Heroes return home to recruit potential students

By Scott Oakley

Visiting high schools and junior colleges nationwide, Cal Poly’s Hometown Heroes, a volunteer program designed to promote higher education, informs students about both Cal Poly and about the college experience.

Hometown Heroes, which held its first training session of the year last Thursday, is sponsored by the Poly Reps program and has been a group for seven years. The role of a Hometown Hero is to provide students with information on what to expect in college and, more specifically, what life is like at Cal Poly. Heroes visit both high schools and community colleges.

According to Cindee Bennett-Thompson, senior admissions associate, Hometown Heroes is the only way of letting people know about Cal Poly.

"Cal Poly draws students from all over," Bennett-Thompson said.

According to Bennett-Thompson, the program is designed to allow volunteers to visit schools when they make trips home. The majority of Cal Poly students go home over winter and spring breaks, but Hometown Heroes primarily targets the day before Thanksgiving for school visits since most schools are still in session.

Typically, the Hometown Heroes make a total of about 60 school visits each year," Bennett-Thompson said.

The Heroes are encouraged to give a favorable impression of Cal Poly.

"Present yourself in a positive manner and keep in mind you are a representative of Cal Poly," Justin Robinson, nutritional science and kinesiology sophomore and member of Poly Reps, said.

Heroes talk to students on a variety of topics, including admissions, classes, dorm life and food, clubs and other extra-curricular activities. According to Heroes who have participated in the program before, many students are willing to ask questions they would not ask admissions counselors.

"They love personal experiences," Robinson said.

Heroes get to select the schools they want to visit. After choosing their schools, they must contact the schools to set up appointments.

Natalie Jewell, a biological science senior, participated last year and plans to be a Hometown Hero again this year.

Endowment makes Poly regional center for paint technology

By Mike Munson

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Industry donations exceeding $1 million, including a $425,000 gift from the Dunn-Edwards Co., will allow the College of Science and Mathematics to establish Cal Poly’s first endowed chair.

The Arthur C. Edwards Endowed Chair for Coatings Technology and Ecology will help make Cal Poly a center for paint-coatings-technology research and development.

Managed by Foundation, the endowment provides a 5-percent annual return. The chemistry and biochemistry department will use the money to create a special-faculty position in coatings technology.

The university will look in both industry and academia to find a person who can lead Cal Poly to the position of western regional center for coatings chemistry.

"The gifts will make it possible to create a center of excellence that will benefit both Cal Poly and industry and provide special opportunities for both," said Phil Bailey, dean of the College of Science and Mathematics.

Seventeen other pledges, including gifts from Ken Edwards and Edward Edwards, sons of Arthur Edwards, who the endowment is named for, Smuland Paint Co., DuPont and Rohm and Haas completed the fund.

Gary Bowdick, director of advancement for the College of Science and Mathematics, said many of the country’s largest paint companies are based in the West, so it makes sense for them to support a program at Cal Poly.

"We are looking forward to creating 100-percent participation by the coatings companies here in the west," Ken Edwards said.

The Dunn-Edwards Co. is the largest family-owned paint company in the southwest. Bowdick said visits to the company’s factories in Los Angeles revealed an industry dominated by hi-tech equipment and processes.

"They need to have a pool of educated employees," Bowdick said.

ers," Boudich said. "Cal Poly gives them some of the best resources in students because of the hands-on training in coatings technology students receive.
However, Boudich said it is the students who ultimately benefit from the endowment because of the recognition it brings to the program.
University officials began fund-raising for the endowment in February, but Cal Poly's ties to the industry go much farther.
Cal Poly has been working with the industry since 1987, when the chemistry and biochemistry department estab­lished a polymers and coatings concentration. The curriculum includes physical and organic chemistry of polymers, surface chemistry, cookings chemistry and laboratory work. No other university west of the Mississippi River offers a similar program.

