By Larissa Van Beurden

A week after the bodies of Kristina Hogan and her boyfriend, William Weilandt, were found, sheriff's investigators were still trying to piece together the events leading up to their deaths.

Weilandt's death has been confirmed as a suicide by the Los Altos Sheriff's Department. He left a suicide note at his Los Altos home, but authorities wouldn't release the information on what the note said.

Los Altos Detective Dennis Loucks said although the death is a confirmed suicide, the exact cause of death won't be known until toxicological results are in.

"We expect the report to take a couple of weeks. In addition, Loucks said drugs may also have been a factor in Weilandt's death. "We suspect medications were taken, in addition to the wounds he sustained," Loucks said.

"But, we won't know the exact cause of his death until toxicology reports are ready," Weilandt's landlord discovered his body last Wednesday. She was showing the apartment to prospective tenants, because Weilandt had given notice that he was moving.

"He was just moving to a new place," Loucks said.

Hogan broke up with Weilandt over the phone, just hours before her death. Weilandt then drove to San Luis Obispo so he and Hogan could talk. They wanted to leave things on a good note, so they drove to Montaña de Oro to watch the sun set. Weilandt's body was found by a hiker a few hours later.

Weilandt's roommate called the Sheriff's Department after Hogan didn't show up for her 9:30 a.m. class. After the body was identified, detectives immediately started looking for Weilandt.

After his landlord found his body, sheriff's investigator's started piecing together the events leading up to the deaths.

Family and friends of both Hogan and Weilandt are mourning by the deaths. They say neither seemed suicidal, and both were happy.

Hogan's roommate, Annie Richardson said that Weilandt seemed controlling and anti-social. She said Hogan was happy and making plans for the rest of her life.

A memorial service is planned for Hogan Thursday at 2 p.m. in Chumash Auditorium. The service is open to everyone.

By Matt Smart

Paul Zingg displays his book on baseball, "Harry Hooper," which was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

PROWST Paul Zingg displays his book on baseball, "Harry Hooper," which was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

Zingg remembers St. Andrews as "a humble man who is confident and who has a strong resemblance to Phi Jackson, for whom Zingg has great respect. In many ways Zingg follows Jackson's style of unobtrusive strength and silent, watchful awareness. Education is both his vocation and his hobby. Golf, however, provides color to his life. His life is grounded in a belief in God. And all the parts work together."

"What I do in my free time compliments what I do in my job." Zingg said. "I like to write about golf-related education - issues that I think helped contribute to the university, thought leaders on the topic."

"I have been at a place where you can play right where the greats played. You can't do that in baseball. The course is sort of whimsical. It's just not like these manicured courses in the United States where everything is so well defined. At St. Andrews, the heathers and hollands and bunkers and gorse and Scottish broom, they just appear in the most surprising places."

These experiences helped Zingg write a book on golf. He finished this book in early 1999. It is titled, "A Good Round: A Journey through the Landscapes and Memory of Golf."

Zingg's interest does not end with golf. He has also acted as a consultant to several different venues on sports history, including Ken Burns' television documentary series, "Baseball."

Zingg was raised in northern New Jersey in a lower-middle class home in Essex County, just across the Hudson River from New York. His father died when he was young, and when he graduated from high school, Zingg left New Jersey to pursue schooling in the South.

Zingg has now settled in California, but his first love remains with him. "The Giants. I have been a Giants fan all of my life, since my father took me to the Polo Grounds in New York in 1952 at the age of 5. And I love"

see DIVERSITY, page 6

By Candice Conti

Cal Poly is looking desirable to minority applicants.

For extended weather forecast, see Daily Dress, 2

Wednesday, January 17, 2001

Applicant pool more diversified

By Candice Conti

Cal Poly Daily Staff Writer

The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

"The university has made significant efforts to recruit students especially from historically disadvantaged backgrounds," Maraviglia said.

KRSITINA HOGAN: Poly student.

