New wakeboarding club flying high

Garrett Leight

The Central Coast Association of Wakeboarders is an organization dedicated to its sport, the lake lifestyle and teaching members throughout the Central Coast how to ride.

"CCAW pronounced "Ca-Caw" has become one of the largest wakeboarding clubs in the nation with over 120 members in just two weeks of existence.

Club founder and President Ryan Andrews said that he and 10 of his friends have been motivated by friends of friends and the old club used to be about drinking, the old club was never about teaching members how to ride. "Our new club is really trying to get back to the roots of what the old club used to be about: riding and introducing wakeboarders to the sport." —RYAN ANDREWS CCAW president and founder

"We are open to the community, alumni and whoever wants to join and learn how to ride, but out demographic will continue to be Cal Poly students," Andrews said.

CCAW is also completely self-funded by the 10 board members who all wrote personal checks to start the club.

"This is basically a small business and there's a lot of capital in starting a business like this," Andrews said. "The great part is that we can do whatever we want. We are not associated with Cal Poly and we don't plan to be; we are working on becoming a non-profit organization or something of that nature." Andrews, a business major with a concentration in finance, said that managing this club has been perfect for him.

"People who started riding at age 11, became a qualified instructor while working at West Coast Camps last summer for 13 weeks and living on a houseboat. He coached over 170 campers and quickly became a head coach.

"I learned so much in my time there working with the best professionals in the world," Andrews said. "I made great connections, gained sponsorships for myself and for the club. It's really helped CCAW gain legitimacy." CCAW gain legitimacy. On top of being a successful club, CCAW had even more success two weekends ago at the Long Beach Boardfist, where it tied for first place.

see Wakeboard, page 2

Musician Jay Nash comes to Frog & Peach

Wednesday

IN ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Chelsea Hayes ‘sets’ the standard for success

IN SPORTS, 8

Ford previews new car in Shell Beach

Nick Coury

In this electric age of developing the car industry, the quest for the best vehicle is never-ending. With new models and innovations, Ford Motor Company still stands as a frontrunner in the battle.

On Monday in Shell Beach, Ford presented the "Fusion," a new model for the 2006 lineup geared toward college graduates.

According to a Ford press release, "The all-new 2006 Ford Fusion delivers excellent fuel economy, advanced safety, low emissions and generous interior space — all at an affordable price." "It is very stylish and well engineered to make it fun (and safe) to drive," said John Clainard, the western regional manager for Ford public affairs. "From a standpoint of workable and fuel efficient wants of the consumer.

"The Fusion is very low in terms of emissions which, in fact, cleaner than a lot of hybrid vehicles that are on the road," Clainard said.

"We didn't want anyone who buys the Fusion to feel like they were a second-class citizen by what they were getting. This car is luxuriously loaded," Clainard said.

"The Fusion offers a whole lot more, much of Ford's manufacturing technology for the Fusion is designed to meet both the environmental and fuel-efficient wants of the consumer.

"(The Fusion) is very low in terms of emissions which, in fact, cleaner than a lot of hybrid vehicles that are on the road," Clainard said.

"We are the world's leader of best-selling vehicles on the planet and the best-selling vehicle in California is the F-series Ford truck," Clainard said. "The other half of the world buys cars, not trucks, and we wanted to get into that market as well." see Ford, page 2
Wakeboard
continued from page 1
second with Arizona State University.
Andrews said that ASU is one of the most nationally renowned wakeboarding schools and also has one of the longest running, successful clubs in the country.
Andrews placed seventh in the men's competition against some of the top professional college riders in the country. In the women's competition, Cal Poly's Julie Martinson took first place while Katie Peters took third. Martinson took first place while Andrews said.

“First, it was the best,’ Andrews said. "When you have something that’s a killer, you have to do it.
"Second, there was a lot of people who do it everyday.
"Third, when you have somebody who is really good, it’s a good feeling."

Andrews said that ASU is one of the more important consumer groups.

"To me, it was one of the most good for their next tournament hosted the East Coast 5-4.

CCAW plans on pulling a boat in be Saturday at Lake Nacimiento.

To Ride Day” and taught 10 people to stand up who had never ridden before. “It was so successful and everyone had so much fun,” Andrews said.

