DAZED & CONFUSED

ALLYSON EVANS

I have grown up around a close friend of mine who has always known that he was queer. I've watched him struggle through out high school and college as he explored different gender identities and sexuality's trying to find a "category" that he fits into. Society want him to be gay, bisexual, or straight and he doesn't know if he's any of those labels. Still to this day, he struggles with the frustration that he needs a label for people to understand him. I've had an idea in my mind for years to do a photo series of my friends that reflected of his struggle and growth and I was finally able to successfully capture it.