Biochemistry and chemistry professor Max Wills and Dane Jones have worked closely with the industry to provide the most up-to-date instruction. Students have benefited from the industry partnership through intern­ships and numerous jobs at paint coating companies throughout the country.
In 1998, the department established the Industrial Advisory Council, a group of coatings industry representatives who created the endowed chair as their first project.
"This endowment is the result of a 12-year cooperative effort between our department and industry — it didn’t just happen overnight," Jones said.
Both Jones and Wills said they’ve received tremendous support from the department and expect participation from other professors in the program further expands.
With the program firmly established, the university will now work to double the endowment and establish program fellowships.

No Home Games Played
No homecoming! That means quite a lot to those fellows who go down there every night and practice for two hours getting ready for the BEST game of the season —
HOMECOMING.
This is quite a blow to those 33 men on the J.C. squad, especially to those who were here for two and three years and know what homecoming is. Homecoming is one of the biggest annual affairs of the school.
It is where the old grad comes back to school for one day to remember old joys, and if he was a football man to look back with pride on the game, he played on homecoming.
Now all of this has suddenly been stopped on account of a terrible discase that has chosen this town as a stopping place for destruction.
Coach Agosti is pretty sure that all the games will be played away from home this year. Of course, that will be nice for the fellows. The only thing they will be playing on is a strange field, and on the other hand, there will be quite a bit of expense on account of playing all the games away. And too, there is the ticket situation to think of. All the tickers to the home games have been intercepted, and quite a number of letters have been sent out and these will have to be stopped. It seems that the Polio has come the wrong time according to the athletic financial viewpoint. But on top of all this, the football teams will fight all the harder. Coach Agosti gave the fellows a talk about their condition. He told them that they thought they would profit themselves by staying away from town altogether till the Polio blows over.

How can students prevent temperamental explosions?

By Erin Green

MUSTANG DAILY CONTRIBUTOR

It has been one of those days. A day full of events that led to the terrible, horrible, no good, very bad days written about in children's literature.

You've had a squabble with a family member, received a nasty phone call from a rude customer, your boss sense of employee morale has plunged to an all-new, all-low and every bad driver on the road has managed to cross your path.

You are mad and you need to get the anger out of your system.

As you drive down the street toward home to unleash your anger onto a loved one, fate crosses your path in the form of a man in a sports car. He cuts you off while he changes lanes. Before you roll down your window to yell at him, rethink how you vent printed," Ledford said. "In fact, one in that spirit was printed in a recent column, "As I stroll the confines of my office complex, I feel like a celebrity. After all, my Vent was published this morning."

But venting should not replace dealing with the anger and solving the problem. Anger will only return if the problem is not dealt with.

What is the best way to deal with the problem? That is up to you. Everyone deals with their issues in different ways. Some think it out. Some talk to friends. If you are talking it out with friends, be sure to approach the situation calmly and pragmatically; avoid whining and complaining. In Bushman's words, "Don't bitch."

Another place to bide your time while your internal temperature subsides is the ultimate distraction — the Internet. Multiple web sites are dedicated to the frustrated and anger-ridden.

"Din't bitch."
Keep brain on when asking twins questions

I was born at 8:54 in the morning on March 6, 1978. Three minutes prior to this, my brother, Christopher Weber was born. Now for all of you who have not yet taken BIO 101, this means that I am a twin. Being a twin, as any child of multiple births will tell you, is a unique experience. It has given me a paradigm on relationships that few others will ever experience.

Being a twin is not without one significant disadvantage, however. For the sake of unity of all twins in the world — or at least all those affected by Mustang Daily readership — I shall identify this disadvantage. However, in doing so, my hope is that all of you single-birth folks out there will mend your ways. You see, this disadvantage to being a twin is primarily your fault.

I am talking, of course, about what my brother and I like to call "stupid twin questions." Somewhere the not-so-phenomenal occurrence of twins together causes most people to lose any rational thought they may have once had, opening their minds and mouths to a plethora of thoughtless inquiries. I have identified the most darn it, we came from the same womb, so why not?