Being Paul Zingg

By Matt Smart

Cal Poly Mustang Daily Staff Writer

Wrestling woes: Mustangs fall to Oklahoma and Fresno State, 8

Herpes: What you should know about this disease, 3

High: 61° / Low: 32°

For extended weather forecast, see Daily Dress, 2

Weilandt's death confirmed suicide

By Larissa Van Beurden

A week after the bodies of Kristina Hogan and her boyfriend, William Weilandt, were found, sheriff's investigators were still trying to piece together the events leading up to their deaths.

Weilandt's death has been confirmed as a suicide by the Los Altos Sheriff's Department. He left a suicide note at his Los Altos home, but authorities wouldn't release the information on what the note said.

Los Altos Detective Dennis Loucks said although the death is a confirmed suicide, the exact cause of death won't be known until toxicological results are in.

"We expect the report to take a couple of weeks. In addition, Loucks said drugs may also have been a factor in Weilandt's death. "We suspect medications were taken, in addition to the wounds he sustained," Loucks said.

"But, we won't know the exact cause of his death until toxicology reports are ready," Weilandt's landlord discovered his body last Wednesday. She was showing the apartment to prospective tenants, because Weilandt had given notice that he was moving.

"He was just moving to a new place," Loucks said.

Hogan broke up with Weilandt over the phone, just hours before her death. Weilandt then drove to San Luis Obispo so he and Hogan could talk. They wanted to leave things on a good note, so they drove to Montaña de Oro to watch the sun set. Weilandt's body was found by a hiker a few hours later.

Weilandt's roommate called the Sheriff's Department after Hogan didn't show up for her 9:30 a.m. class. After the body was identified, detectives immediately started looking for Weilandt.

After his landlord found his body, sheriff's investigators started piecing together the events leading up to the deaths.

Family and friends of both Hogan and Weilandt are mourning by the deaths. They say neither seemed suicidal, and both were happy.

Hogan's roommate, Annie Richardson said that Weilandt seemed controlling and anti-social. She said Hogan was happy and making plans for the rest of her life.

A memorial service is planned for Hogan Thursday at 2 p.m. in Chumash Auditorium. The service is open to everyone.
SEMESTER continued from page 1

three-unit semester," Corn said. He explained that a three-unit semester translates to 4.5 quarter units.

"There are obvious advantages to the semester system in the sense that students only have to register twice, and it is more cost effective in a sense of less administrative cost if we are doing things twice instead of three times," Baker said. "Many faculty have indicated that the semester calendar gives them the opportunity to get to know their students a little bit better."

Baker explained, however, that most of the faculty are divided on preferences to each system.

"The previous institution that I taught at was on the semester system, so I got used to that; however, the nature of education at Cal Poly, 'learn by doing,' works well with the quarter system," he said.

Colleen Colborn, a mathematics junior, believes that, for his major, the quarter system is more beneficial. "With the quarter system, you get a lot more different projects, and therefore more experience," he said.

Before coming to Cal Poly in 1991 as the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Zingg worked at St. Mary's College of California. There he served as dean of the School of Liberal Arts. From 1984 to 1986 he served as assistant to the president at the University of Pennsylvania.

For the past 20 years, Zingg has been in education. In that time, he has seen a change in the focus of the student.

"Right now there is nothing that is as compelling of an interest on campus and across the country as the Vietnam War and the civil rights movement in the '60s and early '70s," Zingg said. "But beneath the surface, there are more students here and across the country who are involved in various forms of service - service learning, community service, volunteerism - things of this nature. So, these are not particularly visible or dramatic forms of activism, but quite frankly, they might actually be more heartfelt, more profound, more lasting."

Zingg feels that the lives of people have "meaning (and are) something in a larger framework that is totally incomprehensible. But I think there is a meaning and purpose in all of our lives, and I think that there is some power greater than we are that has some effect in all that."

