Baker finds happy medium in new Open House name

By Victoria Walsh

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Cal Poly President Warren Baker confirmed Wednesday that Open House weekend will officially be renamed "Open House presents Poly Royal" in 2001.

Open House chairwoman Barbi Borovini said part of the reason for the change stemmed from the historical associations and traditions of Poly Royal. The name change accompanies Cal Poly's centennial celebration. "We want the focus of the centennial celebration to be on what Cal Poly has done," Borovini said.

Since the title combines both names, it allows incoming students and alumni to have a direct connection with it. Alumni remember Poly Royal and the history surrounding it, while current and prospective students recognize Open House.

Borovini said she wanted to keep the name closer to the connection to Open House since that name relates more to incoming students, who are the focus of the weekend than alumni. Baker said the two names combine histories associated with each title.

"Poly Royal has a long history of pride and fun with the Cal Poly alumni," he said. "Open House has a recent history with incoming students coming to see the Cal Poly office." No new events have been added to Open House presents Poly Royal." Open House spends Friday and Saturday showing prospective students what Cal Poly is about through tours of the campus and a showcase of student life. Sunday is for alumni, with the Alumni Golf Tournament at Arvi Beach Golf Course.

Alumni celebrate 10 years of juice

Jamba Juice co-founder Linda Ozawa-Olds and husband Jeff Olds, left, join co-founder Joe Vergara and his wife, Julie Vergara, in the celebration of the corporation's 10th anniversary. The founders both graduated from Cal Poly and opened their first store on the corner of Foothill and Chorro streets in 1990.

By Alexis Garbello

MUSTANG DAILY NEWS EDITOR

What started 15 years ago as a local, student venture today has catapulted into a national corporation, soaring up flavors like Rasputin and Strawberries Wild for thirty health fanatics.

In 1990, four visionaries, Cal Poly students Kevin Peters, Joe Vergara, Linda Ozawa-Olds and Cuesta College student Kirk Peters, started Juice Club, a small, one-store operation that would later total more than 300 stores. "Kirk, a cyclist," Ozawa-Olds recalled on how her business was started. "After his ride, he wanted to quench his thirst. You could get a Coke at McDonald's or a freeze at Circle K, and that's about it." The group knew that smoothies were healthy as well as flavorful, but Ozawa-Olds said no one was really into the natural food industry, and Ozawa-Olds was getting her MBA. Their venture was a senior project, contrary to popular belief.

"Kevin was really the glue that held the business together," Ozawa-Olds said. In celebration of its 10th anniversary, Jamba Juice will give away free smoothies all day today.

Vergara remembers the first days of Juice Club, when the number one smoothie was Strawberries Wild. "In the early days, I would work by

"Kevin and Kirk were friends, and Kevin and I had a class together," Vergara said. "On April 7, 1990, the four of us opened our first store on the corner of Foothill and Chorro streets. Three years later, the Marsh Street store opened." Vergara remembers the first days of Juice Club, when the number one smoothie was Strawberries Wild. "In the early days, I would work by

Students taste hunger problem through fast

By Kara Knutson

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

As the sun set Wednesday night, 34 people gathered in Mission Plaza to end their day of fasting with a simple meal of bread and water.

The event, Breaking the Fast, was sponsored by Beyond Shelter as part of Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week. The group from Cal Poly's Student Community Services helps San Luis Obispo County's homeless population.

Students and community members were asked to fast from sunrise to sunset Wednesday and to donate the money they would have spent on food to the North County Food Bank. Beyond Shelter Co-Director Paulo Youse said they chose to fast because people need to understand what others are going through in order to help them.

"A fast is always good — a soul-wrenching way to put yourself in the position of those who are hungry," Youse said.

"We were surprised. We put in a proposal, and any time you propose something at a university, you don't expect funding over the last three years, shows we need to understand what others are going through in order to help them. "It will be beneficial," she said. "It will be beneficial," she said. "It will be beneficial," she said. "It will be beneficial," she said.

Rose Float Club scores funds for improvements

By Sarah Goodyear and Jennifer Beard

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITERS

The Cal Poly Rose Float Club has received a $90,200 allotment from President Warren Baker after several requests for funding.

The money will be used to hire a technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.

"We saw they needed an additional technical assistant, so we looked at various segments and allocated the funds," Towers said.
Fraternity event works miracles for children

By Karin Driesen

By Karin Driesen

More than 300 sorority members participated in Sigma Chi's annual Derby Days this week. Parting aside its recent legal troubles with the district attorney and Judicial Affairs, the fraternity raised between $1,000 and $2,000 for Children's Miracle Network.