1. "Are you guys twins?" (This question is especially annoying when you suggest that we do not do your mom dresses you alike.) Yes we are. Please proceed with the staring, pointing and asking of more lame questions.

2. "If you hurt yourself, can he feel it?" You bet. Sure, if one twin starts to break a leg, the other twin does not get their leg broken. My brother and I are not telepathic twins. We are just not as close as that.

3. "Do you guys think the same?" This question is particularly humorous because we generally are thinking the same thing whether anyone asks it or not. You are a moron. 4. "Do you ever switch classes?" Yes, all the time. I don't forget. People

5. "Why don't you ever answer questions of other twins you might meet. You are the stupid twin."

6. "Do you have the same birthday?" No, actually, thanks to some innovative Lamaze breakthroughs, my mom was able to space us apart by six weeks.

7. "When you wake up in the morning, how do you know which one you are?" It's very tricky. I sleep with a mask on my head because I don't want to wake up the other twin.

8. "Can you do math?" Now, curiosity is a human thing. I have even caught myself staring and asking stupid questions of other twins. But regardless of this, I implore you all — unless they are wearing face paint and big red shoes — twins are not a circus act. Please spare us all the torment of the "stupid twin questions."

Letters to the editor

Get over it; we don't agree Editor,

I always find it amusing when those of liberal persuasion harp on conservatives for not thinking critically, and then criticize them for actually thinking. It makes me feel like a child on a playground, willing to do anything to make other children laugh. If I were a conservative, I would be glad to join in the ridicule. It is not about whether or not you are a conservative, it is about whether you think.

Dustin Okada's letter on Monday serves as quite an example of how to overdose sarcasm and emotion to both not be funny and not make a point.

For one, Dustin Okada seems to think that all conservatives are white rednecks just right of the Wallace in his heyday. This is not the case. For example, he assumes that "BEING A RACIST" means you think a gay person is a mentally despicable quare. That is NOT true. Just because you think something wrong does not mean you think the person who engages in it is a subhuman for some reason, or that I will treat him or her badly because of it. At the same time, I am not going to support proposals for government to subsidize that behavior.

Conservatives, and the Republican party in general, get a bad wrap because the influence of the religious right is emblazoned by the press. News flash! A lot of us think they're nuts. If we didn't, then why is Pat Buchanan holding the party? Because we love him so much! Just like the old joke where the newsmen looks for the biggest redneck to describe the tornado, the press gives the ones on the farthest right the biggest voice to try to scare everyone Democrat. Most of us who are not people who tend to condemn anybody. We may disagree with people, but isn't that what this country's about? Now, you don't need to take my word for it, but I am not a "foul-mouth." Dustin, and I don't want to tell you how to run your life, that's your business. But we all have the right to say what we think and try to get our views on that "little slice of the editorial page." If you want to read something that you completely agree with all the time, there is a lot of things that I know you might like for example, 95 percent of newspapers in this country (at least). But for the Mustang Daily. I have a few statements. This is college. We don't all agree. Deal with it.

Michael Anthony Burchett Jr.

Editor,

Being a Republican means that you associate with certain political views. This has nothing to do with which form of government you belong to. As far as I can recall, both Democrats and Republicans belong to our representative government.

Bert was correct in stating that we are members of society and have chosen to abide by its laws. This is the Social Contract. We give up our freedom to the government in order to gain benefits that we cannot obtain by ourselves.

Protection is one of the main benefits of a government. When the government fails to protect us, it has broken the contract and we must in turn protect ourselves. The second amendment gives evidence to this right.

If you feel that crime is the fault of your representatives, then you can choose to vote them out of office. However, I do not believe that Bert Davis will have any more impact in preventing John Doe from burglarizing your home than Pete Wilson did. You may choose to sit at home unprotected, relying on your representatives to protect you, but I will rely on my semi-automatic weapon to protect me. Why? Because I can.