He understands the importance of religious groups on campus and appreciates the separation of church and state. "I certainly think it's a good and appropriate aspect of institutional communities to have strong and vibrant religious organizations, clubs and activities, and I see no contradiction of those organizations and their activities with the purposes of the university," he said, "for they provide support to students, faculty, and staff, and they are committed to good work and the search for values. These are welcome aspects of community life. They need to be here. I am glad that they are."

SEMINAR continued from page 1

Ralphs Grocery Company. All Rights Reserved. We reserve the right to limit or refuse sales to commercial dealers or wholesale customers. Savings relate to previous week's Ralphs price or last date prior to initial price reduction exclusive of advertised or promotional items.
By Michelle Hatfield

It's an infection that affects one in five adults in the United States. Only one-third of those people are aware that they have the virus. Anyone who is sexually active can catch this virus, and once it is introduced, it lives in the body for a lifetime.

This common and dangerous virus is genital herpes. There are two types of herpes: herpes simplex type 1 (HSV-1) and herpes simplex type 2 (HSV-2). Type 1 is a common and usually mild infection. It can cause cold sores or fever blisters on the mouth or face, what is called oral herpes; herpes simplex type 1 is genital herpes. There are two types of oral herpes, one-third of those people are aware they have the virus. Anyone who is sexually active can catch this virus.

People don’t really like having breakouts, because they’re frequent and they’re painful." Brauninger said that the first breakout of the blisters is the worst, as far as pain and the number of blisters. After that, patients receive antiviral medication that reduces the duration of symptoms and suppresses breakouts.

Herpes is spread through skin to skin contact and a person can pass it even if they don’t have a breakout at the time.

"Seventy-five percent of the people who have herpes will spread it when they don’t have any lesions," Brauninger said. There is also no cure for herpes; herpes just by looking," she said. Brauninger said that the common and dangerous virus is genital herpes. There are two types of herpes: herpes simplex type 1 (HSV-1) and herpes simplex type 2 (HSV-2). Type 1 is a common and usually mild infection. It can cause cold sores or fever blisters on the mouth or face, what is called oral herpes; herpes simplex type 1 is genital herpes. There are two types of oral herpes, one-third of those people are aware they have the virus. Anyone who is sexually active can catch this virus.

"It depends on a person’s body and their genetics," she said. "The breakouts can come once a month, or more, depending on the person." People who have genital herpes risk spreading it to sexual partners if they don’t use condoms properly.

"If it’s her first breakout, she’s not receiving any antibodies, so the baby can get herpes," she said. "The woman has antibodies with her second and third breakouts and they protect the baby." Brauninger said that the only prevention possible right now is using condoms properly and being aware that oral sex can spread the virus, too.

There are 45 million cases of herpes; herpes just by looking," she said. Brauninger said that the common and dangerous virus is genital herpes. There are two types of herpes: herpes simplex type 1 (HSV-1) and herpes simplex type 2 (HSV-2). Type 1 is a common and usually mild infection. It can cause cold sores or fever blisters on the mouth or face, what is called oral herpes; herpes simplex type 1 is genital herpes. There are two types of oral herpes, one-third of those people are aware they have the virus. Anyone who is sexually active can catch this virus.

"If someone noticed blisters around their mouth or genital areas, Brauninger said they should go to the Health Center for an exam.

"We can usually tell if someone has herpes just by looking," she said. The person is then prescribed antibiotics, such as Acyclovir, to take three times a day for 10 days after their first occurrence, Brauninger said. For recurrences, antibiotics are prescribed for three times a day for five days.

"A cyclovir is the generic version that Brauninger prescribes and costs 44 cents a capsule or $1.32 a day to take. Students can get their prescriptions at the Health Center pharmacy.

For more information, visit the Health Center or the American Social Health Association online at www.asashd.org.

There is no cure for herpes and, as far as pain and the number of blisters. After that, patients receive antiviral medication that reduces the duration of symptoms and suppresses breakouts.

