Library cuts prompt widespread concern
Attention focuses on fund raising

By Jane Phillips
Staff Writer

Library administrators are responding to concerns stated by several faculty members regarding cuts in library services.

David Walsh, dean of Library Services, said some parents have also expressed concerns over the reduction of services offered to their sons or daughters.

"The library seems to be one of the most widely used services on campus, but it has no alumni of its own to support it," Walsh said.

Charlie Crab, interim assistant vice president for Academic Resources, said, "Everyone on the Dean's Council agreed these cuts definitely did not come at a good time for the library."

With subscription costs rising and no increase to the acquisitions budget over the past three years, the library was already seeing a decrease in actual dollars available to buy journals before the budget cuts, Walsh said.

"The inflation rate for journals has increased 30 percent, while the acquisitions budget has increased only 1.4 percent," he said.

Additionally, the governor's 7.5 percent sales tax on magazines will cost an additional $35,000 this year alone," he said.

Approximately 300 subscriptions to journals will be canceled, he said.

Craob said, "Cuts for the entire university are so deep that you could not (exempt) the library altogether."

The library falls under Academic Affairs, which is responsible for 77.1 percent of the university's total reductions of about $7,732,000, Craob said.

Cal Poly's total budget was cut in excess of $10 million, he said.

The library's portion of the university's budget reduction is $435,000, Walsh said.

Walsh said 16.1 positions have been left vacant — some since last November, in anticipation of the coming budget cuts — which amounts to $152,000 in salary savings.

"An additional 5.5 positions had previously been taken to assist in meeting the university's unidentified reductions," he said.

There are 21.6 vacant library positions, which is 25 percent of all library positions, he said.

From that total, Walsh said, approximately 4,000 student assistant hours will be cut.

Judicial review

As the U.S. Senate continues to debate the nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court and readiness to vote this week, the rest of the country is wondering what Thomas' approval could mean to the future of the American legal system.

Part of the national confusion over President Bush's nominee is due to an overall lack of information on Thomas' views toward important legal issues, said several Cal Poly political science professors.

"Like most people, what disturbs me is the total lack of professional accomplishment I see in this nominee," said political science professor John Culver.

"This man has done nothing to distinguish himself in the legal field, and a member of the Supreme Court should have unquestionable talent," Culver said.

Culver said this lack of accomplishment in the national arena would make it difficult to gauge Thomas' opinions on many of the more pressing issues facing the Supreme Court in the coming months.

"His political perspective is conservative, of course, but most of the other justices on the Supreme Court are as well," Culver said. "There is just no way to guess how he will vote on important decisions based on his past experience, because he has no real past experience. Even (previous Supreme Court nominee) David Souter, the original stealth candidate, had over 20 years experience at the national level."

Political science professor Allen Settle agreed with Culver's concern about the lack of information about Thomas.

"Thomas has never made clear how his judicial thought processes on Thomas, page 4

Fraternity, sorority postpone lease plans

By Ted Holz
Staff Writer

The plan to lease two motels off Monterey Street to a Cal Poly fraternity and a sorority is raising a mixed response among area residents.

The proposal was set to go before the San Luis Obispo Planning Commission Sept. 25, but the developer, John King, withdrew it to be submitted later. A new date has not been set.

One of the reasons it was pulled was to allow fraternity members the "opportunity to show that we can be good neighbors," said Paul Hollerbach, president of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, which is planning to lease the Frontier Motel on Buena Vista Avenue.

The developer, John King, withdrew the plan to lease the Frontier Motel on Buena Vista Avenue.

Alpha Omicron Pi sorority is already occupying the nearby Donnington Motel on Henderson Avenue as regular motel guests.

Neighbors of the motels are mixed in their opinions of the plan, but most are at least concerned.

"This is not the place for a fraternity," said a resident of Henderson Avenue who declined to be named. "He said that the original plans were for two motels and should not be changed. He cited parking, noise and increased traffic as potential problems.

Some of the area residents, however, noted good relations with current or former student neighbors in their cautious support for the proposal.

"We have found the students to be good neighbors," said nearby resident John Hanley, "and as long as that continues, we'll support them 100 percent."

