CONTRIBUTORS

Sidi Cherkawi Benzahra, PhD, a 2001 University of Minnesota graduate is currently teaching physics at Cal Poly. He has published several papers and is now working on a book titled, A Philosophical Quest for the Reality of Time.

Kevin Cabaniss graduated from Cal Poly in 2005.

Katherine Finstuen was born and raised in Washington state and transplanted herself to the fertile grounds of the Central Coast three years ago. The funniest thing she's ever seen is Woody Allen playing the cello in the marching band (imagine it!). If unaffected by her story's title, she suggests you watch more Monty Python.

David Hennessee is a Lecturer in the English Department. He teaches 18th, 19th, and 20th century British literature.

Ed Himelblau combined his interest in art and life science during his study of molecular biology at the University of Wisconsin by drawing biology cartoons. His work has been published in journals such as Nature, Nature Neuroscience, and Promega eNotes.

J. Kelly Moreno, a 1988 University of Utah graduate, is currently teaching psychology at Cal Poly. Besides maintaining a private practice in SLO, he has authored a variety of publications including his fictional novel, A Duty to Warn, from which "Hallucination," is the first chapter.

Marnie L. Parker is finishing up her MA in English. The poem "Phone Order," is inspired from her eight years of working in the lingerie business.

James Ratner is in the College of Engineering.

Marvin Sosna is a lecturer in the Journalism Department. He's been a writer since he learned to read as well as a journalist, newspaper editor (Thousand Oaks News Chronicle), poet, playwright, novelist, and memoirist. When not writing or teaching, he's photographing and backpacking in the High Sierra.
