Three’s a crowd

Architecture freshman Lisa Snyder organizes the workspace in her room in the Sequoia residence hall that she shares with two roommates. This is the first year that tripled rooms have been implemented in the “red brick” residence halls and Sequoia now houses about 40 tripled rooms. However, Snyder doesn’t mind and, though she said storage is a slight problem, “it’s nice to know two people.”

Montana regains Cal Poly professor

Jared Cleaver

After seven years of teaching at Cal Poly, professor Ron de Yong will return to his home state to work as the agricultural director of Montana. He will replace Nancy K. Peterson, who passed away last month.

“I made the move because the governor of Montana offered me the position of ag director of the state of Montana,” de Yong said. “In California you have the director that runs the Department of Agriculture under Gov. Schwarzenegger. I’m running the Department of Agriculture in the state of Montana under Gov. Schweitzer.”

Agbusiness department chair Wayne Howard says that de Yong epitomizes what Cal Poly’s practical approach to learning is all about.

“We’re proud that Ron has been selected for doing this; it’s an indication of his expertise in the politics of agricultural policy,” Howard said.

Since coming to teach at Cal Poly seven years ago, de Yong has actually spent much of his time traveling to and from his family farm in Montana.

“I was going back and forth,” he said. “I’ve been teaching down at Cal Poly for seven years. For the first five years I’d come down and teach for nine months, and then my wife and I would go back up to Montana and farm for three months on the family farm. I didn’t have time to get the crops planted so I had to hire the neighbors to plant the crops. But I always had the time to do the irrigation and the harvest before we came back to Cal Poly.”

De Yong is originally from Montana, but he moved to San Luis Obispo with his wife searching for a warmer climate.

“We looked at some places like Arizona and New Mexico, but San Luis Obispo was the place that we really liked,” he said.

De Yong felt that Cal Poly was in need of an agbusiness policy class and showed interest in teaching the course.

“The move from the classroom will be an adjustment for de Yong, but he definitely doesn’t lack experience in the field.

According to Cal Poly’s agbusiness faculty director, see Montana, page 2
Some facebook profiles to be available by Google search

Rosanna Brown

Facebook announced that it is about to allow public pictures and names through public search engines such as Google, Yahoo and MSN. Users will have about a month to set their preferred privacy options for this feature.

According to the Frequently Asked Questions report, Facebook users who have privacy settings on the "Everyone" option will have a public search engine listing created for them. The listing will include the user’s name, profile picture, username and options for interacting with that user on Facebook.

The report also explained that even users with their privacy settings set to "Everyone" can opt out of search engine results.

Users “have additional options to remove their public search listings from search results on Facebook's welcome page, to remove their public search listings from external search engine results, or to do both,” the report stated.

Users who have privacy settings set to options besides “Everyone” will not have public search listings created for them.

Philip Fung, Facebook engineer, informed users on his blog that Facebook’s reason for creating this option is: “We’re expanding ‘search’ so that people can see which of their friends are on Facebook more easily.

The public search listing contains less information than someone could find right after signing up, so we’re not exposing any new information, and you have the opportunity to adjust their privacy settings,” said Chin.

With regards to maintaining a desired level of privacy, the report provides detailed instructions for users.

 users can also restrict what information shows in their public listing by going to the search privacy page.

“Only users who are over 18 have the ‘allow my public search listing to be indexed in external search engines’ checked in their search privacy settings will appear in external searches.”

Facebook’s public listings also contribute to the larger issue of Internet safety.

Delegate Vivian Watts, a member of the Science and Technology Committee in the Virginia House of Delegates, said that Internet privacy is a serious issue that has emerged with growing technology.

“It is pervasive and large that it becomes public domain rather than a private domain, and defining what that line is going to be very challenging,” Watts said. “We have continued to struggle with, for example, what is our public record with court records.”

Watts expressed great concern for having to opt-out of privacy options and said that the individual should be able to maintain control in to what information they want to be more accessible.

“It ought to be something that you choose, rather than something where you just say ‘no,’” Watts said.
AUDITIONS!

The Orchesis Dance Company performs jazz, ballet, lyrical, modern, hip hop, tap and other dance styles.

Please note date change

When:
Workshop: 6:10 pm, September 18th, 19th
(one mandatory, wear dance attire)
Audition: 6:10 pm, September 20th

Where:
Moon Ja Minn Suhr Dance Studio
Crandall Gymnasium (Bldg 60) Rm 6

Information:
Maria Junco: 805-756-1248
mjunco@calpoly.edu
http://orchesis.calpoly.edu
When every known speaker of the language Amnagel gets together, there’s still no one to talk to. Native Australian Charlie Man- guida is the only person alive known to speak that language, one of thousands around the world that are on the brink of extinction.

From rural Australia to Siberia to Oklahoma, languages that embody the history and traditions of people are dying, researchers said Tuesday.

While there are an estimated 7,000 languages spoken around the world today, one of them dies out about every two weeks, according to linguistic experts struggling to save at least some of them.