Daren Messerbian is an industrial engineering junior who likes to shoot things.

We care for our own stuff.

In response to Mr. Okada's letter (Oct. 25), I think International Paper would do a good job managing forests if it owned them. If you examine where timber companies clear-cut and do other detrimental practices, you find it's on public land, land that is in the U.S. Forest Service land. They wouldn't do that to their own land, but when they don't own the land, why should they care? When you own something, you take better care of it, that's evident by going to any college apartment complex. Land owners treat their land well because they realize they have to make it last. Some trees take 80 years to reach harvest size. A timber company without any trees can't make any money, so why would they cut them all down?

Letters to the editor

Labs make the difference

This is in response to Mr. Hughes’ Oct. 21 letter concerning the alarming trend of people at Cal Poly taking more than four years to graduate. In order to maintain my sanity, I have been attempting to look at a catalog. How about those “non-historian” majors, who in their three to six hours of lab work a week associated with each catalog?

I did a little research and found that the 1999 catalog requires only 160 units for a history major to graduate. Yes, this can be done in four years, especially since the classes in three or four years. Has anyone more than three years to graduate? In order to maintain my sanity, I have been taking more than three years to graduate. In order to maintain my sanity, I have been saturating myself in hand, a 100- or 400-level engineering or architectural course requires a student to perform advanced mathematics, complex reasoning, hands-on work, as well as those labs that actually reinforce the Cal Poly “learning by doing” кредо. No. Barnaby, “learning by doing” doesn’t apply to reading a book or writing an essay. We all have to do that. In other words, as a freshman and sophomore, all of those units represent much more work than history units.

For one, would like to leave this fine institution with a marketable skill. Yes, history majors can teach them; once they graduate, but don’t insult the rest of us by saying we are “unlucky” because we didn’t choose your major. Besides, what business is it of his how long we take to graduate?

Ryan Connolly is a fifth-year manufacturing engineering student.

Not all majors are created equal

It is impossible to get out of Cal Poly in four years for some majors. For instance, a history major taking 18 units spends around 18 hours in class a week; while on the other hand, someone like myself who is an art and design major taking 13 units, spends about 18-25 hours in class a week. The difference between the two majors is labs. An art major cannot learn how to become a better photographer or a better graphic designer by simply listening to lectures and reading textbooks. Some people on this campus “learn by doing” while other simply sit and listen. I work 25 hours a week and spend about the same amount of time in class, equating to a 50-hour work week. Of course, I would rather be getting paid to spend 25 hours a week in class than paying Cal Poly, but I am saturating myself in what I love to do and earn a career.

A four-year degree done in three years is not worth any more than a four-year degree completed in five years. Furthermore, to some of us, it is not the degree that we are concerned about, it’s what we are learning and what we will know how to do when we graduate. Enjoy school and learn all you can. Barnaby, are you calling me lazy when we take fewer units but spend more time in class than you? I would hope not. What is the hurry?

Joey Zygaoczenko is an art and design sophomore.

Death is more expensive

I thought attending Cal Poly meant one was relatively smart and aware of life. Was I ever wrong. I read Brian Rostler’s letter regarding the death penalty (“Death penalty necessary,” Oct. 21) and couldn’t help but gag. After reading the first paragraph, I was certain I’d woken out of the air because it was so damn ridiculous to what is known about the death penalty.

First of all, it appears as though Brian is opposed to sending Krebs to jail because he does not want taxpayers to support him. Well, Brian, I have got news for you! It is actually more expensive, yes, more expensive, to prosecute a death penalty trial and send someone to death. And I am not speaking out of the air. It costs anywhere from $2 to $3 million to execute an inmate. Depending on the state, that could be as much as six times the amount it would have taken to imprison him for life. (Why is it the Republicans have not admitted this — I thought they were out to save us money?)