Chinese police stop drug trafficking ring

BELUNG (AP) — Police shot and killed a drug smuggler armed with a grenade while breaking up a trafficking ring, an official said.

Bui, in the southwestern Chinese province of Yunnan arrested four other people, including a Burmese, and seized 35.5 pounds of heroin, the grenade and an electrically operated detonator during an interrogation.

The official said police shot and killed Peng Jiaming after struggling with him as he tried to trigger the grenade during an interrogation on Sept. 30.

Authorities said the heroin came from the "Golden Triangle" that neighbors Yunnan, Laos and Thailand.

Japanese firm admits to stock improprieties

TOKYO (AP) — Nomura Securities Co., admitted Monday that it had improperly promoted shares of a railroad stock that had been owned by an organized crime figure.

Takashi Ishii, president of the world's largest brokerage, told a Finance Ministry hearing that in October 1988, it had urged customers to buy a large number of shares of Tokyo Corp., a railroad-based conglomerate.

But the ministry, which itself has been accused of lax regulation of the finance industry, did not address allegations during the half-hour hearing that Nomura had manipulated the stock to benefit Susumu Ishii, a former leader of the Inagawa-ko organized crime group.

Ishii, who died in August, had boasted millions of shares of Tokyo through Nomura.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, in a press release, said the ministry had "done our jobs."

"Just because you're nominated doesn't mean you'll be picked," Singleton said.

Cadets nominated must meet the following criteria, he said:
- Be contracted cadets, meaning they've signed a contract and are obligated to the U.S. Army.
- Be in the upper half of their Military Science class.
- Have a minimum 3.0 grade point average.
- Possess a secret security clearance.

Carroll met these requirements and has won several awards including the Marshall Award, a national award for all top cadets.

At advanced camp for ROTC cadets, Carroll earned the highest score of "O" which puts him in the top 10 percent of his platoon. According to army information, the purpose of the Pentagon Visitation is to provide an opportunity for Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets to observe and assist in the daily operations of a major policy-making element of the U.S. Army.

Carroll will report to the Office of the Under Secretary of the Army for two days of training at the Pentagon. Through the ROTC, Cal Poly Military Science professors will ensure that Carroll has a round-trip ticket to Washington National Airport as well as sufficient funds for expenses such as meals and transportation. The government later will reimburse the ROTC for the expenses. Carroll was on active duty until July 1989 when he decided to return to school. He was accepted to Cal Poly and was able to waive the first two years of the ROTC program because of prior service. He was in the army on active duty before he returned to school and joined the reserves.

He finished his class requirements and the ROTC program last spring, but has an extension on his scholarship. After he graduates in spring 1992, he plans to go on to earn a master's degree. While at Cal Poly, Carroll has maintained a grade point average of 3.885 in business administration following a concentration in management information systems. He also dedicates his services as an assistant instructor for a leadership management course, MSC 215, under the supervision of Singleton.

Singleton describes Carroll's performance in the ROTC program as flawless.

Valerie Steinmann has also found students to be considerate and in support of the change.

"There might be a problem because of traffic," she said, mentioning it as a problem that may be elevated by increased traffic.

A petition has been circulated in the area in opposition to the proposed change. City planner Judy Lautner said there were about 100 signatures on the petition.

To officially allow a fraternity or sorority to lease the buildings, a zone change to medium-high-density residential is required, said Lautner. After the Planning Commission makes a recommendation, the proposal will then go to the City Council.

The new zone also mandates that the developer acquire a use permit, she said.

"It requires a hearing before the Planning Commission in addition to the hearing on rezoning," Lautner said.

King, the developer, could not be reached for comment.

ROTC cadet chosen for training visit to Pentagon

By Holly Gilbert

Staff Writer

Cal Poly ROTC cadet Steve Carroll has been selected for the Pentagon Visitation Program in November, a recognition Capt. Dave Singleton said was a high honor.

The selection process for this award is a very positive, Singleton said. There are four regions within the United States, the Southern, Northern, Midwestern and Western regions. Every year, one cadet is selected from each of the four regions, which rotate representation by quarter.

Fall quarter is the Western region's turn. The region begins its selection at the college level and through a process of elimination, ends up with two cadets. From this, the more-qualified cadet is selected to join the program.