"It depends on a person’s body and their genetics," she said. "The breakouts can come once a month, or more, depending on the person." People who have genital herpes risk spreading it to sexual partners if they don’t use condoms properly.

"If it’s her first breakout, she’s not receiving any antibodies, so the baby can get herpes," she said. "The woman has antibodies with her second and third breakouts and they protect the baby." Brauninger said that the only prevention possible right now is using condoms properly and being aware that oral sex can spread the virus, too.

There are 45 million cases of herpes; herpes just by looking," she said. Brauninger said that the common and dangerous virus is genital herpes. There are two types of herpes: herpes simplex type 1 (HSV-1) and herpes simplex type 2 (HSV-2). Type 1 is a common and usually mild infection. It can cause cold sores or fever blisters on the mouth or face, what is called oral herpes; herpes simplex type 1 is genital herpes. There are two types of oral herpes, one-third of those people are aware they have the virus. Anyone who is sexually active can catch this virus.

"If someone noticed blisters around their mouth or genital areas, Brauninger said they should go to the Health Center for an exam.

"We can usually tell if someone has herpes just by looking," she said. The person is then prescribed antibiotics, such as Acyclovir, to take three times a day for 10 days after their first occurrence, Brauninger said. For recurrences, antibiotics are prescribed for three times a day for five days.

"A cyclovir is the generic version that Brauninger prescribes and costs 44 cents a capsule or $1.32 a day to take. Students can get their prescriptions at the Health Center pharmacy.

For more information, visit the Health Center or the American Social Health Association online at www.asashd.org.
Parties' beliefs are inherently contradictionary

A as a natural skeptic, I find it invariable to question generally accepted ideas. It is through this principle, and a lack of commitment to political conservatism, that I bring up the following contradiction.

I have recently stumbled upon a peculiar inconsistency within my beloved Republican Party, and among the Democrats as well. This contradiction centers around the value of life. Conservatives seem to fight for the sacred value of life in terms of the innocent unborn, but this stance breaks down when considering the punishment of criminals.

I find this double standard troubling, for a pro-death penalty stance undermines the sacred value of life. The same inconsistency may be found within the Democratic Party, for they fight for a criminal's right to life, but not for that of an unborn child.

My argument against abortion stems from the idea of "potential life." What if that child was the next great world leader or political powerhouse or scientific pioneer? How will our world suffer by prematurely ending their life?

In terms of convicted criminals, I perceive them as possessing this same potential. If a criminal is able to turn his life around and become a positive influence on others, expressing how wrong murder and personal experience, he could have more impact than any non-convicted person.

For me, it is not more likely to happen to a former drug addict than the hopelessness of drugs than someone who has never actually experienced the drugs. I believe that when we judge a person who has overcome the boundaries of forgiveness and no longer deserves to live in terms of political ideology, conservatives also tend to be a more religious body. They are usually the ones fighting for prisons in a school and more spiritually conscious populace. From a Christian perspective, sins are not scaled in terms of severity, nor ranked on a continuum of forgiveness. So how can we say that a person is not worth death? Is there any other time when the ones who are committed to instituting the law of Christ are?”

Jennifer Rosner is a political science senior.

Opinion

Bush won't interfere globally

Foreign policy did not play a major role in the last presidential election. Yet, as George W. Bush prepares to move into the "global office," Bill Clinton scramble to squeeze out the last details of his strained legacy, the main question is how Bush will deal with the Israeli-Palestinian peace talks. In no doubt Bush is very articulate when it comes to taxes, social security and education. But when it comes down to foreign affairs that go beyond the administration is likely to have the kind of foreign policy the country can see, especially if he's on the hunt for human rights, more on the inside.