Membership costs $20 per quarter and a $10 gas fee for trips to the lake. All members get a “members only” T-shirt, die-cut stickers, 10 percent off at Copeland and’s and detects from 209 Boardshop in Monte.

The next CCAW day trip will be Saturday at Lake Nacimiento.
CCAW plans on pulling a boat in the hometowning parade on Nov. 5, followed by a trip to Lake Elsinore for their next tournament hosted by USC on Nov. 6.

These interested in joining the can contact Bryan Andrews at ryan@ccawakeboarders.com or attend the next meeting on Oct. 25 upstairs in the UU. CCAW is also on the Web at ccawakeboarders.com.

“This area is so rich with wakeboarders and people that want to ride,” Andrews said. “I’d love to stay here for a few more years and continue to push the sport in this area.”

Crime
continued from page 1

Arvis said, “This has been a prior­ it for us and I think it has paid dividends in the last few years.”
On the other hand, arrests for leapor and drug violations have remained fairly consistent over the past five years with more than usual arrests in 2003. In that year, there were 53 on-campus arrests for drugs or alcohol violations compared to 23 in 2004, according to statistics gathered in compliance with the federal Clery Act.
In 2003, there were 21 on-campus burglaries that resulted in arrests, compared to seven in 2004.
Also in 2003, there were 12 arrests for on-campus car theft and two in 2004. It is hard to say why the numbers spiked and dip from year to year, Arvis said.

The overall decline in crime mirrors a statewide decrease, according to the California Office of the Attorney General. Violent crime rates in California dropped 22.3 percent from 1998 to 2004.
The declines are being attributed to the efforts of local crime personnel, according to the California Office of the Attorney General.

“We have been working pretty hard the last five or six years. Look at the numbers,” Arvis said. “We don’t know what crimes have been presented, but it is pretty neat.”

Ford
continued from page 1

May Wong
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN JOSE — Two trade groups representing video game makers filed a lawsuit Monday seeking to overturn the recently passed California law banning the sale or rental of violent video games to minors.

The Video Software Dealers
Association and Entertainment Software Association contend the law is unconstitutional and violates First Amendment free speech rights, accoring to the suit filed in federal court in San Jose. The suit names Govern. Arnold Schwarzenegger, who signed the bill earlier this month, state Attorney General Bill Lockyer and other local officials.

The law, which goes into effect
Jan. 1, bars retailers from selling or renting violent video games to those 17 and under, imposes a $1,000 fine on violators and mandates stricter product labeling. It is similar to legislation that other states passed earlier this year after hidden sex scenes were discovered in a popular game, “Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas.”

Public uproar has also since prompted a Federal Trade Commission investigation and a new rating for the “San Andreas” game from “M” for mature to “AO” for adults only.

The industry groups, which already have similar court cases pending in Illinois and Michigan, equated the California law to “controlled censorship” in its latest lawsuit. “Video games are a form of artistic expression much like other forms of protected expression, such as movies, books and music,” the lawsuit stated.

Industry representatives say they are confident the California law will fail to survive the legal challenge as federal courts have struck down similar laws in recent years.

Group sues to overturn California law

BREAKING NEWS
UPDATED AT THE SPEED OF COLLEGE LIFE
www.mustangdaily.net
Bird flu drug said to be ineffective

Carolyn Smith
USA TODAY (WLL WISCONSIN)

MADISON, Wis. — A University of Wisconsin researcher friday a case of the avian flu in a human has gained resistance to a drug designed to treat the influenza virus, raising questions as to how health officials would combat a possible avian flu pandemic.

Avian influenza has drawn worldwide attention over the past two years, and the World Health Organization has confirmed 117 human cases of the bird flu, known as H5N1. All cases have been found in Southeast Asia, though health officials routinely test patients in the United States who are suspected of having the virus.

WHO recommended health-care facilities stock up on the anti-viral drug oseltamivir — commonly known by its trade name, Tamiflu — which can be used to treat all forms of influenza, officials intended to use the drug in the case of an avian flu pandemic to save off the spread of the flu while a vaccine could be developed.