Carroll was selected this fall to represent the Western region, which includes areas as far east as Minnesota and as far west as Dallas. "Just because you're nominated doesn't mean you'll be picked," Singleton said.

Cadets nominated must meet the following criteria, he said:
- Be contracted cadets, meaning they've signed a contract and are obligated to the U.S. Army.

Poly's Strategic Planning Document faces reviews by faculty, students

By Allison Gatlin

Staff Writer

Cal Poly's direction over the next century will be under discussion throughout this year as students, faculty and staff review the university's Strategic Planning Document.

"This document provides a platform for open and free discussion about Cal Poly by her students, faculty and staff," wrote Vice President for Academic Affairs Robert Koob in a letter accompanying the document. "The document, a working draft at this point, addresses seven issues facing the university in its planning for the future — academic progress, scholarly activities, student satisfaction, educational equity, governance and collegiality, institutional size and university image.

This working draft was written by three different planning committees — the Oversight Strategic Planning Committee, the Academic Planning Committee and the Educational Equity Committee, said Bonnie Taddy, administrative assistant to Koob. General goals and more specific objectives have been set by the planning committees for each of the issues.

Because each issue was considered separately, the dates mentioned in the objectives are not realistic, Taddy said.

According to the preface of the document, this will lead to a second planning process, in which goals will be given priority and methods of accomplishing them will be discussed.

Each unit on campus will have a method of proposing changes to the document, according to Koob's letter.

Students may voice their comments. See PLANNING, page 8.
CONVENTION HONORS ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Club Called 'Best Student Section'

By Brian Volk
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly chapter of the Society of Women Engineers was named the "Best Student Section" out of 245 groups in the United States at a SWE national convention last summer.

Cal Poly is the first non-Ph.D.-granting university to win the award since its inception 16 years ago. "This is a big step for us," said Jeannie Acasto, Cal Poly's SWE advisor. "Winning this award has really opened our eyes to the importance of our political views, the great impact we can have in the nation."

The award was presented to 27 representatives of Cal Poly's SWE at the conclusion of the five-day SWE National Convention held in San Diego. Previous winners of the award have included UC Berkeley, Cornell University and Purdue University.

"It was a great experience," said Gail Davidson, a Cal Poly materials engineering graduate. "This is a big step for us," said Jeannie Acasto, Cal Poly's SWE advisor. "Winning this award has really opened our eyes to the importance of our political views, the great impact we can have in the nation."

CSU opens administrative door to Latinos

Program provides training, advancement

By Barbara Barcelona

More Latinos will be put in administrative positions within the California State University system if a project initiated by Chancellor Barry Munitz is successful.

On Sept. 11, Chancellor Munitz appointed Victor Rocha as chairman of the Administration Development Program. The program is intended to provide opportunities for Latinos to be career-developed by engaging in mentorships with senior administrators around the CSU system (in order to increase the number of Latinos working within the CSU system)," said Rocha. The idea is to put talented people in positions where they can work with administrative financial and legal issues.

"The demographics of the state show there is no question to the fact that the Latino population is growing dramatically," MacCarthy said. "From 1980 alone at one time there were a half a million in California as Latinos.

Latino enrollment in kindergarten through 12th grade is expected to go from 1.5 million to 3.1 million within the decade, MacCarthy said.

"Of all the Ph.D.s given, only 2.9 percent went to Latinos," he added.

Rocha said many of the administrative positions are filled with faculty who have worked their way up the ranks. The program will provide more opportunities for Latino faculty members to do the same.

The Administration Development Program will be CSU system-wide, MacCarthy said. "We will find them jobs after completing the internship," MacCarthy said.

The first group of interns is expected to begin next fall. "We will find them jobs after completing the internship," MacCarthy said.

There are four people on the committee and one staff member right now, but Rocha hopes to get more help as the idea develops. Meetings are set up to discuss ideas and opinions for the project.

Ann Marenko, which has a total enrollment of 50, has a minority faculty representation of three times higher than the national and CSU average, Rocha said. Rocha also is one of the university faculty representatives overall, according to Rocha, the Administration Development Program is a step toward encouraging other universities to become more ethnically diverse.