Five hot spots where languages are most endangered were listed Tuesday in a briefing by the Living Tongues Institute for Endangered Languages and the National Geographic Society.

In addition to northern Australia, eastern Siberia and Oklahoma and the U.S. Southwest, many native languages are endangered in South America — Ecuador, Colombia, Peru, Brazil and Bolivia — as well as the area including British Columbia, and the states of Washington and Oregon.

Losing languages means losing knowledge, says R. David Harri- son, an assistant professor of lin- guistics at Swarthmore College.

“When we lose a language, we lose centuries of human thinking about time, seasons, sea creatures, reindeer, edible flowers, mathematics, landscapes, myths, music, the unknown and the everyday.”

As many as half of the current languages have never been written down, he estimated.

That means, if the last speaker of many of these vanished tomorrow, the language would be lost because there is no dictionary, no literature, no text of any kind, he said.

Harrison is associate director of the Living Tongues Institute based in Salem, Ore. He and institute director Gregory D.S. Anderson analyzed the top regions for disappearing languages.

Anderson said languages become endangered when a community decides that its language is an impediment. The children may be first to do this, he explained, realizing that other more widely spoken languages are more useful.

The key to getting a language saved, Anderson said, is to attract more Republicans, Sen- ator Majority Leader Harry Reid noted that many culprits, includ- ing other industries and even natural sources, are responsible for emitting carbon dioxide.

The ruling was a defeat for the Internet. University Presi- dent Bernice Machen called the confrontation “regretful” and said two officers were placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of the probe.

The student, Andrew Meyer, spent a night in jail before his re- lease Tuesday morning on his re- cognizance. He had no comment when he left.

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of suggesting Demo- crats would temper their approach to Iraq legislation in a bid to attract more Republicans, Sen- atory Majority Leader Harry Reid declared abruptly Tuesday that he had no plans to do so.

The Democratic leader said he will call for a vote this month on several anti-war proposals, in- cluding one by Sen. Carl Levin that would insist President Bush end U.S. combat next summer.

The 8-sigalide model will be offered for 269 pounds, or $536 — $139 more expensive than Apple Inc.'s iPhone will go on sale in Britain on Nov. 9 exclusively through mobile operator O2, marking the first time the com- bination cell phone-iPod media player will be available outside the United States.

The U.S. iPhone was the same technical specifications as the British iPhone has the same technical specifications as the U.S. model, but the price in- cludes the U.K.'s value-added tax.

SEOUl, South Korea (AP) — North Korea strongly denied Tuesday that it has provided Syria with secret nuclear cooperation, claiming the charge was fabri- cated to block progress in the North's relations with the United States.

North Korea's Foreign Minis- try said the country has upheld a pledge made last October, when it conducted its first-ever nuclear test, that it would be "a respon- sible nuclear weapons state" and not transfer any nuclear material out of the country.

The North "never makes an empty talk but always tells truth," the ministry said in the statement carried by the official Korean Central News Agency.
Maryland upholds
same-sex marriage ban

Ben Nuckols
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Maryland’s highest court on Tuesday upheld a state law defining marriage as a union between a man and a woman, ending a lawsuit filed by same-sex couples who claimed they were being denied equal protection under the law.

Maryland’s 1972 ban on marriage does not discriminate on the basis of gender and does not deny any fundamental rights, the Court of Appeals ruled in a 4-3 decision. It also said the state has a legitimate interest in promoting opposite-sex marriage.

“Our opinion should by no means be read to imply that the General Assembly may not grant and recognize for homosexual persons civil unions or the right to marry a person of the same sex,” Judge Glenn T. Harrell Jr. wrote for the majority.

Plaintiffs said that the judges missed a historic opportunity to strike down a discriminatory law and that they would continue the fight in the Legislature. Legislators on both sides of the debate predicted action on the issue in the next session.

“I think history will hold them in contempt,” plaintiff Lisa Polyak said of the judges. “To create a legal solution in a vacuum, that doesn’t recognize the constitution is there to support the people, is to create an ignorant and irrelevant solution.”

State Sen. Richard Madaleno, who is openly gay, said he plans to introduce a bill to allow same-sex marriage. He also expects a proposal to create civil unions.

“I think we’ll have a lengthy discussion next session about what the options are for legal recognition for gay people,” Madaleno said.

Don Deaver, one of the General Assembly’s most conservative members, said he would introduce a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage as an “insurance.”

The ACEU of Maryland, which provided legal representation for the plaintiffs, said the fight to legalize gay marriage in Maryland would continue.

Many of the plaintiffs have children, and they argue that their families are being denied the stability and legal protection that comes from having married parents.

Lisa Kebrue, 39, and partner Mikki Morelle, 31, who live in Riverdale, have three children, ages 20 months, 2 and 17.

“We really wanted them to understand how normal and good their family is, that their family is just like any other family,” Kebrue said.

Nine same-sex couples and a gay man whose partner died filed the lawsuit in 2004 against court clerks who denied their applications for marriage li-

Languages

continued from page 4

and by recording the endangered language.