However, Yoshihito Kawaoka, a researcher holding a joint appointment at UW School of Veterinary Medicine and the University of Tokyo, announced a Vietnamese girl had been found in one person, Kawaoka said.

"The worst-case scenario is the resistance (to Tamiflu) could spread and then there would be no anti-viral drugs that would work."

— CRAIG ROBERTS

UW University Health Services epidemiologist

Tamiflu and has already obtained stockpiling, and the plan is to rely on a vaccine, which could take months to develop if the flu becomes pandemic.

Despite this finding, UW University Health Services epidemiologist Craig Roberts said hype surrounding the bird flu and the recent announcement of one case of resistance to Tamiflu is inflated.

"Resistance doesn't happen all at once, it happens slowly," Roberts said. "And this particular case it was resistant, but that doesn't mean all (avian flu cases in humans) will be resistant." Roberts said historically, there have been occurrences of other strains of influenza developing resistance to anti-viral treatments.

The avian flu is far from being pandemic, Roberts said, noting the virus must be easily transmissible from human-to-human, there must be no existing immunity to the bird flu in the human population and the virus must cause severe illness in humans in order to be considered "pandemic."

Thus far, two of the three criteria have been met, but the virus is not communicable among humans; it can only be spread from bird to bird, or bird to human.

"The people who have (avian flu) have acquired it, presumably, from birds," Roberts said, adding the virus must mutate in order to pass from human to human.

There are two other anti-viral drugs available to treat the flu, Roberts said, but neither is as effective or easy to dispense as Tamiflu.

"The worst-case scenario is the resistance (to Tamiflu) could spread," Roberts said. "And then (in the case of pandemic flu) there would be no anti-viral drugs that would work against the avian flu virus." Kawaoka's findings will be published in this week's edition of Nature.

The Cal Poly Housing Corporation's Annual Audit has been completed for FY 2004-05. Copies are available to the Public at the Foundation Administration Building #15.

The case also has the possibility of limiting professorial teachings in the classroom, as well as the ability of professors to dispute punishment for their teachings.

In previous decisions, the First Amendment was found to protect government workers from being punished for conduct involving a "public concern," such as illegal governmental activities, rather than personal, job-related issues. The court is hearing this case in order to clarify the protection.

Even though there is debate over whether "public concern" would include professorial teachings, many doubt that professors would be greatly affected by the case due to the nature of their positions.

"I can't imagine that the Supreme Court would issue a decision that would compromise speech rights of teachers and professors," said Peter Scheer, executive director of the California First Amendment Coalition.

Scheer said that professors are supposed to be controversial and outspoken.

"A so-called "job description," "Scheer said, see Rights, page 4

Amgen

TeraVyne

Keyence

Target Stores

Lockheed Martin

Alcon Laboratories, Inc.

Apple Computer

KecK Grad. Institute

Kiewit Pacific Co.

Raytheon Company

Gordon-Prall, Inc.

CNET Networks

Green Hills Software

Company Information Sessions are a great way to network with employers.

For the complete list of Information Sessions, logon to my.calpoly.edu, click on Mustang Jobs and look under Events.
Rights
continued from page 3
"My prediction is that, if they would rule against employees, (it) would be narrow so that it would not jeopardize free-speech rights of teachers and their teachings," he said.

When asked about the case, Ravi Poorsara, a spokeswoman for the UC, referred to the UC Faculty Code of Conduct and the General University Policy Regarding Academic Freedom, but could not be reached for further comment.

According to the UC Faculty Code of Conduct, there are professional rights of faculty that support their ability "to present controversial material relevant to a course of instruction."

Even so, there is debate as to whether controversial professional teachings may deny students access to instruction or discriminate against students, which are violations of UC policy. A ruling in favor of employers would also limit the ability of whistleblowers to win lawsuits claiming retaliation, because it would disallow employees to speak out against work-related punishments.

The UC Whistleblower Policy and Policy for Protection of Whistleblowers From Retaliation outlines steps to report improper governmental activity conducted by fellow staff or faculty, and says whi­ stle-blowers are protected from undue retaliation from accused parties. This protects employees' First Amendment rights to speak out against the UC, so long as there are grounds for such allegations of improper activities.

In general, many are uncomfort­ able with giving public employees blanket protection for the things they say.