"The chancellor feels it is an important issue," Rocha said. "This is a Barry Munitz project and we are here to help. The chancellor should be congratulated for it," Rocha said.

A cafe nightmare in San Luis Obispo

By Peter Hartlaub

With perhaps the exception of watching drunk people vomit after eating Mexican food, there is nothing so overtly "witty" as open-mike poetry at Linnaea's Cafe.

I think that if a real poet such as Robert Frost heard open-mike poetry at Linnaea's, he would immediately give up his career, join the ITT and become a welder.

My adventure started during my biannual date in August. My winter biannual date flies in from Alaska and makes me pay for the plane ticket. Sarah, my summer date, is from Salinas, comes up on her own and likes hockey. The hockey thing alone makes me feel like two porcupines are convoluting in my stomach whenever I see her.

We went to the end of a nice evening, ready for a casual conversation over a cup of coffee. We walked by a fleet of Vespa scooters as the scent of beet, sandalwood and defiantly un apologized for wearing earth tones. We walked in and ordered two coffees. The clerk laughed at our request of CAPTURE with more class than you.

We made a quick burst for the patio, desperately trying to keep in the calamari we had eaten for dinner. While we were out of the way from the poetry from hell, we had eaten an animal by-products, I could swear the maroon color in your hair has intensified.

"Purty just captures the unbridled passion of the spleen."

Sarah nervously excused herself to the back of the cafe. Then the real horror unfolded.

The walls were lined with our state and threaten his life. They were at the end of a nice morning. Ready for a casual conversation over a cup of coffee. We walked by a fleet of Vespa scooters as the scent of beet, sandalwood and defiantly unapologized for wearing earth tones. We walked in and ordered two coffees. The clerk laughed at our request of CAPTURE with more class than you.

We made a quick burst for the patio, desperately trying to keep in the calamari we had eaten for dinner. While we were out of the way from the poetry from hell, we had eaten an animal by-products, I could swear the maroon color in your hair has intensified.

"Purty just captures the unbridled passion of the spleen."

Sarah nervously excused herself to the back of the cafe. Then the real horror unfolded.

No one could dismiss the real terror was at the bathroom, but when Sarah came back she had this very pale look. It was a look that said, "Your life is so worthless, you should be a food taster for Saddam Hussein."

It was a look that said, "I've met people with 12th priority on CAUGHT with more class than you."

The last thing I remember, we were running for the door. I had to find that passage back to the place I was before. "Relax," said the night man, "we are programmed to receive.

You can order a double espresso any time you like, but you can never leave." Well, my favorite biannual date hasn't called in months which makes me one angry hombre. As a new "SLO cafe revolutionary," I've made a list of possible "monkey wrenching" techniques to practice.

Seven things to do to anger the pseudointellectuals in San Luis Obispo cafes:

1. Wear Hawaiian shirts.
2. Talk about sports
3. Eat red meat (a medium-rare tri-tip sandwich works best).
4. Admit to owning a "SLO" bumper sticker
5. Read "Greek News" from the classified section of Mustang Daily.
7. Start a wiffleball game in the back patio.

Anyone who saw Saturday's football game must now accept responsibility and Andrea Washington as their lord and savior.

I noticed the new cool thing to do at Mustang football blowouts is taunt KSBY sportscaster Mitch Massey.

Last week I wrote a commentary suggesting indirectly that you send letters to the governor of our state and threaten his life. My response was two angry letters and a phone call about a paragraph I wrote declaring my pledged support of the Lithuanian basketball team in the 1982 Olympic Games.

Where are our priorities at this school.

A man can threaten the governor's life but if he suggests that Michael Jordan is a little arrogant, the University Union bathroom wall-writing corps rushes to the Mustang Daily to fight for this "cause."

Both Charlene Barkley and Scottie Pippen have made incredibly overconfident, arrogant statements to the press about how "dominating" they will be.

Michael Jordan is already benefiting from the publicity with a new advertising campaign.

Meanwhile, Lithuanian Semenus Marcinusious is on the phone at the Lithuanian embassy saying he is not going to solicit funds for his team's shoes.

