Friends, family remember fallen Cal Poly student

By Stephen Curran

Ward Churchill discusses global indigenous issues

By Sonia Stutzki

Extending a hand to the SLO community

By Emily Schwartz

Ward Churchill, a professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado, speaks to a room full of students and faculty about the poor treatment of Native Americans and how that treatment still continues today.

"I was always there next to him," Sy said. "I was the one person who was stable in his life." Churchill is one of the most outspoken Native American activists. He is an active writer and a professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado.

"I was always there next to him," he said. "The only thing that was true was that he was a very good person." Churchill said he was always there next to him.

Ward Churchill was a prolific writer and a professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado. His life was filled with instability, the two became strong

"The first two days (after his death) I was in shock," she said. "It's now getting to where I can talk about it."

Jason Sy, 18, was killed Wednesday in a train accident across from Mustang Village and the Orfalea College of Business. He was an aerospace engineering freshman.

Throughout what she described as "a tough childhood," the two siblings developed a bond far beyond a typical brother-sister relationship. They were friends, not just relatives.

"We were the largest people in each other's lives," she said. Growing up, his life was filled with instability. Sy remembered, being shuffled between parents and older siblings. And, throughout this instability, the two became strong forces in each other's lives.

"I was always there next to him," Sy said. "I was the one person who was stable in his life." Churchill is one of the most outspoken Native American activists. He is an active writer and a professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado.

"I was always there next to him," he said. "The only thing that was true was that he was a very good person." Churchill said he was always there next to him.

Ward Churchill was a prolific writer and a professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado. His life was filled with instability, the two became strong

"The first two days (after his death) I was in shock," she said. "It's now getting to where I can talk about it."
Students take advantage of bargain airfares

By Stephen Curran

Construction management sophomore Peter Michelen is making his holiday plans. In typical American form, these holiday plans involve trips to several of the nation’s busy airports.

However, unlike past holiday seasons, Michelen and other flyers will have to contend with armed guards, an extensive screening process and the memories of recent events.

Yet, like many bargain-savvy shoppers, he remains unfazed.

“I haven’t had any reason to be nervous,” Michelen said. “I think it has to do with the fact that we’re not directly affected.”

This is a sentiment echoed by travelers throughout the country. As the nation’s airlines continue to struggle, people are flexible, said travel consultant Bobbi Primo.

Challengers of the airline companies, many students are opting to stay in the continental United States this year.

“Hawaii’s probably not the first choice,” she said. “We’re really pushing domestic travel.”

While flights to Europe are down, Primo said that destinations such as Australia and New Zealand are top international choices this year. The office is currently advertising a Los Angeles to Auckland, New Zealand flight for less than $1,200. Normally, such a flight averages approximately $1,500, she said.

“Many people in the room have met a viable Indian Resources are getting used and someone’s benefiting,” Churchill said.

Challengers said that through the Bureau of Indian Affairs the government has been able to assign leasing contracts to outside corporations. Currently, he added, a Navajo group is being negotiated to give way to a coal-mining corporation.

“The government has sent technical consultants and experts to teach the Indians how to utilize their resources,” he said. “An Indian too dumb to mine for coal? What we need is for the government to respect its own laws.”

Churchill concluded his presentation with just one statement — the government needs to respect current treaties with Native American tribes, treat them with resources and keep profits earned.

Before the night was opened to questions, Churchill commented on the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, saying that they were in response to the $50,000 Iraqi and Afghani children who have died due to American embargos in the region.

Jessica Atiya, a microbiology junior, asked how the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, impacted the airline industry.

“Terrorists attacks of Sept. 11, saying that they were in response to the $50,000 Iraqi and Afghani children who have died due to American embargos in the region.”

Churchill concluded his presentation with just one statement — the government needs to respect current treaties with Native American tribes, treat them with resources and keep profits earned.

Before the night was opened to questions, Churchill commented on the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, saying that they were in response to the $50,000 Iraqi and Afghani children who have died due to American embargos in the region.

Jessica Atiya, a microbiology junior, asked how the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, impacted the airline industry.

“I think people were starting to get offended toward the end,” she said and added that part of the audience’s reaction was due to his defensive approach.

As half of the audience began to leave, he re-stated his point about respecting the rights of indigenous peoples. He explained that most minority groups around the world lack representation and years of exploitation have stored anger and frustration to the point of desperation and extreme actions.
Bush signs airport security bill
WASHINGTON — President Bush signed a bill into legislation that will put more airport security in the hands of the federal government. Lawmakers and the administration wanted to act before the holiday season to encourage travelers to get back in airplanes after the Sept. 11 attacks.