Derby Days is a week-long competition between the six Panhellenic Council sororities in which the girls participate in games and contests while helping the Sigma Chi fraternity raise money for children's health programs.

Children's Miracle Network is comprised of 160 hospitals and health facilities throughout the United States and Canada. The hospitals treat all children regardless of their families' income or ability to pay. All money raised this week goes directly to the network, said Sigma Chi member and recreation administration senior Lucas Hansen.

The theme for the week was "Derby Days at the Movies." Events started Monday with "King Pin" disco-style bowling at McPhee's Games Area. Tuesday was "The Cowboy Way" pool tournament at Mustang Tavern, and Wednesday was a photo scavenger hunt throughout the town complete with camouflage disguises. On Thursday there was a volleyball tournament, and the championship game follows today.

The week ends tonight with a "Night at the Races" fashion contest. Each sorority has five coaches who must be incorporated into the song and dance. After the contest, the team with the most points from throughout the week is declared the winner.

The events are not open to the public and are primarily a way for the participants to have fun while raising money for the hospitals.

The contributions to the network are raised through a $50 participation fee that each sorority pays and a $20 entry fee from each woman. There is also a contest among the sororities to fill the gallon water bottles with money.

Additionally, Sigma Chi raises money with local businesses' advertisements in a commemorative magazine previewing the week. All participants receive the magazine, which includes an overview and photos of all the events, as well as a glass and a hat.

Hansen predicted that earnings from the week's events will double those of last year.

"Participation this year is overwhelming. Girls are really wanting to support the Children's Miracle Network."

Sigma Chi member Stephanie Hansen said.

"It was really a trial and error. We like to think of myself as an artistic chef," Vergara said.

"It was hard but every time he experienced hunger pains, he was reminded of who he was helping."

"Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Next, Food Bank Coalition Board member Michael Passarella explained how the North County Food Bank operates. He said that every dollar equals 15 to 16 pounds of food. Participants of Breaking the Fast donated enough money for 4,652 pounds of food to be distributed.

"At that time so many competitors were popping up all around us, like John Conner and Juice Gym. Everyone was making a right turn while we were making a left," Ozawa Olds said. "We didn't want to get lost. We took all the best products and offered more than our competitors."

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Jamba Juice added the name Juice Club to confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It was really a trial-and-error process. I think of myself as an artistic chef," Vergara said.

"It was hard but every time he experienced hunger pains, he was reminded of who he was helping."

"Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Jamba Juice added the name Juice Club to confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in At ascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.

Identifying with the starving poor is meaningless unless we experience it with them," she said.

Ozawa Olds added that the name Juice Club was confusing to some customers. They asked if they needed a membership or if the company sold juice by the bulk.

"It drains you of energy," he said.

Today, with each store growing an upwards of $1 million, Jamba Juice has 305 stores in 15 states, including Hawaii. This month, Jamba Juice is opening its newest California stores in Bakersfield, Simi Valley and Mira Mesa. In June, it will open a store in Atascadero.
Discover your taste buds at local wineries

Swirl, sniff, taste

By Monica McHugh
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

With almost 100 tasting rooms within Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties, wine tasting can be one of the best ways to keep up with the Central Coast's booming wine industry.

"A great thing about tasting rooms in this area is the down-to-earth atmosphere," said Jennifer Glossner, marketing director for the Paso Robles Vintners and Growers Association.

Paso Robles, known for its Cabernets and Zinfandels, currently has 40 wineries with tasting rooms. While about half of these places offer free tastings, others charge a nominal fee which is refunded with a purchase of wine or a glass to take home, Glossner said.

On average, visitors are given five wine samples of about 1 ounce each. "They'll be poured in the order that makes sense to your palate," Glossner said. "They will start with white wines, move on to reds, and finish with sweet dessert wines."

Glossner recommends that novice wine tasters visit wineries offering a diverse array of varietals. "There is no right or wrong in taste. Let your taste buds be the guide to what you like," she said. "This means that no matter how many awards a wine may have won or how great the person behind the bar is claiming it to be, don't buy it if you don't like it. Spit buckets are on all bars where tasters can discard wine. Don't be afraid to pour or spit wine into these buckets."

In Paso Robles off Orcutt Road there are many wineries and tasting rooms to visit. The cool weather of San Luis Obispo is ideal for Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. Wine writer Kathy Marx Hardesty recommends tasting Chardonnay from every winery to taste their similarities and differences. So many factors go into making wine that no two are ever the same.