I'd rather show my respect for someone who acts on pure pride for his nation, even if it means sacrificing my own.

In Thursday's Mustang Daily, when referring to anti-fraternity flyers, Coordinator of Greek Affairs Walt Lambert said he would do what he could to punish those who wrote the "gross, vulgar false-schools."

While spray painting or destroying signs is illegal behavior that should be punished, the posting of flyers is completely legal by First Amendment rights. I disagree with the content of the flyers, but I think there is a larger evil in their forced restriction. Which hurts can be really satisfying, but let's make sure we don't burn the criminals, not the Bill of Rights.

The real shame in America

By Charles DeFlanders

I came from a family that was poor in many ways, but we did have a roof of our own and I was never hungry. I know what it feels like to be without a place to eat or sleep; I was homeless once in my life. I know what it feels like to have no one in our family. As a graduate student at the University of Southern California, I was alone, and I knew for some reason it wasn't going to be easy. I moved to that metropolis of chaos without any money in my pocket, only an acceptance letter from the university stating that I would be a graduate student in the fall. I immediately began looking for a job and a place to live. My first major problem was finding a place to live. I ended up getting an apartment that was infested with roaches and other vermin. One night while I was asleep, I woke up feeling something crawling across my lips. I wiped and swiped the ugly critter off. I knew what it was because my whole house was filled with vermin, and the housing management very seldom came by to fumigate the apartment complex. For the summer I shared an apartment complex with guests. Many who were homeless just wanted a happy to have a place to live.

For most of that summer I was unemployed, and while looking for a job I couldn't afford to buy something to eat for lunch; for dinner I had baked chicken and fruit - roaches for dessert.

My housing contract ended but somehow I managed to live there a couple of extra days, and then the housing management called to let me know that they would store my books and clothing until I found a place to live. I had no place to sleep, eat or shower the next day. I slept in the recreation room of the apartment complex - but I had to wait until everyone went to bed because there were students watching television.

I believe America has had two shames in its early history, homelessness and slavery. For quite some time I have been concerned with the homeless crisis in Los Angeles. As we know, homelessness is ubiquitous in Los Angeles, and the tension between the city and the homeless is growing ever day. There were times when I would just stand on the corner and look, because I was still unemployed and the adults who existed were the biggest shames in American history.

In the summer of 1990 I spent some of my after work hours in the homeless shelter serving dinner; I could not believe the number of homeless adult women, men and most of all, children. After dinner many homeless would begin setting up their cardboard boxes for overnight shelter. I never saw so many miserable faces of homelessness and desperation.

It has been estimated that there are over 3 million homeless people in this country. In 1990, emergency shelter requests went up 44 percent and food for the homeless rose 21 percent. At the same time, there was an increase in three percent of emergency beds. Many who were homeless would begin setting up their cardboard boxes for overnight shelter.

The government must adopt a national policy that will link the private sector in taking the responsibility of rehabilitating the severe shortages of low-income housing.

Finally, we can either sit and wait while the problem with time will go away or disappear by going to that little black book, take a close look and see that as a country we are neglecting our most precious, our people.

The Issue: A lack of bicycle parking at Cal Poly.

On the south side of campus, toward the construction on the new RSPE facility, there is a disturbing yet frequent sight: students are looking around the bike racks waiting for a spot to lock their bicycles to. This isn't a good scene.

According to Cal Poly Plant Operations, there are only 2,141 bicycle parking spots on campus. When construction took away over 300 Cal Poly student parking spots, it would have been an ideal time to influence Poly students to bike by compensating with new bicycle parking spots. Cal Poly bicycle reports no plans for future increases in bicycle parking. Cal Poly has announced plans, however, for a 1,300 spot parking structure across the street from the residence halls.

The city has acted responsibly towards the promotion of energy conservation, it is time that Cal Poly follows suit.

The San Luis Obispo Bicycle Advisory Group held the first meeting Monday night. The SLO City Council has allocated $400,000 to this group for the construction of bicycle paths and additions of bicycle parking and the promotion of bicycle safety.

In addition, the city provides free bus transportation to Cal Poly students.

As gas prices rise, pollution increases and traffic in San Luis Obispo decreases, the city is taking steps to correct this problem.