The law will put 28,000 federal employees in charge of airport screening, inspecting checked and carry-on baggage and computer-assisted pre-screening. Within several months, passengers will be required to pay $2.50 per flight to help cover the costs of the increased security. By 2002, the law mandates that all checked bags be inspected with explosives detection machines. The cockpit doors on 4,000 aircraft have already been fortified by airlines, and the Transportation Department is starting on criminal background checks for the around 750,000 airport employees.

The American Automobile Association forecast that 4.6 million people will travel by air for the Thanksgiving holiday, a 27 percent decline from last year's 6.3 million.

--- Associated Press

Is your turkey tainted?
WASHINGTON — The Center for Science in the Public Interest said Monday that 13 percent of raw U.S. turkeys carry salmonella, according to government data. This number is higher than other types of raw meat. Americanspartaking in the holiday feast may be at risk of contracting the food-borne disease if the bird is not thoroughly cooked.

An estimated 1.3 million Americans become ill with salmonella and about 500 die from it each year. Healthy adults generally recover from the illness after a few days and suffer vomiting and diarrhea.

The National Turkey Federation has said that the rate of salmonella among turkeys has dropped 30 percent in the last three years from 19.4 percent. The Center for Science in the Public Interest suggests cooking turkeys to a minimum of 180 degrees.

The Center is trying to persuade the U.S. Department of Agriculture to publish the rates of contamination of various plants on the Internet.

--- Reuters

L.A. firm hires Gore
LOS ANGELES — A Los Angeles-based financial services holding company has hired Al Gore as its vice chairman. The company, Metropolitan West Financial, said that Gore will help identify and evaluate new business opportunities and play an active role in shaping the future of the company. He will also help develop strategies in biotechnology and information technology and examine opportunities for international expansion.

Gore is taking on these new responsibilities in addition to his positions as a research professor for the University of California, Los Angeles, and teaching at Middle Tennessee State and Fisk University.

--- USA Today

U.S. oil companies planning merge
WASHINGTON — Phillips Petroleum and Conoco, both U.S. energy companies, announced plans for a merger that would make them the third largest oil and gas company in the United States for production. ConocoPhillips, the new company, will have a market value of $35 billion. The merger has yet to be approved by shareholders and U.S. regulators.

Its headquarters will be in Houston, Texas, and have prospects on five continents. It will be the fifth largest global oil refiner.

--- Washington Post

International Briefs
South Asia
KABUL, Afghanistan — Four journalists have been killed in Afghanistan by gunmen who ambushed the convoy in which they were traveling. Drivers said the gunmen forced the journalists from their vehicles when they were 50 kilometers east of the Afghan capital, Kabul, and made them march up into the surrounding hills.

Driver Mohammed Fardad said he heard three or four bursts from a Kalashnikov rifle.

"They took the journalists, and when the journalists turned to look at them, the gunmen shot.

This brings to seven the number of journalists known to have been killed reporting on the war in Afghanistan.

A passenger on a bus traveling along the same route said the bodies had been laid out along the road. The victims had apparently been robbed, because their pockets were zipped open and empty.

The journalists were ambushed in an area which is now controlled by the Northern Alliance, but some Taliban fighters, including Arab volunteers, are believed to be in the area. Bandits also operate in the region.

--- BBC News

Middle East
PAKISTAN — The Pakistan government has announced that it no longer has ties to its old allies, the Taliban.

"We feel we can no longer recognize them," a Pakistani foreign ministry official said.

This brings to seven the number of countries that have severed ties to the Taliban.

The Taliban was formed in 1994 by a group of Islamic radicals who once fought against the Soviet Union in Afghanistan. The group has been fighting the government of Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The Taliban have beenrobbed, because their pockets were zipped open and empty.

The journalists were ambushed in an area which is now controlled by the Northern Alliance, but some Taliban fighters, including Arab volunteers, are believed to be in the area. Bandits also operate in the region.

--- BBC News

--- USA Today

Bush signs airport security bill
WASHINGTON — President Bush signed a bill into legislation that will put more airport security in the hands of the federal government. Lawmakers and the administration wanted to act before the holiday season to encourage travelers to get back in airplanes after the Sept. 11 attacks.