"We live in a world where people are looking things all the time," said Justice Stephen Breyer, during an hour-long discussion about the case.

But Stephen Kolot, a leader with the National Whistleblower Center, said a victory for the government would mean "whistleblowers who expose waste, fraud and corruption will have less constitutional protection than Ku Klux Klan members who burn crosses on their front lawns."

Zarar Khan

MUZAFFARABAD, Pakistan —
A halt in heavy rains Monday allowed helicopter relief flights to resume across Pakistan's quake zone, but fresh landslides hampered efforts to move supplies by road.

Officials estimated the death toll could now be more than 54,000.

Eight international medical teams took off from Muzaffarabad to outlying villages, as teams grew for millions of survivors without health care and shelter in the isolated mountains of Kashmir, partic­ ularly for the thousands of injured who need medical treatment to ward off infections.

U.S. diplomat Geoffrey K. Pitt estimated that about one-fifth of populated areas had yet to be reached.

"There are serious patients with infected wounds and gangrene," said Sanwal Newak of the International Committee of the Red Cross, after a team of its doc­ tors landed in Chakar, about 40 miles east of Muzaffarabad, the cap­ ital of Pakistan's part of the divided Himalayan region.

He said about 200 people in the town had not received any medical help since the 7.6 magnitude quake struck on Oct. 8, and landing chopper­ pers there was dangerous because desperate villagers rushed into the landing area.

In the town of Bagh, the bodies of six soldiers killed when their MI-17 transport helicopter crashed in bad weather Saturday were lain into simple wooden coffins for transport back to Islamabad.

On the Indian side of Kashmir, conditions were grim on Monday. Torrential rain and snow turned roads into rivers of mud, stranding trucks loaded with relief supplies for the worse-affected Uri and Tangdhar areas, officials said.

Officials on Sunday sharply raised estimates of the dead. Abdul Khaliq Wasi, a spokesman for the local government of Pakistani Kashmir, said at least 40,000 peo­ ple died there and that the toll could go much higher. Not all the bodies had been counted and the figure represented the "closest estimate," he said.

That pushed estimates of the total death toll to more than 54,000, including more than 13,000 in Pakistan's North West Frontier Province and about 1,350 in the part of divided Kashmir that India controls.

Confirmation of a final toll will be difficult because many bodies are buried beneath rubble. U.N. offici­ als said that, so far, they were adhering to the Pakistani govern­ ment's confirmed casualty toll, which was 39,422.

The United Nations has estimat­ ed that 2 million are homeless.

Helicopter missions in Pakistan resumed on Monday after being grounded for most of Sunday because of heavy rain and thunder­ storms, which piled on the distress for the homeless across the quake zone.

Nowak of the Red Cross said one of its relief flights to Chakar had to turn back over the weekend because villagers were fighting each other for supplies.

"They had sticks and they were fighting for relief goods. There was no perimeter security and we felt threatened," he said.

We have a history of finding exceptional consultants. If they don't find us first.

• Career Fair (Chumash Auditorium) — October 13
• Information Session (The Sandwich Factory) — October 19, 6:00 PM - 8:00 PM
• ISA Presentation (Building 3 - Room 113) — October 20, 11:00 AM - 12:00 PM
• SHPE Presentation (Building 5 - Room BS) — October 20, 6:00 PM - 7:00 PM

• Resumes due to Mustang Jobs and [email address] — October 24

Think. Commit. Do.

Deloitte.
Musician to offer 'some kind of comfort'

Mariecar Mendoza
MONTAGUE DAILY

An L New York native turned Los Angeles rising musician Jay Nash vis­ited Mother's Tavern and played guitar for a buddy's band nearly two years ago — a time vague in memory.

On Wednesday, Nash will make it back to San Luis Obispo and is ready to for the spotlight at Frog & Peach.

Promoting his new album "Some Kind of Comfort" under Kufala Recordings, which was recorded live in just one weekend, Nash aims to connect with his audience using a vast array of universal themes.

"I like to keep things vague and let listeners develop their own conclusions, but there's a theme of love and loss and the balance between the two," he said. "Freedom and commitment and the wild moment at the end of the crazy night. And the comfort of being alone for the first time."