Jim Hensley, tasting room consultant at Fess Parker Winery, said, "Winemaking is more of an art than a science. Visiting tasting rooms gives people a chance to see what winemakers' styles are." Hardesty also recommends seeking out little artisan-type wineries. Wine from many small wineries cannot be found in stores, so visiting their tasting rooms might be the only place to try their wines.

Hunt Cellars, for example, on Highway 46 West in Paso Robles, is a new and small winery that makes all of its wines in the tasting room.

For those wishing to travel south, Santa Barbara County's weather is conducive to Rhone varietals and has 32 tasting rooms open to the public. The Foxen Canyon Wine Trail and Santa Ynez Valley Wine Trail offer many beautiful wineries and delicious wines.

Wine shops are another way to taste local wines. Visitors can taste up to 15 wines at Los Olivos Wine & Spirits Emporium for five dollars. "We represent a lot of small prominent local wineries that don't have a tasting room," said Bob Sinn, proprietor of the Emporium.

The Wine Guy on Osos Street in San Luis Obispo is another place to check out. While wine shops are usually open seven days a week, many tasting rooms are open only on the weekends. Some even require a call to let them know you're coming.

Most wineries sell an array of wine paraphernalia and merchandise. Some also serve lunch, but bringing a picnic is a great idea. There is nothing better than to purchase a bottle of wine and enjoy the incredible ambiance wineries offer over lunch.

Glossner wants to remind students that wineries will not serve alcohol to people under 21.
Get the message across

Americans will have another chance to voice their outrage at high gasoline prices during this weekend's "Gas Out." If everyone participates, it will make a difference.

According to the U.S. Department of Energy's Energy Information Administration, the statewide average for regular gas was $1.71 per gallon last week, and premium was at $1.97. In the past month, prices have reached nearly $2 in many locations, including San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties. The state average now nearly 50 cents between February and March.

How long can people sit comfortably while prices continue to rise? A gas boycott is the perfect way to let the people in charge know that we are sick and tired of being robbed. The Gas Out may not be the perfect solution to the problem, but at least it's something. We cannot just sit around and let this continue.

Last year this time we faced the same problem, and many people participated in a boycott on April 30. The week before, regular gas was about $1.36. A month later, prices dropped to $1.37. It certainly can't hurt to try it again, and having it for three days this time instead of one might have a greater impact.

Many people agree that the reason we have such high prices is because Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries has cut down on production. OPEC, in its Web site, does not refute this, but simply notes Americans for complaining about the high prices.

An example of its view is published on its site: "When gasoline prices go up, OPEC often gets e-mails from some consuming countries, especially the USA, complaining about high gas prices—which is ironic because the USA has the cheapest gasoline in the industrialized world!"

So what? Even if Americans do pay less than others, that doesn't mean it's right for us or anyone else to pay the prices we have now. OPEC's obviously arrogant attitude is an indicator of what we're up against and should not be ignored.

Another factor to consider is the taxes we pay on our gasoline. There is an unnecessary amount of taxes on this product, and cutting them would help consumers a lot. Recently protesters demonstrated in Sacramento to have certain taxes repealed. If that were to happen, it would cut down the prices to a more reasonable level.

The Gas Out would not only send a message to officials in oil companies and OPEC, but it would also encourage politicians to act. Obviously it isn't feasible for certain people to stop buying gas on the three designated days. Some businesses require daily purchase of gas to function properly. That doesn't matter for the rest of us, though. There are plenty of people left who can manage not buying gas on those days.

Most of us know that e-mail and the Internet are powerful tools. They have been used extensively to spread the word about the Gas Out. All it takes is for every person who receives an e-mail to tell a friend and then resolutely decide to boycott. It won't work if people continue to go race down to the gas station to fill their tank so that you won't have to buy gas the next day. Doesn't that defeat the purpose?

Just over a year ago the United States inflation-adjusted average gas price was the lowest in America's history. But as the saying goes, all good things must come to an end. Currently the Energy Information Administration reports that we're paying around $1.27 at the pumps or $1.50 if you're lucky enough not to live in California.

Last year we were complaining when the national average was $1.14. Things aren't that bad—think of the 1970s when the gas wars were lining people up at the pumps and sending others off to find alternate transportation.

Pressure from the United States to increase output to 2.5 million barrels a day has gotten OPEC to agree to increase its output to 1.7 million, but according to Time magazine, prices will still remain 2.5 times higher than last year.