The law will put 28,000 federal employees in charge of airport screening, inspecting checked and carry-on baggage and computer-assisted pre-screening. Within several months, passengers will be required to pay $2.50 per flight to help cover the costs of the increased security. By 2002, the law mandates that all checked bags be inspected with explosives detection machines. The cockpit doors on 4,000 aircraft have already been fortified by airlines, and the Transportation Department is starting on criminal background checks for the around 750,000 airport employees.

The American Automobile Association forecast that 4.6 million people will travel by air for the Thanksgiving holiday, a 27 percent decline from last year's 6.3 million.

--- Associated Press

Is your turkey tainted?
WASHINGTON — The Center for Science in the Public Interest said Monday that 13 percent of raw U.S. turkeys carry salmonella, according to government data. This number is higher than other types of raw meat. Americans partaking in the holiday feast may be at risk of contracting the food-borne disease if the bird is not thoroughly cooked.

An estimated 1.3 million Americans become ill with salmonella and about 500 die from it each year. Healthy adults generally recover from the illness after a few days and suffer vomiting and diarrhea.

The National Turkey Federation has said that the rate of salmonella among turkeys has dropped 30 percent in the last three years from 19.4 percent. The Center for Science in the Public Interest suggests cooking turkeys to a minimum of 180 degrees.

The Center is trying to persuade the U.S. Department of Agriculture to publish the rates of contamination of various plants on the Internet.

--- Reuters

L.A. firm hires Gore
LOS ANGELES — A Los Angeles-based financial services holding company has hired Al Gore as its vice chairman. The company, Metropolitan West Financial, said that Gore will help identify and evaluate new business opportunities and play an active role in shaping the future of the company. He will also help develop strategies in biotechnology and information technology and examine opportunities for international expansion.

Gore is taking on these new responsibilities in addition to his positions as a research professor for the University of California, Los Angeles, and teaching at Middle Tennessee State and Fisk University.

--- USA Today

U.S. oil companies planning merge
WASHINGTON — Phillips Petroleum and Conoco, both U.S. energy companies, announced plans for a merger that would make them the third largest oil and gas company in the United States for production. ConocoPhillips, the new company, will have a market value of $35 billion. The merger has yet to be approved by shareholders and U.S. regulators.

Its headquarters will be in Houston, Texas, and have prospects on five continents. It will be the fifth largest global oil refiner.

--- Washington Post

International Briefs
South Asia
KABUL, Afghanistan — Four journalists have been killed in Afghanistan by gunmen who ambushed the convoy in which they were traveling. Drivers said the gunmen forced the journalists from their vehicles when they were 50 kilometers east of the Afghan capital, Kabul, and made them march up into the surrounding hills.

Driver Mohammed Fardad said he heard three or four bursts from a Kalashnikov rifle.

"They took the journalists, and when the journalists turned to look at them, the gunmen shot.

This brings to seven the number of journalists known to have been killed reporting on the war in Afghanistan.

A passenger on a bus traveling along the same route said the bodies had been laid out along the road. The victims had apparently been robbed, because their pockets were zipped open and empty.

The journalists were ambushed in an area which is now controlled by the Northern Alliance, but some Taliban fighters, including Arab volunteers, are believed to be in the area. Bandits also operate in the region.

--- BBC News

Middle East
PAKISTAN — The Pakistan government has announced that it no longer has ties to its old allies, the Taliban.

"We feel we can no longer recognize them," a Pakistani foreign ministry official said.

This brings to seven the number of countries that have severed ties to the Taliban.

The Taliban was formed in 1994 by a group of Islamic radicals who once fought against the Soviet Union in Afghanistan. The group has been fighting the government of Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The Taliban have been robbed, because their pockets were zipped open and empty.

The journalists were ambushed in an area which is now controlled by the Northern Alliance, but some Taliban fighters, including Arab volunteers, are believed to be in the area. Bandits also operate in the region.

--- BBC News

--- USA Today
Fashion show raises money for Red Cross, local youth

By Jacob Jackson

Putting on a collaborative arts fashion show for course credit may sound daunting to the typical college student. But Sunday, speech communication juniors Ryan Miller, Kara Fiess, and Tia Peterson put it all off with ease.

Fiess won a Kona’s gift certificate and an American flag tank top in a raffle following the show. The show itself was kick-started by Ryan Miller, who has been doing magic for over a month, putting in the time and continued entertaining the audience during intermissions while the show models changed.