Harrison said that the 83 most widely spoken languages account for about 80 percent of the world’s population while the 3,500 smallest languages account for just 0.2 percent of the world’s people. Languages are more endangered than plant and animal species, he said.

The hot spots listed at Tuesday’s briefing:

Northern Australia, 153 languages. The researchers said aboriginal Australia holds some of the world’s most endangered languages due to the groups splintered during conflicts with white settlers. Researchers have documented such small language communities as the three known speakers of Magati Ke, the three Yawaraku speakers and the lone speaker of Anumand.

Central South America including Ecuador, Colombia, Peru, Brazil and Bolivia, 113 languages. The area has extremely high diversity, very little documentation and several immediate threats. Small and socially less-valued indigenous languages are being knocked out by Spanish or more dominant indigenous languages in most of the region and by Portuguese in Brazil.

Northwest Pacific Plateau, including British Columbia in Canada and the states of Washington and Oregon in the U.S., 54 languages. Every language in the American part of this hotspot is endangered or moribund, meaning the youngest speaker is over age 60. An extremely endangered language, with just one speaker, is Siletz Dee-ni, the last of 27 languages once spoken on the Siletz reservation in Oregon.

Eastern Siberian Russia, China, Japan, 23 languages. Government policies in the region have forced speakers of minority languages to use the national and regional languages and, as a result, some have only a few elderly speakers.

Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, 40 languages. Oklahoma has one of the highest densities of indigenous languages in the United States. A moribund language of the area is Yuchi, which may be unrelated to any other language in the world. As of 2005, only five elderly members of the Yuchi tribe were fluent.

The research is funded by the Australian government, U.S. National Science Foundation, National Geographic Society and grants from foundations.
Mo' money, mo' Madden

‘Madden NFL 08’ is worth the money with better graphics and new features

Graig "Firehawk" Mantle

For a moment that your first thoughts upon glancing at the box before purchasing "Madden NFL 08" will be that Vince Young is doomed.

How will the Madden "curse" strike this year? Torn ACL? Turf toe? Benched for Kerry Collins? (Note that would really prove to the skeptics that the curse exists.)

Seahawks running back Shaun Alexander appeared on the cover of last year’s Madden game, and ended up breaking his foot. Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Donovan McNabb featured on the cover of "Madden NFL 06" ended his 2005-06 season during its first week due to a sports hernia. The day after "Madden NFL 05" was released, Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick broke his leg in a preseason game. And the list of injuries continues.

No need to worry about virtual Vince Young, however, as he is safely protected by the reset button. Good thing, too, because the game is packed full of features to keep gamers occupied in ways studying never can.

After dumping out a second straight money-grab for the XBOX 360 last year that started gathering dust after the first halftime, "Madden NFL 08," released on Aug. 14 to sports-loving gamers everywhere. It is everything "Madden NFL 07" wasn’t and finally combines the graphics and possibilities of a next-generation system with the features and mainstays that made the previous-generation Madden versions must-buys.

Franchise mode has been beefed up to EA Sports standards, with features that leave even the most intense players satisfied. The fantasy draft is back, meaning you can still be the 49ers but not have the 49ers. Owner mode is returned in a way, as you can build new stadiums, get sponsorship deals, and analyze your finances, which is always exciting. Injured players can be rehabbed with the goal of getting on the field faster but the risk of getting hurt even more and sitting out for weeks.

The actual game is easy the best in history. The animations give it a lifelike quality, with gang tackles, highlight catches and running backs pushing their linemen across the goal line. The weapons system tells you who your key players are and where the opponents are as well, and they live up to their featured attributes. Accurate passer Drew Brees can carve up defenses until locked down corner Champ Bailey steps in to nail one of his passes for six, as he is prone to do.

All in all, "Madden NFL 08" is easily worth the $59.99. If you can’t afford that right now, consider not buying that biology textbook.

Aside from a few gripes, such as the EA Sports radio announcer who bores you to death, this year’s Madden game is too good to pass up.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Tennessee Titans quarterback Vince Young appears on the cover of "Madden NFL 08," the latest version of the popular video game. This version was released worldwide on Aug. 14. Below, scenes from "Madden NFL 08" showcase the game’s enhanced animation.

Graig Mantle, commonly known as Firehawk to fellow gamers, is the Mustang Daily photo editor and an avid gamer.
Eric Betts

Don't exploit kids for entertainment

It's difficult to resist comparing CBS's new reality show "Kid Nation" to William Golding's classic 1954 novel "Lord of the Flies." In the former, 40 children are set loose on the unpopulated island town of Bonanza City, New Mexico, with instructions from the show's producers to set up their own community, one which the show's trailers promise will involve "no adults."

Here the kids, ages 8 to 13, compete in challenges to earn the choice jobs in the town, run their own general store (which, judging by the promotional materials, apparently sells nothing but candy) and their own saloon (which apparently sells nothing but beer) and run elections for the four spots on the town's council, which both manages the day-to-day affairs and chooses a recipient each episode for the "Gold Star" award, a two-pound hunk of gold which is actually worth $20,000 dollars.

