Sure PCs have been around for a some time now, but with the emergence of the Internet, cellular phones, laptops and palm pilots, electronic devices are here to take over our lives. It's kind of scary to think about what the future might bring us. It is estimated that there are 80 million cellular phone users in the United States alone, with an additional 16 million expected annually. That is nearly one in every three and a half people. Now I know these phones can be very important in life threatening situations (or at least when you are late for work due to a flat tire), but I can't imagine that this many people live their lives in a constant state of emergency. So what is it that these people talk about?

Besides a portion of the business world, where a cell phone may be vital to someone's success, most cellular phone conversations are banal and intruding on the lives of other people.

Many times you are trapped within earshot. How many times have you been in a restaurant or on the bus, and the person next to you excitedly tells the story of his or her incredible evening the night before last? I'm all for the distribution of information, but I'd like to think we have a choice of which information we want to know. Besides, isn't the story better told in person?

Cellular phones are only the first step in the separation of human interaction. Soon we will all be able to sit in our homes and look at each other through cameras and screens. We'll even be able to hear each other's voices, as if we were sitting in the same room. I wonder if we will still shake hands in the future. Will it be necessary? How will Europeans handle not knowing each other's cheeks when they greet? Won't traveling physical interaction with other humans for the technology of the future wear at our social eventually?

Television should be treated as an adornment. Some people are so absorbed in television, they are detached from the outside world. New devices may be intriguing, but they carry the same warning. Soon, people will not be able to say hello to each other unless it's in bits and bytes.

Our next step will be trading a piece of ourselves to have a microscopic monitor under our skin - the ultimate debit card. It will keep track of everything: our finances and schedules, probably even our feelings and when we should eat. We will probably send electronic signals to each other and not even have to talk. Imagine, we will be our own antennas! Sending and receiving information like we were hooked up to the Internet personally - until someone comes up with a new microchip that allows hackers to steal our thoughts. Then we will need to have anti-virus microchips implanted.

The technology age should not be so highly coveted. All these devices give me the creeps. At least I'll be able to rely on virtual reality for a hug when my circuits get tired.

Aaron Emerson is a journalism senior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.
Open your eyes to various ethnicities around campus

Drop this newspaper right now. Set it down on your lap wherever you are and take a long, expansive look around the Cal Poly campus. Try to remember everything you see.

OK. Come back. What did you see during that brief but detailed look around campus? Were students standing around talking, studying, eating? Backstage Pizza, blandly stalking their goats? How many men, how many women? And how many students of non-European extraction?

You don't need to read this column in order to know that Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo is an overwhelmingly white campus with small groups of ethnic minority students. And the last thing you need to hear is how very bad we are for this. Kindergarteners are very had when they eat through that hairball of a program.

But the lack of ethnic diversity is a problem. It narrows our education considerably by denying us contact with cultural histories, habits, lifestyles and tensions that might force us to think critically and grow as human beings. The dearth of minority students leads to the faulty, subconscious belief that most people are just like us — that the beliefs and traditions of our families and hometowns are the beliefs of the world. Exposure to diverse cultures leads to confusion, then investigation and finally compassion. I firmly believe we are less compassionate community at Cal Poly when we don't present the presence of other cultures is important.

The administration could certainly recruit more minority students. We could strengthen and expand retention programs, which work to ensure that African-American or Latino students who start Cal Poly as freshmen actually complete their degrees here. Academic departments could make an effort to have more diverse faculty, ensuring that minority students have successful adults to mentor them and act as role models. Cultural clubs like the Filipino Cultural Exchange, MoCha and Black Student Union could receive more funding to plan larger, campus-wide events.

These are all suggestions or implementation and ads we could adopt. But what about the average Poly student? Administrators could choose to enact any program they wanted, but if students themselves don't create an environment that's open to people different from themselves, that program will be worthless.