“I love entertaining people,” said Miller, who, in addition to doing magic, has been working on the show. “We’ve spent over a month putting this together, and it’s been really stressful, but to finally see us pull it off has been very rewarding.”

The show wasn’t the only thing Miller pulled off. The magician’s most impressive trick of the day involved two ropes tied around his neck and a pair of volunteers from the audience. Miller had them stand on either side of him. Each volunteer pulled a rope as hard as they could. The ropes appeared to go through Miller’s neck and become one rope.

“First thing that comes of all this is it benefits some people in the community who need help the most,” said Carrie Schwartz, a speech communication sophomore. Since the show put on by Krause gave the audience even more to cheer about.

The fashion show was broken down into Cal Poly’s usual casual clothing, business attire and “out on the town” fashion. It’s three different facets of a Cal Poly student, Krause said. “The usual clothing ties in Cal Poly gear with a relaxed style that students will feel comfortable wearing. The business attire represents what students will wear when they graduate and go out into the working world. And the ‘out on the town’ fashion is an example of what students wear when they go out on the weekends.”

Some of the casual clothing ensembles were a navy Cal Poly sweatshirt with rolled jeans for women and blue jeans with a red Structure shirt and matching red Cal Poly hat for men. Brian McNary led off the business attire decked out in blue. He modeled navy blue jackets with matching suspenders and a powder blue shirt, along with a checkered blue tie. Afterwards, he said he enjoyed the experience.

“Ryan is a friend of mine, and he’s a great guy,” McNary said. “When I heard he was doing this, and that the proceeds were going to charity, I wanted to help out any way I could.”

McNary, like many of the models at the show, is a member of Alpha Kappa Psi, the Cal Poly business fraternity that supports theater on campus.

After the fashion show, the event was concluded by a performance by Kappa Psi, the Cal Poly improv comedy group, Smile and Nod. The group entertained the audience with several skits reminiscent of those seen on the TV show “Who’s Line is it Anyway?”

“I thought it was really well done,” said Carrie Schwartz, a speech communication sophomore. “But the best thing that comes of all this is it benefits some people in the community who need it the most.”

TRAGEDY

continued from page 1

their junior year in high school and were an integral part of each other’s lives.

“It’s hard because they were together all the time,” Chand said. “It seems like any second now he’s going to knock on the door.”

When asked to photograph images that exemplified his nature, his sister remembered that, the two most prominent pictures the stylish former high school swimmer displayed were of Sarah and his stereo.

The couple made plans to attend college together, finally choosing Cal Poly when Jason decided to major in engineering.

COMMUNITY

continued from page 1

lected food from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. As customers walked in the store, students gave them a handout with information on ASN as well as a list of miscellaneous items that they could contribute to. All donations were to aid people with the HIV disease and AIDS in San Luis Obispo.

Mike Hamilton, the Trinity Hall residence advisor who organized the drive, said they were going to take the collected food to ASN, and then distribute it to the needy for the holidays.

“As a resident advisor, my job is to help people,” he said. “And if I can help people outside the residence halls too, that’s even better.”

A man of few words, both his sister and Chand remember someone not prone to outbursts, but one who carefully considered the consequences of his actions.

“With the people he cared about, he could talk to you through his body language,” Sy said.

Yet, despite his reserved nature, Sy remembered someone with a lighter side. A film buff, comedy was his favorite genre, she said, recalling his collection of well-worn Adam Sandler and Ben Stiller movies.

In fact, one of his earliest career aspirations was to be a filmmaker. And, when thinking about his favorite things, Sy remembered with a laugh, her brother’s affinity for alternative rock music, one of the few things they did not share.

Chand also remembers a young man with a sense of humor, but one that was not always evident to strangers.

“It was always a challenge to make Jason laugh,” she said.

A leader since high school, Jason was chosen captain of his school’s water polo team after only a few months despite having never taken a lesson. It was this type of fortitude that exemplified his nature, one that was resilient and courageous.

“That’s what true resilience is, when you bounce back,” she said.

Sy remembered that her brother enjoyed being in control and showed control up until the very end.

“He made the decision to die painlessly,” she said. “He made the last decision you can make here on Earth.”

Besides aiding those less fortunate, Hamilton said the food drive was a way of increasing awareness about ASN and problems in the community.

“People don’t think things like AIDS or homelessness is a problem in this community,” he said. “They don’t think this stuff actually happens here, but it does.”