The show premieres on CBS tonight at 9 p.m.

In the latter, a group of English schoolboys, ages 6 to 12, find themselves stranded on an island after the plane they're using to evacuate wartime England is shot down. Once again, there are no adults around to spoil the fun.

On the island, the boys talk themselves into the experience as being an opportunity for adventure, but before long they've been divided into polemical governing factions led by two rival Type-A personalities and spend much of the rest of the book committing theft, murder and other atrocities to one another.

The focus of "Lord of the Flies" is the balancing act within mankind between the instinct for savagery and the order, law-abiding, justice-seeking part of our nature and the greedy, violent, selfish, power-hungry part. Our inner Superman versus our inner Lex Luthor.

Of course, I recognize that just because the plot of "Lord of the Flies" bears similarities to the concept for CBS's show doesn't mean that one of the older children will force six 9-year-olds to carry him around town on a litter. Nor will the youngsters be tearing each other limb from limb by the sixth episode.

The "no adults" rule of "Kid Nation" seems not to apply to cameramen, producers, media, animal wranglers, wildlife experts, child psychologists and the show's host, actor-producer Jonathan Kasch. Presumably the presence of these adults will prevent the proceedings from growing too hedonistic.

But these similarities are still striking enough to give pause to the whole idea: Yes, the kids may be safe and yes, as CBS seems to point out at every available opportunity, the kids can leave Bonanza City at any time.

But even so, didn't someone in the upper echelons of the network realize that the idea of depriving children of their friends, families and parents for 40 days for the purpose of boosting network ratings is perhaps a little exploitative?

That the kids were doing on the show, hauling buckets of water, cleaning latrines, milking goats, was, well, work, and as such is a violation of child labor laws? That the purpose of the show -- the reason viewers are going to tune in in the first place -- is not to see the kids constructing a society; it's to watch them fail at constructing a society and relish in the scramble of tears and tantrums which follow? CBS all but admits this in their instructions.

Interpersed with clips of the kids hogging Dutch ovens full of macaroni and cheese, pumping water or hauling a wagon full of stuff up and down the dusty streets of Bonanza City are images of the children throwing fits, screaming in octaves high enough to shatter wineglasses and crying almost incessantly. The show isn't a story about overcoming hardship to come together and create something productive -- it's a train wreck waiting to happen in your living room.

The comparison to "Lord of the Flies" is just another marketing hook.

Everyone from the Los Angeles Times to the Guardian in London has written about "Kid Nation" producer Tom Forman's attempts to get around child labor laws.

Apparently the set evaded New Mexico labor laws because producers claimed it was a summer camp, not a worksite. And anyway, according to the producers, since the kids weren't actually employees of CBS, or child actors, but instead participants in the show/experience, the hard labor clearly depicted in the preview doesn't count.

Parents attending the final day of filming even reported cases where the show's crew forced the children to reshoot a scene, feeding them dialogue to heighten the drama or conflict.

All this together, and there's no way these producers and the network aren't exploiting these young boys for the sake of a ratings war and publicity buzz. And this is where the comparison between "Kid Nation" and "Lord of the Flies" comes into play. The battle in the show isn't between civilization and savagery. The kids know they are there to build a society and, despite some minor hiccups, they presumably do so by looking out for and helping one another.

It's the producers and the network who are playing to the instinct of the savages: the greed, the desire for power and ratings, and survival in the kill-or-be-killed world of network television. They don't care about these kids; they'd do anything to them for the sake of ratings and advertising dollars and the advancement of their own careers.

In a quote often associated with Golding's book, from Act IV of "King Lear," the senile king of the title says: "As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods! They kill us for their sport." Should we really be giving that godly power to a bunch of producers and TV executives?
Hey ‘weirdo,’ listen to this

Brian Cassidy
SPECIAL TO THE DAILY

“Weirdo Rippers,” the latest album from No Age, debuts in a tidal wave of hype that could drown a weaker album in the heightened expectations. The album begs relevant and merited discussions about debuts in a tidal wave of hype that would drown a...
Could a video game put the country in check?

By The Numbers

By David Soler

Girls against the campus, have you bought enough Kleenex? In one week, your boyfriends are going to ditch you.

Professors, are you ready for a hit to your egos? In less than seven days your empty morning classes will be commonplace. Please be lenient.

Undergrads will have no choice but to surrender against the rival's that hitting campus Sept. 25. Scores of people will be forced into voluntary reclusion. He's faceless, he's green, and they call him the Master Chief.

For the uninstructed that know nothing of what I'm about, the issue is simple: "Halo 3," or a video game for second-class gamers — as all console users are compared to PCs ones — is being released next week. I still find myself bewildered, wondering how a gamepad-based first person shooter — FPS — appeals to so many compared to the supremacy of the mouse-controlled FPS on PCs. One of the plausible explanations is that PCs are still too expensive and consoles are an acceptable consolation prize.