Bush has clearly said that if another 9/11 takes place, he will not interfere. Race has said that the United States doesn't need to be two things at the same time and that they don't need to have the 9/11 Authority competent to Lynn in Bosnia and Kosovo. Powell has made it clear that he does not favor partial interventions, and if the United States decides to contribute in a larger affair, it should be with clear directives and with all its military might. He would also prefer to pull the remaining American soldiers out of the Balkans.

Commentary

In the recent interview with The New York Times, he preferred not to comment on the Middle East, saying that they would let the process take its course and then pick it up whenever Clinton left off. As much as in may have said in the past, there is a distinction in defining Jewish settlements as a cause for the last attempts to reach an agreement. With only three days left, the process could easily fall on the hands of the next president, who is evidently not going to pull any all-mighty on the issue – unless he is communicating with Colin Powell (Secretary of State nominee) and Condoleezza Rice (National Security Adviser) for a press conference. What will happen in Israel without Clinton's undivided attention remains to be seen. As for now, the international community is preparing for a future global power whose leaders will have little interest in foreign affairs unless intervention directly benefits the bank accounts of the American people. As James Traub wrote in a commentary in The New York Times on Sunday, "A Bush administration is likely to have the kind of foreign policy the country can see, especially if he's on the hunt for human rights, more on the inside."

For us, Bush's quasi-isolationist approach means making fewer American lives abroad, and having two extra minutes on the nightly news that would go to far more interesting things than foreign news. But for the rest of the world, it means the United States would still have a say in what goes on around the world through unilateral command of the Global Market, but it would not interfere if the new global markets cause civil unrest. It would continue to bully its way through the UN Security Council, but it would not come to support its decisions with military aid. But if he were to write letters to his friends, it is not a "bilateral" to suggest that the United States has a special role in the world and should not attend to every international convention and agreement that someone thinks is not.[8]

Sonia Suzuki is an animal science junior and Mustang Daily staff writer.

Letter policy

Columns, cartoons and letters reflect the views of their authors and do not necessarily reflect those of Mustang Daily. Mustang Daily reserves the right to edit letters for grammar, punctuation and length. Please limit letters to 350 words.

Mustang Daily encourages comments on editorial policy and university affairs. Letters should be typed, signed with major and class standing. Preference is given to e-mailed letters. They can be mailed, faxed, delivered or e-mailed to mustangdaily@hotmail.com.

Michelle Kerr, Ellie Koscheski, Elizabeth Perhach, Matt Reagan, Adam Russo, Andrew Salituri, Jordyn Cutler, Alex Lambert, Janwyn Toy, Shari Sakamoto

Mustang Daily encourages comments on editorial policy and university affairs. Letters should be typed, signed with major and class standing. Preference is given to e-mailed letters. They can be mailed, faxed, delivered or e-mailed to mustangdaily@hotmail.com.
"Our Name Says It All"

- Lowest prices on name brands with sizes you are familiar with
- Freshest produce
- Open 24 hours a day
- Great selection
- Finest meats
- We accept debit and atm cards
- Manufacturer coupons accepted

"The first time I went I couldn't believe the low prices. Now I won't shop anywhere else."
- Kerri Weitzel, student

"The store is open 24 hours a day, so I can buy my groceries whenever I have time."
- Andy Kutzner, student

"They have the same stuff I always buy, but for much cheaper."
- Kumi Okimura, student

3985 South Higuera St. • San Luis Obispo
782-8989
DIVERSITY
continued from page 1

He said short-range efforts on the university's part have resulted in an increase of applicants from minority groups, but the problem goes deeper.

"The problem of unequal educational opportunity that results in the inability of certain segments to fully compete for admissions to a highly competitive campus, like Cal Poly, will require long-term solutions that need to be developed by the university, public schools, state and federal government and private business and industry," Maravilla said.

Although the number of applications for acceptance to Cal Poly by ethnically diverse students has increased, it doesn't mean that the campus has more minorities enrolled.

Bonnie Krupp, institutional research and planning analyst, said minority levels among students attending Cal Poly have actually decreased.