U.S. Energy Secretary Bill Richardson told the Los Angeles Times that a decline in fuel prices will start when these extra shipments from OPEC arrive in the United States in the next four to six weeks.

This may relieve some of the stress we all feel from the trip to the gas station, but prices will never be what they were a year and a half ago. From now on we can either accept the price changes or fight back. But these short "Gas Outs" won't get it done.

It would take a mass boycott to send the message that we won't stand for these high prices. In order to do make this happen, everyone has to make a change in his or her life and find alternate fuel supplies or means of transportation.

Those who need to stay out on the road can buy gas from merchants who sell domestic fuel. Take the bus, pedal a bike or walk. We are so fortunate to live in a small area where you can walk just about anywhere. More importantly, students here ride the bus for free.

Get away from the computer and approach people in person to help make a difference.

Jennifer Beard is a journalism senior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

Opinion

The issue: Great American Gas Out

A boycott will not work

I believe it was about this time last year that my e-mail account was overloaded with pleas for me to get back at the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and rubbish its gas prices.

To my disgust, only a year later, I find myself carrying more of these "Gas Out" e-mails into my recycle bin. If my friend's e-mail was the first thing you're going to make sure to do the day before? That's right, you're going to race down to the gas station to fill your tank so that you won't have to buy gas the next day. Doesn't that defeat the purpose?

Just over a year ago the United States inflation-adjusted average gas price was the lowest in America's history. But as the saying goes, all good things must come to an end. Currently the Energy Information Administration reports that we're paying around $1.27 at the pumps or $1.50 if you're lucky enough not to live in California.

Last year we were complaining when the national average was $1.14. Things aren't that bad—think of the 1970s when the gas wars were lining people up at the pumps and sending others off to find alternate transportation.

Pressure from the United States to increase output to 2.5 million barrels a day has gotten OPEC to agree to increase its output to 1.7 million, but according to Time magazine, prices will still remain 2.5 times higher than last year.

U.S. Energy Secretary Bill Richardson told the Los Angeles Times that a decline in fuel prices will start when these extra shipments from OPEC arrive in the United States in the next four to six weeks.

This may relieve some of the stress we all feel from the trip to the gas station, but prices will never be what they were a year and a half ago. From now on we can either accept the price changes or fight back. But these short "Gas Outs" won't get it done.

It would take a mass boycott to send the message that we won't stand for these high prices. In order to do make this happen, everyone has to make a change in his or her life and find alternate fuel supplies or means of transportation.

Those who need to stay out on the road can buy gas from merchants who sell domestic fuel. Take the bus, pedal a bike or walk. We are so fortunate to live in a small area where you can walk just about anywhere. More importantly, students here ride the bus for free.

Get away from the computer and approach people in person to help make a difference.
You touch their faces when you get a chance, smoothing out ruffled collars. Sometimes they get a good-night kiss. Slowly they lose the shine in their eyes, and their bald, frail backs of their younger days. They are passed off to caretakers without a second thought, and eventually they find a new room for new generations.

Your smile grandparenta "Mommy. But much more importantly, your mone. Those dead pres­ ids you made for her and turned deserve a second look once in awhile, because they helped create a country from which you don't need to escape in a car. How often do you seriously consider the people who ended up on your bills? They must be proud born special Americans to earn a timeless honor for the children. They are passed off to caretakers, and their honored places in history the American people know well."

I wonder how well the American people really know the full history of the individuals who make up this nation. I think Americans rather think of the "founding fathers" and other greats worthy of historical study as some­ how inscrupulous, perfect patriots who are drunk and breathed American democracy while performing quotable acts of civic duty. This is far too simplistic.

For example, let's take Jefferson on the $2 bill. You probably know about Sally Hemings, but what may be even more an­ American than adultery is Tom's position on slavery in general. He realized America had a crisis with slavery and his solution included snatching slave children from their homes and sending them back to Africa. By the way, Jefferson thought whites were biologically superior, as proven by the beautiful range of color visible in an angry Caucasian cheek. Hamilton, on the $10 bill, had his own lair affair. However, he came right out and admit­ ted to his lewd behavior when he was caught because he didn't want to destroy his public image. And before the Revolutionary War was a cold­ hearted, he tried to get Washington to declare war on King of America (so much for democracy). Andrew Jackson, on the $20 bill, created the Trail of Tears and led a vicious and racist attack on the Native American population that ensured their eventual demise decades later. Incidentally, he also cancelled the Bank of the United States, predecessor to today's Treasury, which prints his picture. Grant, on the $50 bill, led the Union Armed Forces. Then he was elected as president, where he served a forgettable and scandal-filled term, proving that the best generals are not necessarily the best presidents.