Unlike common belief, sending someone to death does not reduce crime. If you believe that then, you have been listening to Limbaugh and Reagan way too much. If it was true, then we would not expect community leaders in the United States and China to have no crime! Is it clear the death penalty is not a deterrent to any crimes. The United States currently ranks fourth in executions. Our country includes the states of China, Iran and Saudi Arabia. Call me crazy, but I hold the practices of other countries like China above those of us, Iran.

Pete Rose interview draws complaints, no apology

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite an outpouring of sympathy for Pete Rose, the N.C.B. correspondent who conducted a combative interview about gambling with the fallen baseball star said Monday he had nothing to apologize for.

NBC's Jim Gray said his questions during a prime-time show before Saturday's World Series game shouldn't have surprised Rose since other reporters had asked the same things in a news conference less than an hour earlier.

"I don't apologize," Gray told reporters on Monday. "I stand by it and I think it was absolutely a proper line of questioning."

The interview came moments after Rose was announced as a member of baseball's All-Century Team. He received the longest nomination of any baseball hero introduced at Atlanta's Turner Field — longer even than Atlanta Braves legend Henry Aaron, baseball's all-time home run king.

It was another indication that fans seem willing to forgive Rose, buffed for life from the spot for gambling. Rose has never admitted to gambling on baseball, and didn't again when asked by Gray on Sunday.

Rose told Gray he was surprised people were "bothering me like this" on a festive occasion.

Switchboards at N.C.B. affiliates across the country were bombarded by phone calls from people angry at Gray — two hours nonstop at WJXT in Jacksonville, where Rose collected most of his Major League record 4,256 hits for the hometown Reds.

In an e-mail to The Associated Press, one fan wrote of being enraged that Rose was "shocked" during what should have been a proud moment, and said it gave the press a bad name. "I hope N.C.B. buys a collar and leads for the building," the writer said.

New York Yankees catcher Jim Leyritz said the questioning was "barbaric," and said he had confronted Gray about it. Gray said Leyritz never spoke to him and neither did any other Yankee, to his face.

"We were pretty much all disgusted with Jim," said Yankees outfielder Darril Strawberry. "It was a night of celebration for Pete Rose. Every player who ever plays cares about Pete Rose. It was embarrassing. It didn't sit too well in this clubhouse."

"I was embarrassed and upset by the questions," Rose added.

Others leapt to Gray's defense. "I thought it was the best TV interview I've ever seen," said Murray Chas, baseball writer for The New York Times. "It was appropriate. It was not overdone. Rose put himself in position to be pressed like that."

John Dowd, the investigator whose 1989 probe of Rose led to the ban, said he tipped his hat to Gray. "I thought he had more guts than any guy I've ever seen," Dowd said.

Former baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent said Gray knew how overwhelming the evidence is against Rose. "For Pete to just stand there and look Jim Gray in the eye and deny he bet on baseball, it's obviously a challenge that any interviewer can't let go. Recognize it as aggressive, but Rose was aggressive."

Gray won a Sports Emmy in 1998 for sideline reporting after his relentless interview of Mike Tyson following the "Rite Fight" with Evander Holyfield.

He said he thought it was the proper time for Rose to address questions about why he had been banned from baseball.

"I tried very hard to be very fair to Pete last night and I think I was very fair," Gray said.

"I thought he had more guts than any guy I've ever seen," Dowd said.

of course for hundreds of miles before going down in the Atlantic off Virginia. Investigators think the plane may have lost pressure.

The last communication from Stewart's jet was over Cayenneville, Fl., said Tony Molina, an FAA spokesman in Chicago. The jet flew as high as 45,000 feet and the crew did not respond to repeated inquiries from air traffic controllers, the FAA said.

A government source said the plane should have turned left at Cayenneville on a course for Dallas. It made only a partial turn before heading in a straight line toward South Dakota.