You may feel that you already live in an inclusive environment. Maybe you have friends of different ethnic groups at Poly. Maybe you are of a different race or religion, thus accepting others for whom they are, rather than for the color of their skin. You watch Jackie Chan films, you listen to Ricky Martin, you eat at the Szechuan Palace. You speak "I Have a Dream" in English 114. You're doing your part.

If so, I applaud the way you opened yourself up to different people and to diverse pop culture. But everyone needs to take that inclusiveness a step further. You need to make specific attempts to meet Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

Right your own assumptions about people. I have to every day. What cultural or economic assumptions do you make about students at Poly? Les?. Or other students? It's ridiculous.

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

However, we dormies are adaptable, so my roommate and I decided to make up the space lost from not having the loft bed above, and replacing it with a futon, which doubles as a couch. The furniture cannot leave the room; you'll have to move the bed back in." says the RA.

To my dorm, only four of nine courts were "working," and all were taken. I couldn't believe this since ONLY about three quarters ago, the courts were new! The Rec Center had the entire summer — when gym attendance was low — to fix these courts for incoming students who PAY for gym facilities. Unfortunately, it appears that all Central Coast construction workers were hired on for the new FAC PARK, structure and so the results of a geographical test are not as major as a senior project. Needless to say, nothing was done during summer.

Letters to the editor

Letters should be typewritten, double-spaced, signed with name and address, and hit Cal Poly in the only place where it'd ever notice, the pocket book, by writing letters to parents of prospective students to and generous alumni, notified them of the injustices going on at this so-called fine institution, in hopes of getting them to send their kids or their money elsewhere. Or I could throw some cash on a page, send it to the Mustang Daily and then get on with graduating.

Letters to the editor

More grievances against Poly

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

Right your own assumptions about people. I have to every day. What cultural or economic assumptions do you make about students at Poly? Les?. Or other students? It's ridiculous.

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

Right your own assumptions about people. I have to every day. What cultural or economic assumptions do you make about students at Poly? Les?. Or other students? It's ridiculous.

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

Right your own assumptions about people. I have to every day. What cultural or economic assumptions do you make about students at Poly? Les?. Or other students? It's ridiculous.

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.

Right your own assumptions about people. I have to every day. What cultural or economic assumptions do you make about students at Poly? Les?. Or other students? It's ridiculous.

For all its growing academic prestige, Cal Poly's student services have come to disappoint me. I'm now well into my fourth year on campus and my list of grievances is starting to reach an intolerable boiling point.

We'll start off with a usual day in the dorms. Actually, we'll start off with a premise: Many existing rules in the dorms have no logical basis.

Assuming that premise is true, I, wake up and have a long look around campus. Yes, I have first class seats. I am a Mexican-American woman from a multiracial Orange County high school; in other words, I've got creds. I'm as diverse as it gets. I've been to the middle East, been to Europe, been to Mexico. I have friends who are all different, and replacing about people based on how they dress, how they speak, and what their ethnic backgrounds.
Morro Bay
Weekend Guide

Outrigger combines amazing food, great views

Standing over the bay, the Outrigger offers the best view of Morro Bay from along the waterfront.

Set further over the water than any other building, it is an ideal vantage point for viewing marine wildlife as well as grand fishing boats cruising the harbor—some on their way out for a day trip, and some on their way in, preparing to unload their fresh catch.

At times, deer can be spotted on the sandspit across the bay, prancing along the water’s edge after having swum down from Montana De Oro. Morro Rock is also in full view from the Outrigger, though your line of vision may momentarily wander to the occasional million-dollar yacht or freshly-dumped vintage sailboat.

Sure, the scenery goes on for days, but, in truth, our local crowd just keeps coming for the amazing food, friendly staff, and impressive service.

The Outrigger offers a wide selection of seafood dishes as well as steaks, Mexican dishes, pastas and salads. The restaurant caters to vegetarians as well. The special board is always packed full of exciting new dishes not found on the regular menu.

Some of the fresh fish selections available every day are halibut, snapper, swordfish and salmon. Albacore, shark and varieties of crab also frequently appear on our specials.