The Cal Poly administration should have shown some foresight when they planned for the construction on the Cal Poly campus. Improvements that would have helped are long overdue.

Cal Poly students and faculty should not have to wait for bicycle parking.

an interim report to Parliament about the Nomura probe late last month, said Nomura violated the ministry’s regulations but that determining any ties to organized crime was difficult.

Excessive promotion of stock shares, while a violation of current Securities and Exchange Law, is a less serious charge than stock manipulation, which means trading with the purpose of fixing a stock price at a certain level.

Some experts say, however, there is little difference between the two. They say stock manipulation is a regular practice on the Tokyo Stock Exchange that is tacitly permitted by the Finance Ministry even today, despite the fallout from major financial scandals.

"It goes on all the time," said Gregory Clark, an economist at Sophia University with long experience in Japan. "It’s necessary for the health and preservation of the Tokyo stock market. Since companies do want to pay high dividends, investors can only be satisfied with major capital appreciation."

"Non-Lent stocks in the world should be allowed to do this," he said.

"On any other market, if the stock makes an unexpected jump, the director of the company is asked to explain."

Indeed, Japanese news media recently have been reporting cases of alleged manipulation involving stocks in Tokyo-based Honshu Paper Co. and Fuku Suke, an Osaka-based stacking maker.

An opposition legislator, Toshihisa Matezua, said an internal Finance Ministry document showed that Nomura brokers began pushing up Tokyo shares after Ishii bought more than 10 million shares for Nomura between April and August 1989.

Tokyo Hosta, director of the Securities Bureau’s securities companies division, said Nomura Triangle stock shares were not applicable in a case of fixing a fair price determination by promoting excessively specific issues.

A Finance Ministry official speaking on condition he not be named, and the ministry itself would order Nomura to suspend business temporarily and demand radical reforms of the brokerage’s business methods.

At the hearing, Bokamaki also conceded that, as the ministry had charged, reforms at the brokerage following the stock manipulation have been insufficient.

opinions through the ASI Board of Directors. Faculty proposals should go either to the school dean or the school’s Academic Senate caucus chair.

Staff proposals will be directed to an ad hoc task force being formed by Cal Poly President Warren Baker. This task force will also be charged with designing a permanent structure for staff input.

"Typically, staff are not represented on consultative bodies on campus," Tushy said.

Baker has asked that recommendations on the document be made to him no later than the end of March 1992, according to Koob's letter.

LIBRARY

The library is now starting to concentrate on developing fund-raising programs, such as contacting alumni and community members for donations, Walsh said.

"The nominal fees to community users will likely be raised," he said.

Community users of the Robert E. Kennedy Library will also be encouraged to shift their use to the San Luis Obispo County Library in order to provide the maximum services possible to Cal Poly students, he said.

Mustangs bounce back, win tourney

By Neil Pascale

Cal Poly volleyball head coach Craig Cummings was afraid his team would be classified as a DOA at the Stanford Invitational this weekend after a lopsided televised defeat.

Instead, Cummings watched the Mustangs capture three straight matches and win the tournament held at Cal State Fullerton.

Just three days before the tournament, the Mustangs were beaten by the Pepperdine Waves, 15-4, 15-3, 15-2, in Malibu on Prime Ticket, a regional television network.

"I was concerned after we played that poorly," Cummings said.

Yet, Poly, now 12-6, started the Comfort Suites Classic with a decisive victory against St. Mary's and finished without losing a game in the four-team tournament.

Sacramento State also won all of its matches at the Comfort Suites Classic. But because Sacramento State lost two games against Cal State Fullerton, Poly ended up winning the event.

The Mustangs opened their tournament play with a 15-6, 15-8, 15-9 victory over St. Mary's, who dropped to 6-9.

Lael Perlstrom's 11 kills led Poly.

In fact, Perlstrom's performance throughout the weekend, which included 46 kills and eight blocks in three games, netted her the tournament's Most Valuable Player award.

Perlstrom is currently ranked 40th overall with a time of 25:14. The Mustangs' top finisher in the event with 29 points, University of Arkansas won 15th in blocks per game and 15th in blocks per game.