"Over the last few years, the percentage of ethnically diverse students has gone down," Krupp said.

She said Cal Poly is having trouble tracking student ethnicity because a lot of students are not specifying their ethnic origins.

"There has been a considerable change in the number of students not giving an ethnic group," Krupp said.

Apparently, the percentage of students selecting the category "ethnicity not specified" has increased from 3.2 percent in fall 1990 to 7.5 percent in fall 1998. In fall of 1999, a significant increase occurred, making the percentage 12.8.

Unofficial reports from the admissions office show that officials may not know the exact number of minority students attending Cal Poly. Between fall 2000 and fall 2001, the percentage of students choosing a specific ethnic group has increased by 31 percent. In fall of 2000, 2,522 students did not specify ethnicity, but in 2001 only 1,599 students did not declare their ethnicity or simply didn't respond.

CD PLAYERS. Cell phones. In 'N' Out burgers. Somebody got a spare hand for the steering wheel?

Don't be driven to distraction. Safe driving requires your attention and patience, even if you're just traveling a few blocks from home to school.

STEER CLEAR

- Save the tailgating for outside Mustang Stadium. Fender benders are caused by drivers traveling too close to the car in front of them.

- Gunning the accelerator from stop sign to stop sign isn't just dangerous, it costs you gas money. SLOW DOWN.

- Pay attention to driving all the time.

Woodstock's Delivers Hot Savings!

Serving: South Bay, Morro Bay, Cuesta College, Cal Poly, and SLO

SLOPD
Los Osos Valley Road Development
www.slopd.org

Extra Large, Larue or Medium
1 or more topping Pizza

Extra Large 1-topping Pizza
1000 Higuera Street 541-4420
Gourmet Toppings Extra,
not good with other offers, exp. 2/15/01
Darn Valuable Coupon

only $999

only $9.99

only $9.99

Darn Valuable Coupon

Wednesday, January 17, 2001
Mustang Daily
Sports

Wednesday, January 17, 2001

WRESTLING continued from page 8

"It was a nice win for us," said Oklahoma head coach Jack Spaldes, who attended Cal Poly in 1972 before transferring to Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania. "We're a young team this year and have had a lot of adversity with injuries. But the guys have really been stepping up."

But Sandlin would put the Mustangs back on the board midway through the meet.

Trailing 154-pound Josh Lambrecht 2-1 in the first period, Sandlin used a late second-period take-down to knot the score at 3-3. The junior used another big take-down with 1:20 remaining in the period to take the 9-5 decision.

"Chuck Sandlin did what he had to do," Cowell said. "It was key for him to continue to keep going strong. The win against Fresno State and this one will help his mental outlook."

Sandlin knocked off Jason Rossetti 5-2 to keep the Mustangs in natural's match against No. 25 Fresno State.

The Mustangs earned a split during the dual, winning five of the 15 matches, but the Bulldogs clinched the upset on wins by technical fall and a major decision.

Former Arroyo Grande High stand-out Nate Ybarra tied the score 17-17 with a comeback pin over No. 36 Derrick Hayes at 133 pounds. The freshman won 13-7, setting the stage for a potential upset at 141 pounds.

"That was the best match I've seen him wrestle," Cowell said. "It was a match we weren't planning on winning, but we gave us a chance to get back in it."

But Fresno State's Ralph Lopez defeated Andrew Ghrist 8-4 in the finale to give the Bulldogs a 20-17 win. Harman kicked off the dual with a 1-2 victory over Jim Medeiros, while Steve Strange defeated Mike Mellor by technical fall to let the Mustangs tie the match at eight.
Wrestling drops two tough matches

By Brian Milne
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Cal Poly wrestler Cedric Haymon made a good point following Sunday’s loss to Oklahoma.

“You can’t get good unless you face the top teams,” said the No. 12 ranked Haymon. “Week after week it’s another test.”