Mesquite coals are used in the BBQ, adding a hint of flavor to the charbroiled fish and steaks.

Jose, the head chef and maestro in the kitchen, brings years of experience to a flourishing new restaurant. His inventiveness and creativity keep the locals coming back to sampel the latest specialties.

You can wash down your meal (or get warmed up for your meal) with a cocktail or draft beer from our full bar overlooking the bay.

The bar itself is a work of art worth admiring, whether or not you choose to wet your whistle. Though salads and steaks are defi-tively the specialty, there are also lighter selections available for lunch, such as salads or sandwiches.

Dinner is served after 11 a.m., but be sure to stop in before 4 p.m. if you want to enjoy the lunch specialties. Sit out on the patio or on the clear day to soak in the sun, or watch the rain pounding the bay from a window seat during a stormy evening.

The restaurant opens its doors at 8 a.m. for the early riser who is ready to take on a hearty breakfast. Choose from a variety of omelets, pancakes, waffles, or try the homemade biscuits and gravy. You can also sublilue that savory breakfast with a delicious bloody mary... or three.

No matter what time of day you drop in, you’ll find that the Outrigger is one of the best-kept secrets on the Central Coast!
Everyone gets Star Treatment at historic Pismo cafe

"The discovery of a new dish does more for the happiness of mankind than the discovery of a star."

— Anthelme Brillat-Savarin

This famous restaurant and meeting place first opened as the Shell Cafe in 1926, back when hamburgers sold for nine cents and condiments were two for a quarter. Then, for a while, the restaurant was called the Pismo Bee Cafe, until, according to local legend, a truck with no driver crashed the party. It became La Perugina, a French cafe, for a while afterwards. But today, the restaurant is called J.D. Scrambles, named after a wire for toaster muser Josh Dijan (see accompanying illustration). No one at the restaurant is quite sure who owned the dog, and when the restaurant was named after Josh Dijan. Nevertheless, the name has stuck.

Ken Hakkim, the owner, has been running the restaurant for over 13 years. J.D. Scrambles is one of the 27 restaurants he has owned in California, from San Diego to Pismo. Ken creates all the recipes and personally serves all the meal. Many customers at J.D. Scrambles like to build their own omelettes from a choice of traditional ingredients (bacon, ham, sausage, mushroom) or unique fillings (toy shrimp and crab). The menu also features "Scrambles," an original cascadia dish in which all ingredients are sauteed in a pan with spices, then scrambled together with three farm-fresh eggs. J.D. Scrambles' menu also includes soups, salads, and sandwiches. Come to J.D. Scrambles for a sunny side-up experience!

J.D. Scrambles
501 Price St
Pismo Beach, CA 93449
Phone: (805) 773-1922
http://www.sbg.com

 reservations for up to 12 • take-out
Open for lunch 11:30 am - 2:30 pm, Mon-Fri Dinner 4:30 pm - 9:30 pm, Sun-Thurs 4:30 pm - 10:30 pm, Fri-Sat

M volunteering service. At J.D. Scrambles, every customer gets Star Treatment. J.D. Scrambles is located ten minutes from the ocean at 501 Price Street. The telephone number is 773-1469. Ken is happy to announce a new indoor dining area. Guests can enjoy an ocean view along with their meal.

There are over 50 menu items, some with unique names that make your taste buds curious. For instance, item No. 35 in the menu, "Shakespeare's Hamlet-ladas" and No. 36 "Pacific Waves" are breakfast specialties. Item No. 47 "King Neptune" is a special salad and No. 57, "The Gobli-nicious," is just one of many awesome burgers featured in the menu at J.D. Scrambles. You'll just have to go there to try them all.