On Saturday afternoon, Poly lost Missouri in three straight games, 15-3, 15-14, 15-8. With the loss, Missouri dropped to 4-9.

Jennifer Jeffrey and Joy Osborne each contributed eight digs for the Mustangs. Perlstrom led Poly with 16 digs.

Two hours later, Poly had to come back and play against Cal State Fullerton.

"We were at the disadvantage of already playing one game that day," Cummings said. "We could have been a little tired.

"Poly did tire, but not until the third game of the match.

Fullerton bowed to Poly in the first two games, losing 15-8 and 15-9, but came back in the third game to take a 10-2 lead.

Once again, Poly came back and ended up winning the game, 15-11.

Cummings said several reserves helped boost the Mustangs in the last-game comeback, including Andrea Lecomte who won six of the Mustangs last 12 points on her serve.

Megan Androvich led Poly with nine kills.

"I gave them a ton of credit for that last game," Cummings said. "I think we're back on track."

Stanford meet certainly not an ego booster for Cal Poly

By Neil Pascale

A s e g o boosters go, the Stanford Invitational is not quite what the Cal Poly men's cross country team needed.

If, however, the team was looking for a little competition, the Stanford Invitational provided it as the Mustangs finished in 15th place Saturday in a field of 48 teams.

"We were in over our heads this week," said Poly's cross country head coach Tom Henderson.

The field was made up of mainly Division I schools with only three schools from Division II.

University of Arkansas won the event with 29 points. University of Arizona's 80 points scored it a second-place finish and UC Irvine placed third with 134 points.

Poly's 211 points put them behind the other two Division II schools — Humboldt State (258 points) and UC Davis (279 points).

"We did not race very well as a team," Henderson said. "And finishing behind Humboldt and Davis is not something we are happy with.

"We will have to race much better to do what we want at the (NCAA's) Regional and National Championships."

The Mustangs' top finisher was Scott Hempel, who placed 46th overall with a time of 23:42.

Clemson's Cormac Finnerly won the event with a time of 23:42.

"Interestingly, we ran similar times to the last time we ran here (in 1989), and that team placed fourth," Henderson said. "This was a lopsided field."

Other top finishers for Poly included Dan Berkeland, who placed 59th overall, and Kevin Brodie, who finished 71st overall.

The Mustangs take next weekend off and will prepare for their only home meet of the season, the SLO Invitational on Oct. 19 at Cal Poly.

Cuesta College Fall Biathlon to be held

The Cuesta College Fall Biathlon will take place Sunday, Oct. 13 at 8 a.m. The biathlon will include several age divisions for both individual and team participation. Proceeds are used to support the college athletic program. The biathlon is a 50-kilometer event which features a 10K run and 40K bike ride. A number of prizes are available, including roundtrip air fare from San Luis Obispo to San Francisco and two nights lodging for two. Registration is $20 for individuals and $40 per team. Contact the Cuesta College physical education department at 546-3207 for more information.

Cuesta College Lively Arts series begins

Reservations for the Cuesta College Lively Arts, an annual series of six top performing arts programs, are now available to the public. The series begins Oct. 19 with the Tony Award winner "Barnum," followed by Verdi's Masterpiece "La Traviata" as presented by Western Opera Theatre, Jan. 23; "Warner," Feb. 1; "The Sound of Rodgers and Hammerstein," Feb. 13; and "Driving Miss Daisy." March 20. Series tickets are available and general admission tickets are $13 each. For information call the Cuesta public events office at 541-3131.

City of SLO changes phone prefix numbers

The City of San Luis Obispo has changed its telephone prefix number from "549" to "781." The change was necessary due to the city's decision to convert its current telephone system to the Pacific Bell Centrex System. The last four digits of city phone numbers will remain the same. The new telephone books currently being distributed reflect the prefix change.

Speech, hearing, language testing available for kids

The San Luis Obispo County Superintendent of School's office, in conjunction with speech, language and hearing specialists, will be conducting a free screening of preschool-age children on Wednesday, Oct. 16. The screening will be held at various locations throughout the county. Parents may schedule an appointment for the screenings by calling their local school district office. For more information, call Elaine Kazmierski at the Special Education Local Plan Area office at 543-7732, extension 256.