The FAA routed air traffic around the Learjet and kept planes from flying underneath it in case it crashed. Five fighter jets from Florida and Oklahoma went after the plane. Two F-16s had to make several passes to align with the plane, which was flying steadily in the clear blue sky but was going slowly in comparison with the fighter jets.

"They were not able to see anything inside the windows because they were iced over," said Oklahoma Air National Guard Lt. Col. Bruce Butters.

The Rev. Jim Henry, retired pastor for First Baptist Church of Orlando who used to minister to the Stewart family, was one of those outside the Stewart home after the crash.

"He was a wonderful Christian who had Christ in his life and somehow in his death," Henry said. "That brought a great sense of peace to his family in a difficult and tragic time."

Stewart is survived by his wife, Tracey, and their two children, Chelsea, 14, and Aaron, 10.

Seniors middle hitter Karli DeSato was named Big West Conference Player of the Week for the second time this season. DeSato hit .587 in two matches against Utah State and Nevada. She also recorded her 400th career assisted block and 90th career solo block in the two Mustang victories.
Golfer Payne Stewart dies in plane crash

MINA, S.D. (AP) — A Learjet carrying champion golfer Payne Stewart flew a ghostly journey between Oklahoma and Colorado on Tuesday night.

The plane, carrying Stewart and his caddie, apparently lost cabin pressure and the occupants apparently panicked, before nosediving into a grassy field. All five people aboard were killed.

The chartered, twin-engine Lear 35 may have suddenly lost cabin pressure soon after taking off from Orlando, Fla., for Dallas, government officials said. Air traffic controllers couldn't raise anyone by radio.

Fighter jets were sent after the plane, but unable to help. They saw smoke, and noticed no structural damage but were unable to see inside the jet.

The pilot was lost, and the plane flew into the ground, said Rodney Brown, who lives two miles from the crash site.

Stewart, 42, was one of the most recognizable players in golf, with his traditional knickers and a trademark shaggy haircut. He won 15 tournaments, including three majors, and recorded six top-10 finishes in the world's top 20 players on the Professional Golfers' Association money list. He attended school in Dallas and had friends in the area.

Also killed were Stewart's agents, Robert Frey and Van Azdan, and the pilot, identified as Michael Hing, 45, and Stephanie Belliger, 27.

The jet was operated by Sunset Aviation Inc.

Two officials from the Federal Aviation Administration were sent to investigate the crash, along with a representative from the National Transportation Safety Board.

Planes that fly above 12,000 feet are required to have oxygen if a plane loses pressure, an official said.

Young career remains on hold

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Young plans to seek at least one more medical opinion about his concussion problems this week amid more questions about his season and possibly his career.

"He's looking for as much information as he can gain and Steve and every doctor involved is going to weigh the pros and cons, the whole thing," San Francisco 49ers coach Steve Mariucci said Monday.

"Generally, he'd love to have a lot of guys on," Tinsley, but I don't know that he's gotten that yet."

"I can't give you the exact evaluation of this week, and what he's learned so far. He's not a symptomatically driven person."

Young, 38, has missed four games since sustaining his fourth concussion in three years Sept. 27 against Arizona. The 49ers have gained little clarity on his career with the 49ers.

The two-time NFL MVP who led San Francisco to its fifth Super Bowl win in 1994, remains sidelined indefinitely due to post-concussion symptoms. Though he said he wants to play again, Mariucci said the 49ers don't expect to see him back on the field anytime soon and would have serious reservations about doing so even if he recovered from the week.

Men's soccer still winless in MPSF

After two home games this weekend, the Cal Poly men's soccer team continues to look for its first Mountain Pacific Sports Federation league win. The Mustangs tied the Air Force Academy 0-0 Friday night and lost to the University of Denver 6-0 on Sunday afternoon.

"The two losses drop Cal Poly MPSF record to 0-2-2 and its overall record to 3-8-3."

"Once it was 5-0, the game was almost over," head coach Wolfgang Gartner said.