The song was written in the middle of the night — or really early in the morning — when Nash attended a photo shoot party for a friend's band. "They got everyone nice and drunk and took pictures of chaos, of whiskey, wine and beer," he said.

"Then at five in the morning I said, 'We're going to write a song. I'm not leaving until we write a song.'"

This, Nash said, was all while he was stuck between his drummer, who was throwing up in a sink, and people "going out in a sink." As many can imagine, Nash recalls this track being one of the most fun to record.

"Making records is just a method­ical process, but this was complete inspiration," he said. "We tried to capture the moment of everyone in the room playing there."

But before recording live tracks coming out of a drunken stupor, Nash gained an appreciation for music thanks to his mother, a piano teacher. "Making records is simply that: an attempt to explain. But you're an individual, but it's hard to not be influenced by your peers."

So how does Nash describe his musical sound, equating the influences of musicians that surround him? "I think the easiest way to describe it is the New American music," he said. "It's a trend that I haven't seen anyone talk about it in text, but people of our generation listen to folk, country and jazz. And it's all the stuff we grew up listening to, and it is coming back."

"Every time a new genre comes out, it's the offshoot of the combination of genres that came before it," he explained. "I grew up listening to a lot of American music. I was inundated with rock, folk and country. My par­ents stocked my subconscious with all these different (types of) music."

But Nash admits his explanation is simply that an attempt to explain. "I'm still figuring it out; the answer to the question, 'What makes your sound?'" Nash said. And though he doesn't fully know the answer, Nash is willing to speculate. "I resisted the element of country because I didn't think it was cool," he said. "But at this point I've got to embrace it."

Of course, he added his "element of country" is more like that of Johnny Cash rather than Toby Keith. Since his first release in 1999, Nash said his progression in the music industry has gotten easier. But rather than motivating himself with dreams of platinum records and golden paperweights, Nash writes his music for something more rewarding.

"I'm trying to play in many places as I can," he said. "I just want to con­nect with people and tell stories."

Jay Nash's record "Some Kind of Comfort" is available now through Ameoba Records, Kufala Recordings and iTunes. Catch him live at Frog & Peach Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. There will be no cover.

Ladies:

Pump up your Curves!

Women's Weight Lifting Series
Oct. 24 & 26, 7-9 p.m., Rec Center Fitness Room

Women are encouraged to participate in this event. There is no cost and no special equipment is required. If you have never lifted weights before, try it and you'll be surprised at how strong you can be!

Register online & experience: asi.asu.edu

register online & experience: asi.calpoly.edu

AQUATICS ACTIVITIES • CRAFT CENTER CLASSES • POLY ESCAPES TRIPS • INTRAMURAL TOURNAMENTS • FITNESS CLASSES • REC EVENTS

Designer Cuts

$10 Men's Haircuts
Walk-ins welcome!

Haircolor SPECIALISTS

Monday-Friday 10am - 8pm
Saturday 10am - 5pm

1 CHI flat Iron - ONLY $125

Call 805-544-7202 for more information about us and how we can help you with your sound!"
All in the name of God

The Soapbox Diaries

Jack Ingram

Talkback with Jack

November 20, 2005

In a three-part BBC news series titled, “Elusive Peace: Israel and the Arabs,” Palestinian Foreign Minister Nabil Shaath described his June 2003 conversation with President Bush, in which he said, “I’ve been driven with a mission from God. God would tell me, ‘George, go and fight those terrorists in Afghanistan.’ And I did, and then God would tell me, ‘George, go and end the tyranny in Iraq.’ And I did. And now, again, I feel God’s words coming to me, ‘Go get the Palestinians their state (as far as Middle East policy is concerned) to be the veritable will of even some of the most radical, right-wing, some other global political militant organization’ led by a self-proclaimed demi-god who expounds the paroxysm of peace through war?”

Not again, Mr. President, you’re not supposed to drink the bong water.

All right, maybe the current trend in the media is Bush bashing — but so what? Call me trendy. I care. Still, I wouldn’t be surprised if even some of the most radical, right-wing, Bush-bashing conservatives admit they find Bush’s self-proclaimed divine dialogue a bit modestly God-like. Thanks for the Ten Commandments Moses, but step aside. Prophet, excuse me — President Bush hath spoken.