But if you take a closer look, overall console maintenance — each video game can cost $50, plus online gaming fees and accessories — can easily go beyond an acceptable $600 Dell desktop. Then the alternate explanation is solipsism. After all, everybody knows PC's superior graphics are the leading daddy in the video game world.

But anyway, the first "Halo" that appeared in 2001 already shatterd selling records. Five months following the initial release, it sold one million units, propelling the console junkies to buy more Xboxes to play with. Then in the winter of 2004, "Halo 2" escaped from Bungie's prison and wreaked havoc again: massive lines of video game vampires in front of selling stores angered soap companies with a drop in hygiene-related products sales. But with "Halo 2" $125 million was earned within its first 24 hours in the market, beating Captain Sparrow's "Dead Man's Chest" as the highest-grossing release in entertainment history. I told you, so be ready for Sept. 25 when "Halo 3" will hit the roads. This time we should expect a war in your hormone levels, a rise in unemployment and school failure.

and a parallel sky-rocket jump in obsessive-compulsive disorder drug prescriptions.

I could try to warn you against buying the game, pin-pointing, for example, that the main character is just a refined-beam copy of "DOOM"s space marine reconverted into a "muntant soldier" searching for some ark in order to increase sales. Or that in graphics, even for a seventh-generation console, compared with "Quake 4," will make you laugh. But I know my words are futile against a "Halo 3"-infected brain. No matter how we warn them, these cavern-prone homo sapiens are already conditioned to buying it.

It's sad, but in one week, girl friends and professors alike — myself included — can just wait and listen to Fort Minor's Insight singing: a 100 percent reason to remember the name.

The Mustang Daily is a free news source for the Cal Poly campus and surrounding community. We appreciate your understanding and are thankful for your careful reading. Please send your correction suggestions to mustangdaily@gmail.com.

notes

The Mustang Daily is a "designated public forum." Student editors have full authority to make all content decisions without censorship or advance approval.

The Mustang Daily is a free newspaper; however, the removal of more than one copy of the paper per day is subject to a cost of $50 per issue.

Staff Editorial

Just one more obstacle before the dream becomes a reality, but the state legislature recently passed The California Dream Act, which would allow undocumented students to apply for state financial aid. The bill, authored by state Sen. Gilbert Cedillo, now awaits approval from Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Opponents to the Dream Act believe that since undocumented students are not legal citizens, they are not entitled to any share of the state resources. If the bill passes, then these students would be taking away money from people who also hail from disadvantaged backgrounds, but are legal citizens and thus more deserving.

However, undocumented students who have worked hard enough to gain admissions to college have earned this support. Their efforts should be rewarded, not punished. Many of them are children of illegal immigrants, who indignantly contribute to California's prosperous economy.

The Dream Act is an investment in California's future — undocumented students who are encouraged to pursue higher education will have better access to higher-paying jobs and send role models to their communities.

The passing of the Dream Act has also been a great triumph for the University of California Students Association. The UCSA and its partners demonstrated that their extensive lobbying efforts for the passage of the Dream Act were successful. I hope their strategy and success can be repeated for other important campus issues such as student fees.

Last year, Schwarzenegger vetoed a similar bill authored by Cedillo. I hope that this year the Dream Act will see a better fate. As Chancellor Robert Birgeneau wrote in an op-ed to The Los Angeles Times, "Every year that passes, we deny another class of talented, keen young people hopeful futures for themselves and their families and relegate another generation to an existence on margins of society. They cannot wait.
Cheating

continued from page 12

"He was sitting up there writing away," Dooley said, without naming either coach. "It was just a blatant violation of the rules."

For years, coaches have suspected that someone is lurking in the shadows, chronicling the league's top plays and learning if any key players were injured.

"I wouldn't put it past some guys," said Oklahoma's Bob Stoops, one of the more suspicious coaches in the country.

The Sooners run practices as though they're guarding state secrets. All workouts during the season are closed. The field is surrounded by high fences and shrubbery. Security guards in golf carts patrol the perimeter, pouncing on anyone who has the nerve to even walk by slowly.

Sometimes when Oklahoma lets in fans for a preseason scrimmage, Stoops will order one side of the stadium closed so the coaches' backs are to everyone sitting the stands. In explaining his reason, he sounds like a holdover from the Cold War.

"I don't want someone sitting out here watching one of our scrimmages and we're just sitting here giving it all away," Stoops said. "We put our back to everybody so if anyone walks by, I can't tell what the heck is happening out there half the time," the coach told a reporter. "I know you guys can't, either."

Richt usually allows family members and former players to watch practice, and he would also let in the media for the first half-hour before the team got down to its serious work.

Not this week with the No. 22 Bulldogs (2-1) preparing for a trip to Tuscasona.

"If it were up to me and I could get away with it, I would just as soon close it down permanently," Richt said. "There's not much information getting out over the Internet than what we're doing, but if you have anybody's signals, we have someone watching our opponents and try to figure them out, which we were never smart enough to do."

NFL commissioner Roger Goddell fined Belichick's New England Patriots $250,000 after the team had someone videotaping signals on the New York Jets sideline during the season opener. The team also will have to forfeit draft picks, depending on how well it does this year.