Other San Luis Obispo organizations are also helping the community’s less fortunate by hosting Thanksgiving dinner. Grass Roots II, a local nonprofit organization, is inviting the community on Wednesday to the Veteran’s Hall, located on the corner of Grand Avenue and Mill Street, for a Thanksgiving feast.

Many local businesses and community members donated the turkeys for the dinner, making it free to all who attend. Volunteers will also be donating their time to help prepare and serve the food.

Tia Peterson, member of the board of directors and treasurer of Grass Roots II, said that the community’s participation is what makes the annual event successful.

“People believe in the project and they come through every year,” she said. “It’s great for the community, this would never be possible.”

The dinner, which will be served Wednesday from 12 to 5 p.m., is not only for the needy, but for anyone who doesn’t have someone to share Thanksgiving with, Peterson said.

Those interested in helping prepare and serve the food could drop by the Veteran’s Hall on Tuesday between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m., and on Wednesday between 6 a.m. and 5 p.m.
Saying goodbye to a Poly friend

By Steven Harvey
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Joann Seremet was the Mustang Daily's general manager from 1980 to 1985. Havandjian said she quit to further her career goals and became an agriculture business lecturer. According to the Napa Valley Register, Seremet also published cancer research material on the Elaine Mackie Charitable Trust Web site and worked as a marketing consultant for the Small Business Development Center.

"During the time period she was at the Daily she was always very strong and outgoing, independent and imaginative," said Madelyn Nix, former secretary for the journalism department and a close friend of Seremet.

Seremet had been battling cancer for the last 13 years. The illness began as breast cancer, and eventually moved into the Ixme. Nix said she really talked.

A.J. Schuermann, the current general manager of Mustang Daily, had many good times with Seremet. In 1990, she decided to go travel in the Middle East. Schuermann said he thought it was brave of her to go to the Middle East during the Persian Gulf War.

"When she got back she said 'I'll tell ya, I don't like the way they treat the women over there. I say bomb them.' And then she laughed," Schuermann said. "She was a brave, beautiful woman.

Some of Nix's favorite memories of Seremet were of their antics while working at Cal Poly. Former co-commissar Dean Klitgaard, who recently retired from his position as a technical adviser for the journalism department, Nixon and Seremet used to take two-hour lunches in Stono Bay.

"You couldn't get away with that today," Nixon said.

Nix said six months ago Seremet came up and spent the night with her and they talked about the support they received from each other.

"I told her she was my hero," said Nix. "She helped me through my divorce. She said that she thought of me as her hero. We told each other how we felt. It was the last time we really talked."

Wanna Job?
Do you feel like you’re going into the job market BLIND?

The Mustang Daily Advertising Department is hiring motivated self-starters as Ad Reps!

Only a few positions are available, so contact
Nick @ 756-1143

Large
1 topping pizza
(Nucci's Large is 16")

$3 off

Medium
1 topping pizza

$2 off

Mini
1 topping pizza

$1 off

Daily Lunch & Dinner Specials
Slices served 11am-3pm
Free delivery with minimum order

785 Foothill Blvd
mon-fri 11am-9pm
sat 11am-9pm
542-0152

3165 Broad Street
mon-fri 11am-9pm
sat 4pm-9pm
545-9444

One coupon per person. Not valid with other offers.

Nucci's
Letters to the editor

Some departments lack Jewish representation

Editor,

Your article on religious diversity ("Faith diversity lacking at Cal Poly") Nov. 6, prompted me to write. I am a Jewish electrical engineering faculty member and, in the 15 years I have been here, I can probably count the number of Jewish electrical engineers I have met on my fingers. EEE typically admits between 150 and 160 students annually, so this minor observation reflects reality, something is amiss. I cannot speak for other "minority" faiths, but, for some reason, bright Jewish future EE's are not making Cal Poly their school of first choice. The few Jewish students I have known often feel isolated, often that they are the only one in their major. Religious diversity is as important to our university as ethnic and political diversity. It is time to address this issue. We need representatives of all students and of Jewish faculty. For example, I have often felt isolated when attending events that focus on religious diversity.

Marty Kaliski is an electrical engineering professor.