I find Bush’s comments puzzling, not to mention disturbing, and I’m not even religious. For the record, despite my sarcasm, I have no problem with religion or God for that matter; only with those who claim to speak for God. Personally, I am spiritual rather than a religious person, as are many of these other “non-believers.”

How then do Bush’s comments account for such people? They do fly in the face of a cornerstone of our democratic society — the separation of church and state. Who’s God he speaks for, or a Buddhist or Hindu God, perhaps?

Let’s assume that there is truth to Bush’s claim (pause for laughter or aspirin for subsequent headache). He would have the opportunity to seek answers to the most puzzling questions in God’s book. How does He feel about Roe v. Wade? What is the deal with marriage? What will the Spice Girls ever get back together?

Comments or ideas? Maybe you just have something to say. Get on the soapbox and talk back with Jack, at jingaanco@gmail.com. Next Tuesday, I will respond to e-mails and present a new topic for debate. Peace

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A perfect duo

Hillary vs. Condoleezza. I didn’t think of it, but once I heard it said, it made all too much sense. How else can it go? Who else could beat Obama? I bet some are thinking to themselves, “Great. Another columnist who can jump on the anti-Bush bandwagon.” If you are troubling, I care. Still, I would not be surprised if on big issues I trust that they both to be pretty rational as person moral.

Rather than slander they might rather than a religious person, as are many religious. For the record, despite my sarcasm, I agree with his argument on love, but I don’t agree with his argument on morality. I must say, I agree with his argument on love, but I don’t agree with his argument on everyone else. I’m later than you are (Mark).

Morgan Elam
General engineering minor

Don’t enforce your morality on me

Late I’ve been reading a lot of defenses and complaints about the CPUSA posters. In fact, I’m reading Mark Egan’s right now (yup, I’m later than you are Mark). I must say, I agree with his argument on love, but I don’t agree with the methods. For me, a firm personal morality is about being personally moral. This means I can look at the world around me and not enforce that same morality on everyone else. I know I can walk past these posters, notice that there’s an attractive woman, and move on. I’m not going to take it home with me to masturbate under the covers (that would probably annoy my roommate). This poster does nothing more to me than the average television or magazine ad (sex to sell something? Shocking!). In the end though, if this sort of thing hurts you, I do feel kind of sorry for you. You’re going to lead a very painful life in this world of ours.

Troy Kuersten
Art Department engineering junior

A message from Musty

Musty the Mustang here; inviting everyone to come up with me and the Mustang Maniacs to watch the football team take on UC Davis next weekend (October 28th and 29th). The Horseshoe Classic is in full swing this year, and we want the whole crowd to come back early this Thursday to UU hour and find the Mustang Maniacs table to sign up. How much is it you ask? It’s just 10 little dollars. This will get you a bus ride to Davis (and back in time for Saturday night), hotel accommodations, a tailgater before the game and a ticket to the game. More information can be found at www.cpsmaniax.com. GO POLY!

Musty the Mustang
Cal Poly athletics

Tuesday, September 18, 2005

The Soapbox Diaries

Jack Ingram

Talkback with Jack

November 20, 2005

in Monis or h*ss to

LETTER POLICY

MUSTANG DAILY POLICY

Send your letter, love, and more Mustang Daily reserves the right to edit letters for grammar, punctuation and length. Letters, commentaries and cartoons do not represent the views of the Mustang Daily. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer’s full name, phone number, major and class standing. Letters must come from a Cal Poly e-mail account. Do not send letters as an attachment. Please send the text in the body of the e-mail.

By e-mail: mustangdaily@gmail.com

By mail: Letters to the Editor Building 26, Room 226 Cal Poly, SLO, CA 93407

MUSTANG DAILY

Graphic Arts Building, Suite 226
California Polytechnic State University
San Luis Obispo, CA 93407

(805) 756-1796 editorial
(805) 756-1143 advertising
(805) 756-6784 fax

mustangdaily@gmail.com e-mail

“Other school, no funner than us.”