I suppose it's logical to assume that only the now part of history get passed down through school and story. After all, who wants to tell a fourth-grader that their third president slept with one of his slaves and had an illegitimate child? How about explaining our current presi­ dent's oral ovation in the Oval Office? It's more humble and realistic history would allow us to understand our country's traits and their roots, and perhaps start to fix them.

Ethan Pratt is a mechanical engineering junior.
Most of us have, at one time or another, oohed and awed at the thought of going scuba diving. We see ads or commercials and immediate excitement flows through us. How many times, however, does this initial excitement only last as long as you're looking at the ad? A local scuba shop, SLO Ocean Currents, has keyed into the idea that most people would love to scuba, they simply need a little extra enthusiasm to get off the couch and into the water.

Anthony, the owner of SLO Ocean Currents, has expanded his scuba shop to include more than the already-exciting standard scuba lessons. For the more adventurous water buff, courses are offered in free diving and spear fishing. Typically, most of us are scared away from the scuba experience by the initial cost of buying scuba equipment. SLO Ocean Currents has the solution to get into the water quickly. Rental packages are available for every piece of equipment you will need for your scuba adventure.

Another way to heighten your scuba experience is to get a group of your friends and sign up for a class under a group rate. This is a fabulous way to make your underwater ocean fun as memorable as it can be. Consider it: you're surrounded by your friends or club members, colorful fish and exotic ocean life greet you at every turn. And if you are looking for more of an adrenaline fulfillment, the opportunity to spearfish awaits you. Whether you are the type to go for the hand thrown spear, or a mechanically propelled harpoon group outings and classes can act as a healthy outlet for your adventure needs.

Regardless of your experience level, SLO Ocean Currents offers a wide range of courses and outing opportunities. Even experienced divers can take advantage of instructor training courses. Due to the continually growing interest in diving, new instructors are in demand. So get outside and peak your adventure experience, visit SLO Ocean Currents today.
INVENTION
continued from page 8
was high school running back Brannon Reece, who attends the Texas School for the Deaf. Reece received much media attention when he broke the national record for most yards gained by a hearing-impaired player.
"The idea came from my opportunity in high school and junior college," said Frith, who played football during that time and wanted to see other people with that opportunity." Frith's experience as a football player helped him understand how the device should be designed for use on the field. The concept required a concept that would help disabled people accomplish tasks in which they normally need assistance, and could be an electronic, electrical, biomedical or electro-optics device. Frith was encouraged to enter the contest by David Braun, his senior project adviser. Frith is currently working on another device for his senior project.

The contest, which was open to residents from Southern counties up to San Luis Obispo County, was held at California State University, Long Beach and included students from Long Beach, the University of Southern California and Cal Poly. Prizes were the only contest from San Luis Obispo. The first place award earned him $1,000 and recognition at an IEEE banquet a few weeks after the contest. The proposal has not yet been made into a marketable device, but that could happen soon, Frith said. "I was supposed to graduate this quarter, but the project that I'll be here until the summer, so I may develop it in the summer," he said.

Developing the device could come easy to Frith, who outside of school works at Vanguard Air Force Base where he assembles and tests small commercial jet engines for communication research.

WIN COOL STUFF!

Taste it in KOR! 94.9 FM, for your chance to win cool Ant Di fancio stuff like CDs, hats, and T-shirts. Listen daily, and you'll be entered into a drawing to win a GRAND PRIZE which includes Ant's entire CD catalog, a signed copy of her recent album To The Teeth, and a pair of tickets to Ant Di fancio in concert at the Rec Center on Thursday, April 20th.

Y? Magazine is Back On Air Sigma Chi Hazing in depth, The Rape Flyer Story and Much More This Weekend!!

CPTV
Friday at 9pm
Saturday @ 9:30 am and 3:30 pm
Sunday @ 8:30 am
On Channel 6

Get the Cal Poly news this quarter on Y? Magazine

SPORTS

TENNIS
continued from page 8
Riverside does join, Cal Poly may face Riverside in a conference match as early as next year. Last week's win against Riverside was called early because of rain, but the Mustangs had ended Riverside 6-0 before the match was stopped.