IFC rules attack what Sigma Chi has fought for

Editor,

After Sigma Chi fought a long battle to clear its name and become an off-campus fraternity, the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) passed a measure on Oct. 15 banning the participation of all Cal Poly fraternities with any Greek group not recognized by Cal Poly. This was a direct attack against Sigma Chi, with the direct purpose of stopping Sigma Chi from participating in Greek activities. The hope of IFC members, bright Jewish future EE's are not making Cal Poly their school of first choice. The few Jewish students I have known often feel isolated, often that they are the only one in their major. Religious diversity is as important to our university as ethnic and political diversity. It is time to address this issue. We need representatives of all students and of Jewish faculty. For example, I have often felt isolated when attending events that focus on religious diversity.

Matthew Heintz is a computer science junior.

No, the Germans are not trying to take over U.S. policy

Editor,

This letter is in response to "U.S. Policy from a D.C. perspective," Nov. 19 by Tamara Simon. Wow! You seem to know a lot about the FSA from up there on "Capitalist Hill." Are you tired dieser about Claytong being anti-American, that is hopeless. I have met this guy, he is an American. However, he is peaceful and peace is tao.

Personally, my patriotism lies in the U.S. Constitution. Part of that Constitution, the rules made from it, have had their effects on Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS). The INS is not a German, it is an American defense of our nation, and the message Cal Poly is sending them. They do not understand that Cal Poly will not tolerate or show mercy.

The Cal Poly fraternity rules do not realize that they will fade and die the moment they are caught breaking the rules set forth by Cal Sigma Chi. It was rising from the ashes and creating a new way for the Greek system to exist with and without the support of the school. Now, with a majority vote, IFC has dictated to all those fraternity still in existence that they may not participate in any events with Sigma Chi, or they will face disciplinary action.

IFC has not only excluded Sigma Chi from participation in any events with Sigma Chi, but has stripped away the unstoppable and permanent demise of the Cal Poly Greek system. They have banned all those fraternities that are removed from IFC and any fraternity that may try to become an established Cal Poly fraternity in the future. Hence, the greater Cal Poly fraternity will slowly fade and the force who would want to join a startup fraternity that cannot participate in any event associated with members of the IFC. Without new fraternities to take the place of the old, there will only be no fraternities at all.

It amazes me that the same fraternities that voted us off are the same ones guilty of actions much more extreme than those we accused from us, from one of our own brothers. It is all those fraternities who are fool if they get caught. Once they are removed from Cal Poly sponsorship, they will be removed from all IFC activities forever. The members of Sigma Chi will not stop fighting, and we plan on being a strong link in the Greek system again. But I wonder if other fraternities will learn from the consequences of their actions. If you speak of fairness coming from the Republican party, then you have surely done them justice.

Robby Wallroad is a modern languages and literatures senior.

People in Afghanistan can slowly return to normal life

Editor,

Like the pathetic individuals they are, the Taliban are heading for the hills. Finally, the Afghans can elevate their lives. Television is the biggest benefit for those who are now liberated. The Taliban were running the schools and universities without the presence of the woman. We also have many activists who were removed from all IFC activities forever. The members of Sigma Chi will not stop fighting, and we plan on being a strong link in the Greek system again. But I wonder if other fraternities will learn from the consequences of their actions. If you speak of fairness coming from the Republican party, then you have surely done them justice.

Ashley Campbell is a political science junior.

Disagree, but refrain from overusing McCarthy label

Editor,

In the interest of trying to keep this debate elevated, I will try my hardest to respond only to debatable points raised in Mr. Simon's letter on the issue of his political correctness of the American people in the United States for the remainder of their lives. Like you, they are standing up for their liberties. Like you, they are standing up for their lives. Like you, they are standing up for their rights. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

The Progressive Student Alliance is a student organization at Cal Poly that advocates for American foreign policy, that puts us firmly in the realm of the communists. This hardly seems fair. We are trying to improve our country and planet by criticizing our nation's policies, and right now we are trying to save lives in central Asia. Rather than recognize that, some people who are against us try to give us blanket McCarthyist labels that degrade us. Dismiss it if you would like, but please be civil.

Thank you, Mr. Maita, for admitting that. When George W. Bush criticizes American defense spending, he is not considered "anti-American." When George W. Bush criticizes American defense spending, he is not considered "anti-American." But I will say that the Progressive Student Alliance is a political correctness of the American people in the United States for the remainder of their lives. Like you, they are standing up for their liberties. Like you, they are standing up for their lives. Like you, they are standing up for their rights.

Clayton Whitt is a social science sophomore and co-director of the Progressive Student Alliance.

Letters policy

By mail; Letters to the Editor, Building 26, Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, CA 93407

By fax; (805) 756-6784

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.