"I hear people say in the business world sometimes, 'We're always trying to create a winning edge,'" Saban said. "In sports, we'd all like to try to do that. But we all have to be careful that we always do that with full respect for the rules."

Richt said he's more concerned about information getting out over the Internet than he is about another school sending someone to Athens on a spying mission. It might be something as innocuous as a student assistant telling a friend about a particular play. The next thing you know, the friend has posted the info on a MySpace page.

"When you're out there practicing, doing whatever it is you're doing, it wouldn't take a veteran coach to understand what's happening," Richt said. "You wonder who might see it and who say something about it. It might even be your own people."

So, who's barred from practice this week?

"Any face," Richt said, "that we don't really recognize."
CLASSIFIEDS

HELP WANTED

Housing
- Free list of all houses and condos For Sale in SLO. Call Nelson Real Estate (805) 546-1990 or email steve@slohomes.com

Shout Outs! Free every Thursday! Submit an ad by email at mustangdailyopinions@gmail.com

Lost and Found
- Place your classifieds ad! Call Jackie (805) 756-1143

HELP WANTED

- Part Time to 5 Mon-Fri Needed: Part time helping packing stretcher bars to fill orders and help stretching canvas art. Must be able to lift heavy boxes and be reliable. Call 526-2244 for more information

- Illustration, Design, Graphic Freelance Illustration design Experience w/ Adobe Illustrator. Reply: rmurtagh@yahoo.com

- Movie Extras. New opportunities for upcoming productions. All looks needed no experience required for cast calls. Call 877-218-6224

- Undercover Shoppers Earn up to $150 per day. Undercover shopping. Shoppers needed to judge retail and dining establishments. Exp. Not RE. Call 800-722-4791

- Simple Church Conference - Oct. 12-14 in SLO. Get involved with the simple church, house church, or organic church movement that is sweeping nations and campuses. SimpleChurchConference.com or (805) 550-4668

- Need MANDARIN speaking woman to spend time with my 4 year old daughter. Call Kathy @ 610-1258

HELP WANTED

- Volunteer at Cal Poly Student Community Services
  - Stop by UU Room 217! or (805) 756-2511
  - On-Campus AA Meetings Wed., 3-30-4-30, Health Center, Building 27, Room 153. More info at (805) 756-2511

- Mustang Daily Classifieds
  - Online and on print!
  - www.mustangdaily.net/classifieds

CLASSIFIEDS

SPORTS

Volleyball
- continued from page 12

Fans
- continued from page 12

The New York Times

Crossword

Across
- 1 Toyota Camry model
- 5 Dietary needs
- 13 Pizza hut
- 14 1980 jobs
- 20 Back to the
- 21 Sarcastic reply
- 22 Carpooler charter
- 24 Peach, e.g.
- 27 Nice to
- 28 Hard-rock connector
- 29 Cheerful
- 30 Rest on the
- 31 Anime
- 32 Engage
- 33 Perform
- 34 Header
- 35 A/C meas.
- 36 1991
- 37 In progress
- 38 Graphic
- 39 1990's comic
- 40 Reward for a
- 41 Poetic times
- 42 Female
- 43 In the style
- 44 In progress
- 45 La-la lead-in
- 46 Devil Ray or
- 47 Icemaker
- 48 Needed Part time helping to lift heavy boxes and be
- 49 Eighteen
- 50 Prefix with cab
- 51 Baba ___ (5)
- 52 N  a
- 53 Coeur d'Alene's lack

Down
- 1 Grassy expanse
- 2 "Shoot"
- 3 Looked like a wolf
- 4 Music, across the
- 5 Grand slammers
- 6 Posthumous
- 7 Flimflam
- 8 Turn over
- 10 Superior to
- 12 Marquee topper
- 15 "Doomday" get
- 17 2007-3-14
- 18 Doctor, I feel cold
- 19 Starchy dessert
- 20 1944 Hitchcock
- 21 13:30 a.m.
- 22 Musical comedy
- 23 Favorite
- 24 1970's tennis
- 25 Part of a crosswords from the last 50 years: 1 -888-7-ACROSS.
- 26 In progress
- 27 1969 and 2000
- 28 Halfback
- 29 Cheerful
- 30 Reason the kids
- 31 Border on
- 32 1980 jobs
- 33 1944 Hitchcock
- 34 3b
- 35 1944 Hitchcock
- 36 Two-toned" or
- 37 A/C meas.
- 38 Graphic
- 39 1990's comic
- 40 Reward for a
- 41 Poetic times
- 42 Female
- 43 In the style
- 44 In progress
- 45 La-la lead-in
- 46 Devil Ray or
- 47 Icemaker
- 48 Needed Part time helping to lift heavy boxes and be
- 49 Eighteen
- 50 Prefix with cab
- 51 Baba ___ (5)
- 52 N  a
- 53 Coeur d'Alene's lack