Many customers at J.D. Scrambles like to build their own omelettes from a choice of traditional ingredients (bacon, ham, sausage, mushrooms) or unique fillings. (toy shrimp and crab). The menu also features "Scrambles," an original cascadia dish in which all ingredients are sauteed in a pan with spices, then scrambled together with three farm-fresh eggs. J.D. Scrambles' menu also includes soups, salads, and sandwiches. Come to J.D. Scrambles for a sunny side-up experience!
Sunday, October 3 at 10am
Five Cities Center in Arroyo Grande

10 AM biology lab
2 PM kickboxing class
9 PM movie with Jeff

Fashions that make the moment.
Prices that make the grade.

Every day Marshalls has a huge selection of the latest brand name fashions for you and even cool stuff for your dorm room. All for much less. So you can look your best without spending a fortune.

STORE HOURS:
OPENING DAY 10:00AM-8:00PM
MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:30AM-9:30PM
SUNDAY 11:00AM-7:00PM
PHONE: (805) 474-9465

MERCHANDISE WILL VARY BY STORE.
New bank aims at gay customers

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The first bank to target a national homosexual market has opened its doors in Pensacola and will begin doing business Oct. 11. The Internet-focused banks and the first to open a thrift charter for Internet lending, founder Steven Dunlap said Wednesday his sole walk-in office began operating last week.

"Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy," G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

"We have been building the Reform Party based on principles, integrity and values and this story is just so humiliating," Venturi said. "It is contrary to everything we have been building in the Reform Party."

"We have been building the Reform Party based on principles, integrity and values and this story is just so humiliating," Venturi said. "It is contrary to everything we have been building in the Reform Party."

But Lynn Wong, a magazine com- manager from Contra Ropads, said she likes that the governor says what he wants "instead of telling us what he thinks he wants us to hear."

---

News

"The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House's Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party's biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

"The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House’s Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party’s biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

"The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House’s Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party’s biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

‘The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House’s Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party’s biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

‘The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House’s Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party’s biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.

---

‘The Mouth’ Ventura fires off choice words to offend plenty

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Anyone who was NOT offended by Gov. Jesse Ventura’s Playboy interview, please raise your hand. The former pro wrestler whose frank talk got him elected in an upset last fall gave an interview in which he aimed barbs at religion and gay people, and declared the House’s Tailhook scandal was overblown.

And that was just the beginning of what the Reform Party’s biggest star had to say.

On Thursday, the morning after the interview became public, Ventura got the same treatment from both his political opponents and his own party.

"Unlike others who seem to embrace your religion on television without expressing opinions to the extent of insulting both us and ourselves, the Reform Party sees religion as just one more factor in the overall balance of what is good in this world," said Mr. Koy Griffin, the bank's chairwoman, and Norman Ricks, both retired businessmen.

"It was the first time we were able to go into a bank as a couple, and be treated with the same respect that other couples have been treated in the past," Richbourg said. He and Rick have been together for 26 years. "Every time we bought property together or applied for a loan, it was always undersold that we were business partners, and in some cases, it was turned upon that we were boring together," Richbourg said. The bank is capitalized at about $5 million with 15 stockholders.

Demographic surveys suggest about 25 million homosexuals live in the United States with $800 billion in spending power. About 92 million gays and lesbians regularly use the Internet.

Headline: "Homophobia runs rampant in the banking industry. Many banks think a couple needs to have a marriage certificate to show that they are creditworthy,

G. Kay Griffin, chairwoman.
McHale, Thompson to be honored at NBA Hall of Fame ceremonies

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Kevin McHale pushed himself beyond pain and whatever else he could find in his way. John Thompson pushed himself and everyone around him until the sometimes felt like slowing back.

The high standards of the Boston Celtics star and the Georgetown coach propelled them into the Basketball Hall of Fame. They will be inducted Friday night, along with Cleveland Cavaliers executive Wayne Embry, women's college coach Bellie Moore, and the late NBA pioneer and owner Fred Zollner.

McHale, who turned a powerful front-court from Larry Bird and Robert Parish, made it into the Hall of Fame on his first try. Other triumphs did not come so easy, like the 1987 final against the Los Angeles Lakers that McHale played with a fractured right foot. He reportedly used a patio chair as a walker when he was off court.