By email; mustangdaily@hotmail.com

Letters should reserve the right to edit letters for grammar, proficiency and length. Because of limited space, we will publish as many as possible. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, major and class standing.
 news

By Darren Gest

THES GW HATCHET

star Serena Williams on a three-mile walk, is a past Wimbledon and U.S. Open champ. Employees of nearly 30 local corporations, youth from around the region, college students and volunteers from the Fanessi Mae Foundation, a nonprofit organization that creates affordable housing for low-income families, also walked. Fanessi Mae has organized the walk since 1988. Walkers traveled past the National Gallery of Art, the Capitol building and other museums and returned to the Mall for music and speakers.

"This walk is an invaluable experience that I feel everyone should take part in," freshman Chris Moulton said. "I will continue my dedication to this event for the remainder of my college career."

Joel Cook, undergraduate dean of the School of Business and Public Management, helped organize a group of students who participated in the walk for the service project SRPM freshmen complete every year.

"Since November is a month of thanks and coming together, I feel that the Homeless Walk is the students' opportunity to give back to the critics of the District of Columbia," Cook said. The event raised about the same amount of money as last year. "With all the problems that the world has been facing lately, it is refreshing to see that the city is focusing on issues close to home," freshman Abbi Schell said.

Approximately one-fifth of D.C. residents and 44 percent of children in the District younger than 6, double the national figure, live in poverty, according to Fanessi Mae literature. The walk's earnings will benefit more than 200 nonprofit organizations that work with homeless families and individuals in the Washington area, who will receive grant checks at an anniversary celebration on Capitol Hill in February.

"It's a good month to make good relationships with others," Elshahik said.

Ramadan brings a real sense of how the hungry and ailing individual go through in their daily lives, said Minimu Sadaa, a student graduate in physics from Rajhahi, Bangladesh.

Fasting is one of the main supports of the five pillars of Islam. The other pillars are believing in Allah and his prophet, Mohammed, prayer, charity and pilgrimage to Mecca, situated in Saudi Arabia.

Cal Poly Television

CPTV

YP Magazine

Thursday, Friday & Saturday

12:30 p.m. - 10:30 p.m.

Channel 10

Early Bird Special

Lifeline 1408 Garden 543-8070

MUSTANG DAILY CLASSIFIEDS

Classifieds 756-1143

Caregiver for severely mentally impaired 17 yr. old. Part-time.
Weekend availability $10-$12 hr.
801-2910

Wanted

Advertising Representative to build new territory in San Luis Obispo.
Earn Commission. Must be a Cal Poly Student.
Call Nick @ 6-1143

Cal Poly Television

CPTV

Classifieds are

Killer!!

Call 756-1143

ews

Ramadan dawns bright with new moon Friday

By Jane Huh

WASHINGT0N (UPI) — For Muslims, this month signifies more than the approach of the new moon.

Following the age-old lunar calendar, the month of Ramadan began Friday with the new moon. Because it starts with the new moon, the holiday can take place in any season.

The month of Ramadan, or Holy Month, marks a period that creates affordable housing for low-income families, also walked. Fanessi Mae has organized the walk since 1988. Walkers traveled past the National Gallery of Art, the Capitol building and other museums and returned to the Mall for music and speakers.

"This walk is an invaluable experience that I feel everyone should take part in," freshman Chris Moulton said. "I will continue my dedication to this event for the remainder of my college career."

Joel Cook, undergraduate dean of the School of Business and Public Management, helped organize a group of students who participated in the walk for the service project SRPM freshmen complete every year.

"Since November is a month of thanks and coming together, I feel that the Homeless Walk is the students' opportunity to give back to the critics of the District of Columbia," Cook said. The event raised about the same amount of money as last year. "With all the problems that the world has been facing lately, it is refreshing to see that the city is focusing on issues close to home," freshman Abbi Schell said.

Approximately one-fifth of D.C. residents and 44 percent of children in the District younger than 6, double the national figure, live in poverty, according to Fanessi Mae literature. The walk's earnings will benefit more than 200 nonprofit organizations that work with homeless families and individuals in the Washington area, who will receive grant checks at an anniversary celebration on Capitol Hill in February.

"It's a good month to make good relationships with others," Elshahik said.

Ramadan brings a real sense of how the hungry and ailing individual go through in their daily lives, said Minimu Sadaa, a student graduate in physics from Rajhahi, Bangladesh.