Edited by Will Shortz

No. 0088

54 Scuff marks on the
- 55 Bespectacled
- 56 Young
- 57 Young
- 58 Young
- 59 Young
- 60 "Norma "
- 61 Poison Ivy
- 62 "Norma "
- 63 "Norma "
- 64 In progress
- 65 Alley pickups

Puzzle by Dan S. Levin

CLASSIFIEDS

HELP WANTED

Housing
- Free list of all houses and condos For Sale in SLO. Call Nelson Real Estate (805) 546-1990 or email steve@slohomes.com

Shout Outs! Free every Thursday! Submit an ad by email at mustangdailyopinions@gmail.com

Lost and Found
- Place your classifieds ad! Call Jackie (805) 756-1143

HELP WANTED

- Part Time to 5 Mon-Fri Needed: Part time helping packing stretcher bars to fill orders and help stretching canvas art. Must be able to lift heavy boxes and be reliable. Call 526-2244 for more information

- Illustration, Design, Graphic Freelance Illustration design Experience w/ Adobe Illustrator. Reply: rmurtagh@yahoo.com

- Movie Extras. New opportunities for upcoming productions. All looks needed no experience required for cast calls. Call 877-218-6224

- Undercover Shoppers Earn up to $150 per day. Undercover shopping. Shoppers needed to judge retail and dining establishments. Exp. Not RE. Call 800-722-4791

- Simple Church Conference - Oct. 12-14 in SLO. Get involved with the simple church, house church, or organic church movement that is sweeping nations and campuses. SimpleChurchConference.com or (805) 550-4668

- Need MANDARIN speaking woman to spend time with my 4 year old daughter. Call Kathy @ 610-1258

I remained, for the most part, quiet when the Wildcats opened the game with a safety, and also in the second quarter when quarterback Jonathan Dithy threw for four touchdowns, putting the team up 13-0 halfway through the second quarter.

The Mustangs fed off of the home—crowd factor. It’s probable that the coincidence that when the student section dwindled to close to non—existent late in the second half, the Wildcats were able to pick up 16 points and the Mustangs stopped scoring.

Then again, the Weber State scoring might have been the consequence of the Munics escaping from the asylum to selfishly feed their heads with parties on Hatha—way.

Let’s not forget — those of you who were here last year — Oct. 21 2006 when a majority of students left at halftime of the Homcoming game against South Dakota State that Jackrabbits’ quarterback Andy Kaderwicz passed for three—fourth—quarter touchdowns to help his team overcome the 26–6 halftime deficit to beat the Mustangs 29–28.

It’s college. The parties aren’t going anywhere. And when you turn 21 (if you haven’t already) the bar is open. Now is the last call until 1:30 a.m. — 1:35 a.m. if you know the right place.

Be the one at the post—game party that has the game recap of Cal Poly’s come—from—behind win over Anytown State in (insert your preferred sport here) or the person that saw the streaker run from foul pole to foul pole during the seventh inning stretch of a baseball game.

If you’re not the type to talk sports, just stay and soak up the free event and meet new people.

The bottom line: Don’t leave the games. The teams need you.
The Cal Poly men's soccer team defeated the Wright State Raiders Tuesday night at Alex G. Spanos Stadium 3-0.

Cal Poly (4-1-0) took the early lead of the night when cloak-and-dagger coaches worry that opponents are spying on practices, stealing signals and using all sorts of nefarious tactics to get an edge, apparently with good reason.

Josh Ayers
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

A little over a month ago, the men's soccer head coach, Paul Holocher, and assistant coach Brian Reed came into the Mustang Daily newsroom to promote the then-upcoming exhibition match against then-No. 11 California.

The two were on fire to bring an interest to the sport and even more enthusiasm about christening the Alex G. Spanos Stadium with a large crowd for the first sporting event since the remodel.

Admittedly, I checked when they left the room. I was impressed with their zeal for the game and an intense interest to get the student crowd into the seats but I mean seriously, what was so exciting about soccer? It's a low-scoring game with a lot of running and passing and occasionally a goal here and there.

About five minutes after arriving to cover the game I regretted ever having doubted the two as I watched 2,821 loud soccer supporters file into the stadium to see how their team paired up against one of the nations best programs.

Sophomore outside hitter Ashley Bertoni goes up for a kill against her teammates during the first Green and Gold Match held at Mott Gym on Tuesday evening. Cal Poly hosts Long Beach State on Friday.

Poly rolls past Raiders

SPORTS INFORMATION OFFICE

The Cal Poly men's soccer team defeated the Wright State Raiders Tuesday night at Alex G. Spanos Stadium 3-0.

Cal Poly (4-1-0) took the early lead of the night scoring in the eighth minute of first half by freshmen Kyle Montgomery.

Montgomery received the ball from K.J. Lenehan and then dribbled past the defenders and sent the ball over the goalie's head to the right back corner of the net.

Daniel Cumming extended the Mustang lead 2-0 with the second goal of the night. The goal marks Cumming's fourth goal of the season.

The Mustangs continued to dominate in the first half when Tim White, fresh off of the bench, scored the third goal of the evening to finish cap scoring in the half and put Cal Poly up 3-0.