The Mustangs are currently 11-1 on the season, and expect to add this match to the win column. Cal Poly's No. 1 singles match, Brett McIvor, was listed Thursday as one of the top 50 players in the division. The UC Riverside match is slated for Sunday 2:30 p.m. at the Santa Maria Country Club. The Mustangs will then have nearly a week before their next match. The Mustangs will play at home against Pacific April 15 at 1 p.m.

BASEBALL
continued from page 8
in to be good shape heading into the weekend. Jesse Gallup had a strong performance against Fresno State, helping to get back on track after struggling over the past few weeks. Aces Joe Smith and Tyler Fitch have delivered impressive starts as well, both securing wins over Pacific last weekend.

A factor in the weekend's outcome may be the series' location, as the thin air and altitude in Reno contributes to run totals that often resemble football scores. The last time Cal Poly defeated Nevada, on April 4, 1997, the teams combined for 13 home runs, a rare-all time in NCAA history. The final score of the game was 28-16. Since then, the Wolfpack has won 10 straight from the Mustangs.

Oakland was concerned about the

SPORTS

Friday, April 7, 2000 7
A different kind of signal from the quarterback

Engineering senior wins award for hearing aid

By Karin Driesen

One Cal Poly student's plan for a hearing device may make it easier for deaf or hearing-impaired football players to participate in the game.

Electrical engineering senior Fred Frith's proposal, a device that would allow hearing impaired players to receive signals from the quarterback, won first place in the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) Biotech contest for the Southern California region in February.

The device, known as P.U.N.T. (Put Us In Touch), is a five-button keyboard that sends digital vibrating codes between quarterbacks and players and allows impaired players to understand the quarterback's call when certain modules vibrate.

Frith first thought of the idea late fall quarter. He had seen hearing-impaired football players on television, and started thinking about their challenges. One player who stood out

see INVENTION, page 7

Mustangs take winning ways to Reno

Team rides hot streak to Nevada

By Chris Arns

The Cal Poly baseball team will travel to the collegiate version of Coors Field this weekend when it faces the University of Nevada, Reno, for a three-game series.

Winners of five of their last six games, the Mustangs (15-16, 6-6 in Big West play) are coming off their biggest win of the season, a 4-0 victory last Tuesday over 19th-ranked Fresno State. The team also won two of three from a tough Pacific team last weekend.

Assistant coach Mike Oaklad commented on the energy team members will be carrying with them when they arrive in Reno.

"We've played really well the last 13 games," he said. "As far as momentum goes, we're about as high up as we're going to get on the momentum scale."

The team's pitching staff looks

see BASEBALL, page 7

Senior outfielder Kyle Albright pulls the trigger on a knee-high pitch earlier this season.

Tennis faces UC Riverside Sunday

By Katherine Hays

The men's tennis team will face UC Riverside on Sunday in a non-conference match that is expected to be more of a challenge for Riverside than for the Mustangs.

Head coach Chris Eppright said he's hoping for a "good match," but isn't concerned about the Mustangs' chances for victory.

"We're stronger than they are," Eppright said. "This is an opportunity for us to play some of our guys who don't get that much playing time overall."

For UC Riverside, however, this match may well be used as a benchmark

see TENNIS, page 7

Sports Trivia

Yesterdays Answer:

Tom Glavine was the Atlanta pitcher that led the major leagues in wins from 1991 to 1995.

Congrats Kristen Farlow!

Today's Question:

Which former Baltimore Oriole is major league baseball's career RBI leader among switch-hitters?

Please submit sports trivia answer to: sports@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

Briefs

Giants blow lead, game on late homer

Mike Piazza (AP) -- On the game's final pitch, the smallest crowd in Florida Marlins history was rewarded for its loyalty.

Off Floyd's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning capped a comeback from a four-run deficit and Florida beat the San Francisco Giants 5-4 Thursday before a record-low turnout of 7,741.

"We can't say it's a win, but it's nice," he said. "We don't get to watch the games on TV, but we're here to support our team."

Today's Question:

Which former Baltimore Oriole is major league baseball's career RBI leader among switch-hitters?

Please submit sports trivia answer to: sports@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

Schedule

TODAY

• Men's tennis vs. UC Riverside• Cal Poly vs. Nevada• at Cal Poly

SATURDAY

• Women's water polo vs. Chico State• at Rec Center pool• Softball vs. CSU Northridge• at Cal Poly• Baseball vs. Nevada• Track & Field vs. CSU Northridge and Fresno State

STANDINGS

• Men's tennis
• Baseball vs. Nevada

Please submit sports trivia answer to: sports@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu

Baseball vs. Nevada

• at Nevada

• at Northridge