"With all that pain, we don't want you to play," his coach, K.C. Jones, said, adding, "He said, 'I'm doing this!'"

"It's a testament ... to his fiber," Parish said Thursday. "Most players with a broken foot wouldn't think of playing."

The Celtics lost six games, and McHale underwent surgery. He was hobbled by foot and ankle injuries until retiring in 1993.

But during 13 seasons with Boston, McHale played on championship teams in 1981, 1984 and 1986. He made seven NBA All-Star teams.

A Manchester with a taste for the outdoors and an energetic exterior, McHale at first wanted to play lockers. But he gave to a single, long-limbed foot off 15 and came to Boston in 1986 as the sixth man.

McHale eventually learned to shoot a jump hook and a fadeaway jumper. He transformed himself into one of the league's most feared offensive threats, averaging 33 percent from the floor during his career.

Thompson captured his share of glory, too. During 27 seasons at Georgetown, he walked the sidelines with a towel habitually draped over his shoulder. Georgetown made 24 straight postseason appearances, three NCAA Final Fours, and won the 1984 national championship — the first ever won by a Black coach.

But it took the outspoken, even combative Thompson three tries to reach the Hall of Fame.

"When you're standing for your views, you're going to have enemies," he said.

"If you're a 'yes' man, maybe you can get into the Hall of Fame — but that's not his nature," said Tom Heinsohn, another Hall of Famer from the Celtics. He played with Thompson when the future college coach was a backup center for the Celtics.

Heinsohn said he would have picked Thompson for the Hall of Fame even for an entire season of "social work" with his many players from poor backgrounds than for being a winning coach.

Collegiates say Thompson always demanded that his players be their best on court and in class.

Bill Sharland, an athletic department staffer who worked for Thompson for 15 years, and the coach taught him Yoda's lesson on "Star Wars". "There is no try, there is no do not."

"He challenged you. There were some days I left the court as a player not thinking good thoughts about him," said Georgetown coach Craig Esherick, who played for Thompson and later was his assistant.

Thompson also demanded more and better chances for minorities. Thompson endured racial taunts when he first fielded a predominantly Black team at Georgetown. He boycotted two games in 1989 to protest NCAA Proposition 42, saying its financial limits hurt minority athletes.

Even when finally elected to the Hall of Fame, Thompson marveled that maybe his politics had delayed his entry.

"American Beauty" will quickly find its place in the category of unique masterpieces such as 'The Graduate,' 'One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest' and 'Ordinary People.'

KEVIN SPACEY	ANNETTE BENING

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Opens Everywhere October 1

UCLA parking scandal over for Bear's McNown

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chicago Bears quarterback Craig McNown, admitting he made a mistake nearly three years ago, pleaded no contest Thursday to a misdemeanor charge of illegally possessing a handicapped parking space.

Current UCLA safety Eric Whittington and former Bruins fullback Craig Walston entered pleas before Municipal Judge Sam Chu, joining 13 other current and former UCLA football players who previously agreed to plea agreements.

All 16 have been ordered to pay $1,485 in fines and perform 200 hours of community service, and also must spend a day meeting with their families and the disabled and their advocates.

The trial three charges in the matter were scheduled for arraignment Thursday in Los Angeles Municipal Court, but were withdrawn until Oct. 22.

McNown's lawyer, Robert Sater and Stanley Greenberg, entered the no contest pleas. McNown issued a statement nearly three hours later from the Bear's practice site in Lake Forest, Ill.

It read: "During offseason workouts at UCLA, I applied for a handicapped parking sticker. Although it was injured, the process by which I acquired the permit was wrong, and for that I am sorry. I had trouble getting around, but applying for the sticker minimized the needs of permanently disabled persons. I deeply regret the incident occurred, and hope people don't judge me on this particular mistake."

McNown refused to comment further, citing the advice of his lawyer.

He could not be found earlier when the Bear's locker room was open for interviews.

Sater emphasized outside court that McNown never used a handicapped parking space, and said the state had no such evidence.