Cal Poly recorded 12 shots on net to the Raiders three shots during the first half.

The second half remained scoreless as the Mustangs recorded another shut out for the season.

Eric Brayagan-Franco shared tonight's shoot out with goalkeeper Collin Scalley who saw his first minutes of the season.

The duo recorded four saves to Wright State's seven. The Mustangs out-fouled the Raiders 13-6.

The Mustangs improved to 3-0-0 for the season.

The Late Flag

Wanted: complete fan support

Josh Ayers
Assistant Sports Editor

Admittedly, I checked when they left the room. I was impressed with their zeal for the game and an intense interest to get the student crowd into the seats but I mean seriously, what was so exciting about soccer? It's a low-scoring game with a lot of running and passing and occasionally a goal here and there.

About five minutes after arriving to cover the game I regretted ever having doubted the two as I watched 2,821 loud soccer supporters file into the stadium to see how their team paired up against one of the nations best programs.

Sophomore outside hitter Ashley Bertoni goes up for a kill against her teammates during the first Green and Gold Match held at Mott Gym on Tuesday evening. Cal Poly hosts Long Beach State on Friday.

Poly rolls past Raiders

SPORTS INFORMATION OFFICE

The Cal Poly men's soccer team defeated the Wright State Raiders Tuesday night at Alex G. Spanos Stadium 3-0.

Cal Poly (4-1-0) took the early lead of the night scoring in the eighth minute of first half by freshmen Kyle Montgomery.

Montgomery received the ball from K.J. Lenehan and then dribbled past the defenders and sent the ball over the goalie's head to the right back corner of the net.

Daniel Cumming extended the Mustang lead 2-0 with the second goal of the night. The goal marks Cumming's fourth goal of the season.

The Mustangs continued to dominate in the first half when Tim White, fresh off of the bench, scored the third goal of the evening to finish cap scoring in the half and put Cal Poly up 3-0.

Cal Poly recorded 12 shots on net to the Raiders three shots during the first half.

The second half remained scoreless as the Mustangs recorded another shut out for the season.

Eric Brayagan-Franco shared tonight's shoot out with goalkeeper Collin Scalley who saw his first minutes of the season.

The duo recorded four saves to Wright State's seven. The Mustangs out-fouled the Raiders 13-6.

The Mustangs improved to 3-0-0 for the season.

The Late Flag

Wanted: complete fan support

Josh Ayers
Assistant Sports Editor

Admittedly, I checked when they left the room. I was impressed with their zeal for the game and an intense interest to get the student crowd into the seats but I mean seriously, what was so exciting about soccer? It's a low-scoring game with a lot of running and passing and occasionally a goal here and there.

About five minutes after arriving to cover the game I regretted ever having doubted the two as I watched 2,821 loud soccer supporters file into the stadium to see how their team paired up against one of the nations best programs.

Sophomore outside hitter Ashley Bertoni goes up for a kill against her teammates during the first Green and Gold Match held at Mott Gym on Tuesday evening. Cal Poly hosts Long Beach State on Friday.

Poly rolls past Raiders

SPORTS INFORMATION OFFICE

The Cal Poly men's soccer team defeated the Wright State Raiders Tuesday night at Alex G. Spanos Stadium 3-0.

Cal Poly (4-1-0) took the early lead of the night scoring in the eighth minute of first half by freshmen Kyle Montgomery.

Montgomery received the ball from K.J. Lenehan and then dribbled past the defenders and sent the ball over the goalie's head to the right back corner of the net.

Daniel Cumming extended the Mustang lead 2-0 with the second goal of the night. The goal marks Cumming's fourth goal of the season.

The Mustangs continued to dominate in the first half when Tim White, fresh off of the bench, scored the third goal of the evening to finish cap scoring in the half and put Cal Poly up 3-0.

Cal Poly recorded 12 shots on net to the Raiders three shots during the first half.

The second half remained scoreless as the Mustangs recorded another shut out for the season.

Eric Brayagan-Franco shared tonight's shoot out with goalkeeper Collin Scalley who saw his first minutes of the season.

The duo recorded four saves to Wright State's seven. The Mustangs out-fouled the Raiders 13-6.

The Raiders fell 2-3-0 for the season.

The Mustangs improved to 3-0-0 for the season.

The Late Flag

Wanted: complete fan support

Josh Ayers
Assistant Sports Editor

Admittedly, I checked when they left the room. I was impressed with their zeal for the game and an intense interest to get the student crowd into the seats but I mean seriously, what was so exciting about soccer? It's a low-scoring game with a lot of running and passing and occasionally a goal here and there.

About five minutes after arriving to cover the game I regretted ever having doubted the two as I watched 2,821 loud soccer supporters file into the stadium to see how their team paired up against one of the nations best programs.

Sophomore outside hitter Ashley Bertoni goes up for a kill against her teammates during the first Green and Gold Match held at Mott Gym on Tuesday evening. Cal Poly hosts Long Beach State on Friday.