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

printed by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY

by University Graphics System

MUSTANG DAILY

October 18, 2005

Volume LXX, No. 31 E 28905

MUSTANG DAILY
Clark
continued from page 8

Clark said.
Although Clark has had a great season so far, she still sees room for improvement in her own game.

"I've always been someone who really can't be eye of how I played," Clark said. "Having a record scoring season is nice on paper, but I'm always someone who always believes I need to be scoring more, or making better runs, or defending better or being able to communicate better... I really know I can play better.'

Cooper is happy with Clark's performance this season, but said she still has plenty of potential.

"She's on the right track," he said. "She's been very successful this season, but she still has a lot of room to grow, which is a good thing.

When Clark finishes playing for Cal Poly, she is looking to play professionally in Spain, she said.

Hayes
continued from page 8

More importantly for Stevens, however, was that his hard work with the volleyball team would be appreciate by the Central Coast.

"There has always been a volleyball culture here," Stevens said. "This has always been a great volleyball school."

Now back together, Stevens and Hayes are a double- team to reckon with.

The advantage is that she understand one system 1 want to run offensively and she also knows our defensive systems," Stevens said.

As a recent transfer, Hayes is a kinesiology sophomore and though she may be set back a few weeks in terms of graduation, Hayes feels she has only moved forward in her career in volleyball.

"When I coached Chelsea she was a very good volleyball player, but Jon has now taken her to another level," Deiter Hayes said.

"I've become more confident on the court and more relaxed," she said, emphasizing that her growth has a lot to do with her increased on-court experience. Playing for familiar faces is also a plus, she added.

"It's really nice to have my family in the stands because they didn't get to see me play two years," Hayes said. "Also a lot of people in the community found out that I came back here and they're coming out to watch, so it's cool to be able to play in front of them as well."

In the future, Hayes hopes to play for even bigger crowds.

"I want to play professional beach volleyball," the said. "That would be the ultimate dream. I don't know if it'll ever come true, but it would be the greatest thing that could happen."

If playing with the AVP doesn't happen, however, Hayes would like to pursue a career as a physical trainer or nutritionist.

This weekend the volleyball team plays UC Santa Barbara at Santa Barbara on Saturday at 7 p.m.
Central Coast native Chelsea Hayes is ready and setting for the Mustang volleyball team this season.

Claire Thomas
Daily Mail

Chelsea Hayes checks off the volleyball court.

Team leader in assists, 654
17 kills
38 serving aces
Third on team in digs, 133
39 blocks

Chelsea Hayes
Cal Poly 2005 Stats

Personal Info

High School: Atascadero High
Year Sophomore
Position Setter

Player Spotlight: Becky Clark, women's soccer

James Mellor
DAILY MUSTANG

Senior forward Becky Clark has been bringing the pain this season:

Aggressive and physical playing style has been leaving her opponents begging for their trainers and heading to the icebox after matches.

“She’s a very aggressive player,” coach Alex Crozier said. “But not in a mean-spirited way. She’s very physical and very active and it works for her.”

Clark is tied with her teammate Sharon Day for the lead on the Cal Poly women’s soccer team with six goals this season. This has been a breakout year for Clark as her most offensive productively season as a Mustang.

Clark’s solid play is leading a team that is gunning for a spot in the NCAA post-season tournament.

“It’s been a long time coming,” Clark said. “It’s been a hard road getting there, but I’m happy to finally have it happen.”

Crozier has noticed Clark’s hard work paying off and has seen an improvement in her game.

“She’s always had it in her,” Crozier said. “She’s very intense and was (in previous seasons) so focused on trying to do it on her own. Now, she’s using her teammates and making them better, which in turn makes her more successful.”

The weekend left the Mustangs at 9-3-4 overall and 1-2-1 in the Big West. Being a leader on such a successful team is a role Clark has revered this year.

“That’s a privilege,” Clark said. “I’m just so happy to be out there, especially being a senior finally and being able to realize the responsibility of leading the team in scoring. All my efforts have been rewarded and I’m helping everyone.”

“With her leadership and her vocal presence, Clark takes her role as a leader seriously by setting an example for the younger players. Her personal goal for the season is to not let her frustrations be seen by her teammates.

“They need a player who is there mentally,” Clark said.