The Mustangs were undoubtedly tested by the sixth-ranked Sooners (9-1) in a 28-6 defeat in Mont Gom.

The loss marked the fourth time Cal Poly (1-4) has fallen to a nationally-ranked opponent in the last month.

“Our schedule is tough, knowing for our guys,” said Cal Poly head coach Leon Cowell. “We’ll see the benefits at the end of the year.”

Haymon, the team’s lone ranked individual, recorded the dual meet’s only victory against Oklahoma.

“I’ve been trying to be more of a leader all year,” Haymon said. “I started (the season) ranked, so I want to be the guy who sets the pace for the team. I tell them stuff for their match and try to do the same thing during mine.”

Haymon’s win cut the Slikner dominance of the Oklahoma dual meet to 1-2.

The team lost to Oklahoma 28-6 on Sunday.

Fresno State defeated the Mustangs 20-17 on Friday.

see WRESTLING, page 7

Mustangs dominate Riverside

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

Intern header coach Kevin Brunley couldn’t of asked for a better start to his head coaching career at Cal Poly.

The Mustangs played their first basketball game of the year on Saturday at the Recreation Center in Riverside.

Cal Poly was led by center Chris Byrd’s 25 points and 10 rebounds and guard Jamail Scott’s 22 points and 11 rebounds. Scott also paced in six of seven three-pointers.

Cal Poly (6-7, 0-1 Big West) dominated defensively and controlled the boards, outrebounding the Highlanders 54-34 and holding them to 33 percent shooting in the game.

After leading 54-17 at halftime, the Mustangs opened up a 91-point lead at 73-22 following a Byrdlandfavoured Overall, the team shot 12 of 21 from beyond the arc.

Cal Poly next travels to the University of the Pacific for a Big West conference matchup on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Women fall to UCSB

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

Poor shooting and a lack of rebounds led the women’s basketball team to a 74-41 defeat against UC Santa Barbara Saturday night at the Thunderdome.

The Gauchos had four players in double figures, center Lindsey Taylor scoring 19 points as well as gathering 17 rebounds, who were playing its last game without forward Caroline Rowles, who looks to return for this weekend’s Big West Conference games.

Guard Odessa Jenkins led Cal Poly with 12 points and eight rebounds.

Three-point shooting was one of the downfalls for the Mustangs, as they shot 24 from downtown but made only three. The team shot .303 in the first half and .250 in the second.

Cal Poly is next in action on the road against UC Irvine on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Sports Trivia

Yesterday’s Answer:

Golf balls were originally made out of leather stuffed with feathers.

Congrats Jessica White!

Today’s Question:

Name the quarterback who completed 22 of 25 pass attempts in Super Bowl XXI.

Please submit sports trivia answers to: sports@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu
Please include your name. The first correct answer received via e-mail will be printed in the next issue of the paper.

Scores

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SWIMMING (MEN)</th>
<th>SWIMMING (WOMEN)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>UC Davis</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cal Poly</td>
<td>64</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pacific</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cal Poly</td>
<td>94</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Briefs

Canseco signs with Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Jose Canseco agreed to an incentive-laden contract with the OHi-desperates Anaheim Angels on Tuesday that could pay him as little as $200,000 or as much as $5 million.

The free agent slugger got a minor league deal heavily based on plate appearances, along with an invitation to spring training.

Canseco, 36, is 230 on baseball’s career home run list with 446. He has been sidelined by injuries in each of the last six years, with back problems showing him in four seasons.

Schedule

THURSDAY
• Men’s basketball vs. University of the Pacific
  • at Stockton
  • at 7 p.m.
• Wrestling vs. Boise State
  • at Boise State
  • at 5 p.m.

FRIDAY
• Women’s basketball vs. UC Irvine
  • at Irvine
  • at 7 p.m.

SATURDAY
• Wrestling vs. Oregon State
  • at Oregon State
  • at Noon