Fasting is one of the main supports of the five pillars of Islam. The other pillars are believing in Allah and his prophet, Mohammed, prayer, charity and pilgrimage to Mecca, situated in Saudi Arabia.

The 14th annual Help the Homeless Walk in D.C. raises $6 million.

The event raised $5.5 million last year.

Williams, 39, is the chair of the walk, is a past Wimbledon and U.S. Open champ. Employees of nearly 30 local corporations, youth from around the region, college students and volunteers from the Fanessi Mae Foundation, a nonprofit organization that creates affordable housing for low-income families, also walked. Fanessi Mae has organized the walk since 1988. Walkers traveled past the National Gallery of Art, the Capitol building and other museums and returned to the Mall for music and speakers.

"This walk is an invaluable experience that I feel everyone should take part in," freshman Chris Moulton said. "I will continue my dedication to this event for the remainder of my college career."

Joel Cook, undergraduate dean of the School of Business and Public Management, helped organize a group of students who participated in the walk for the service project SRPM freshmen complete every year.

"Since November is a month of thanks and coming together, I feel that the Homeless Walk is the students' opportunity to give back to the critics of the District of Columbia," Cook said. The event raised about the same amount of money as last year. "With all the problems that the world has been facing lately, it is refreshing to see that the city is focusing on issues close to home," freshman Abbi Schell said.

Approximately one-fifth of D.C. residents and 44 percent of children in the District younger than 6, double the national figure, live in poverty, according to Fanessi Mae literature. The walk's earnings will benefit more than 200 nonprofit organizations that work with homeless families and individuals in the Washington area, who will receive grant checks at an anniversary celebration on Capitol Hill in February.

"It's a good month to make good relationships with others," Elshahik said.

Ramadan brings a real sense of how the hungry and ailing individual go through in their daily lives, said Minimu Sadaa, a student graduate in physics from Rajhahi, Bangladesh.

Fasting is one of the main supports of the five pillars of Islam. The other pillars are believing in Allah and his prophet, Mohammed, prayer, charity and pilgrimage to Mecca, situated in Saudi Arabia.

The 14th annual Help the Homeless Walk in D.C. raises $6 million.
If you were a Native American, how would you celebrate Thanksgiving?

- I would try to take it as a time to reflect on historical events with the Native American culture.
  - Brooke Diskin
  - Business senior

- I don’t think much relevance revolves around Thanksgiving. It’s mostly an American tradition, a home-made celebration.
  - Mike Bush
  - Materials engineering senior

- I guess you would have to accept that you are part of this country now and it’s a tradition.
  - Brent VanWagner
  - Animal science sophomore

- Probably the same way I do now because it was originally a celebration between the natives and the settlers. The whole point is tradition and remembering the friendship that happened.
  - Tegan Lentz
  - Mechanical engineering freshman

- I don’t think I would celebrate it because the whole purpose of Thanksgiving is celebrating the Europeans coming here. And if it’s my land, I wouldn’t be happy with them invading it.
  - Andi Lourdermilk
  - Environmental horticulture science junior

- I would rather dwell on what I’m thankful for rather than what happened. Although, you can’t forget.
  - Andrew Badger
  - Kinesiology senior

- I would do it the traditional way.
  - Ryan Self
  - Mechanical engineering junior

- I probably would not want to celebrate Thanksgiving just because of the history behind it and how it was established by the settlers. At the same time the idea of Thanksgiving and being thankful is good.
  - Enzn Zabatta
  - Business junior

---

Mustang Daily survey

How do Cal Poly students celebrate Thanksgiving?

How often do you go home?
- Always 84.6%
- Sometimes 14.1%
- Never 1.3%

When you or your family make dinner, how often are canned products used?
- Never 23.1%
- Seldom 32.7%
- Sometimes 32.6%
- Often 9.6%
- Always 0%

How many hours of TV do you watch?
- None 5.3%
- Less than 1 18.4%
- 1 to 3 42.1%
- 4 to 6 19.7%
- 6 or more 14.5%

About how many people participate in your Thanksgiving celebration?
- 1 to 5 15.8%
- 6 to 9 28.9%
- 10 to 15 30.3%
- 15 or more 25.0%

Does everyone bring food or does the host make it all?
- Everyone 61.5%
- Host 34.6%

Do you make dinner or go out to eat?
- Stay in 98.6%
- Go out 1.4%

Do you watch football?
- Yes 75%
- No 25%