"The crime is obtaining and possessing this handicapped sticker," Sater said. "He did not obtain the placard through correct channels, and he acknowledges that he should have followed procedures and seen a doctor himself instead of somebody else obtaining a doctor's signature."

Sater said the All-American quarterback, who led the Bruins to the Pac-12 championship last season, believed at the time that the doctor's signature was valid. The lawyer wouldn't elaborate further.

McNown was a first-round draft choice of the Bears last April.

Deputy city attorneys Brian Williams said he expected the three remaining men charged — Washington Redskins running back Skip Hicks, Kansas City Chiefs safety Larry Atkins, and former UCLA linebacker Brendan Ayanbadejo — to enter no-contest pleas Oct. 22.

Be part of an EXCITING INTERNET COMPANY!

needed:

Campus Operations Manager

* Earn great money
* Excellent resume builder
* Flexible schedule
* Gain Management and Marketing experience

apply online at www.versity.com email your resume to: jobs@versity.com fax your resume to: 734/463-8460 or call: 877/VERSITY ext.888 (837-7489)

versity.com

Study Smarter
Battle of backup quarterbacks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When Steve McNair went down with an injury one week into the sea-son, the Tennessee Titans had chance to hack.

(d) "We're waiting for a game like this," Fens said. "Winning this game gives us confidence."

"We haven't lost at home," McNair said. "If we just keep win-ing here, we'll be all right."

Eight of Cal Poly's remaining 10 games are in Mustang Stadium.

Despite their poor overall record, the Mustangs are riding atop their division in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation, having tied UC Berkeley in the only league game played to date. League standings at the end of the season will determine inclusion in the postseason.

The Mustangs' next game is Sunday against San Jose St. at 4 p.m. in Mustang Stadium. It is a non-league game.

Tennessee's Eddie George has struggled to get his running game going, but has nevertheless scored four touchdowns in the first three games. George said the absence of Young and his replacement by an NFL nephele does not make the encounter with the 49ers any less challenging.

"I expect them to raise their level of play," George said. "Their defense is definitely going to come out to play, raise it up a notch, same with special teams. The 49ers are still the 49ers."

Tennessee coach Jeff Fisher noted the 49ers have an imposing record at home — they've won 18 straight and have a history of success without their starting quarterback.

Despite their poor overall record, the Titans have done in games Steve Young has not played," Fisher said.

San Jose State (2-1) with the franchise's first

Then JOIN BAND

Mustang Daily

(36x876) hack.

assistant coach Glen Fens felt the game was very important for the morale of the team.

"We've been waiting for a game like this," Fens said. "Winning this game gives us confidence.

Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. 415-247-9858.

"We haven't lost at home," McNair said. "If we just keep win-ing here, we'll be all right."

Eight of Cal Poly's remaining 10 games are in Mustang Stadium.

Despite their poor overall record, the Mustangs are riding atop their division in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation, having tied UC Berkeley in the only league game played to date. League standings at the end of the season will determine inclusion in the postseason.

The Mustangs' next game is Sunday against San Jose St. at 4 p.m. in Mustang Stadium. It is a non-league game.

Tennessee's Eddie George has struggled to get his running game going, but has nevertheless scored four touchdowns in the first three games. George said the absence of Young and his replacement by an NFL nephele does not make the encounter with the 49ers any less challenging.

"I expect them to raise their level of play," George said. "Their defense is definitely going to come out to play, raise it up a notch, same with special teams. The 49ers are still the 49ers."

Tennessee coach Jeff Fisher noted the 49ers have an imposing record at home — they've won 18 straight and have a history of success without their starting quarterback.

Despite their poor overall record, the Titans have done in games Steve Young has not played," Fisher said.

San Jose State (2-1) with the franchise's first

Then JOIN BAND

Mustang Daily

(36x876) hack.

assistant coach Glen Fens felt the game was very important for the morale of the team.

"We've been waiting for a game like this," Fens said. "Winning this game gives us confidence.

Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. 415-247-9858.
Men's soccer scores huge upset

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

By Brent Marcus
12 Friday, October 1, 1999

It was, to put it mildly, a historic night for Mustang men's soccer. In its first game against Fullerton, the Mustangs scored three goals and won 3-0. It was the first time the men's soccer team has ever won a game.

The game was held at Mustang Stadium and was the first game of the season. The Mustangs were led by senior captain Andrew Dimich, who scored two goals for the team.

The game started off well for both teams, with neither side able to score in the first half. However, in the second half, the Mustangs took control and scored three goals to win the game.

The first goal was scored by Dimich in the 54th minute. The second goal was scored by junior midfielder Rob Helm in the 68th minute. The third goal was scored by sophomore forward Anthony Siller in the 89th minute.

The Mustangs dominated the game, controlling the ball for most of the game and creating numerous scoring opportunities. The Fullerton defense was unable to contain the Mustang attack, allowing the Mustangs to score three goals.

With the win, the Mustangs improved their record to 1-0-0 for the season. The team will play its next game on Saturday against Cal Poly at Mustang Stadium.

Scott Oakley

Football looks for redemption versus Southern Utah

The Cal Poly football team hopes to see Southern Utah University as a springboard Saturday to bounce back from its 8-3 home loss at Weber State University last Saturday.

The game against the 3-1 Thunderbirds will be played under the lights at 5 p.m. and is part of the Hall of Fame weekend at Cal Poly.

In addition to the game, the athletic department plans to induct four new members at a banquet Friday night.

This is the 14th year the Mustangs and the Thunderbirds have played against each other. Last year, Southern Utah defeated Cal Poly 22-17.

"The game will be challenging," head coach Larry Webb said. "I think it’s a game the team would like to win."

He believes the teams are pretty evenly matched, but playing at home should give his team an advantage. Webb is confident the Mustangs, especially his quarterback, can bounce back from the loss at Weber State.

Everyone wants to win," Webb said. "Andy Jeffson played well. When things go bad, people like to point to the quarterback."

Webb was also pleased with backup quarterback Kevin Cooper's performance this year.

Webb doesn't focus only on winning. He said his continuous innovations and daily improvements, learning from past games and setting reasonable goals.

C. Ray Gregory, head coach of Southern Utah, also looks forward to this weekend's game. He feels both teams are pretty comparable.

"It's going to be a battle," Gregory said.

The Mustangs will go into battle without a few key players. Defensive back Kiko Griffin is still out after injuring his knee in last week's game. In the first series against Montana State University, Beeman, Cornerback David Kellgess sprained his ankle and did not play against Holstra.

Webb is unsure whether Kellgess will play in this weekend's game.

COUN MONT/MASTANG DAILY

Poly will need to tackle well to even their record at 2-2 Saturday.

Five former athletes Hall of Fame bound

By Bryce Alderton

Five Cal Poly athletes will be enshrined into school history as they make their way into the Athletic Hall of Fame this weekend.

Louis Jackson football, Becky Hovey (baseball coach), Janet Balford (track and field), Marie Lunde Salter (volleyball) and John Davis (football) will be recognized Friday at the 15th Annual Hall of Fame dinner and again during halftime of Saturday's football game. The Mustangs will play host to Southern Utah University.

Athletic Director John McCutcheon, who will attend both ceremonies and be responsible for the importance of the event.

"The inductees are tough to have been recognized in this fashion," McCutcheon said. "We have many student-athletes here, and to be hinked out for the Hall of Fame really is a significant level of recognition. They had strong experiences at Cal Poly.

see HALL OF FAME, page 11

Sports Trivia

Yesterday's Answer:

Paul Henning scored an NFL record 176 points in 1960.

Congrats Adam Eng!

Today's Question:

Which Atlanta Brave hit a home run in his first World Series at bat?

Please submit sports trivia answers to: sports@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

Please respond by Friday, at 5 p.m. Your answer will be printed in the next issue of the paper.