Those fortunate to have known Maurice Wilks (professor emeritus of the College of Architecture and Environmental design) were greatly saddened to have learned of his passing. Mauri was uncompromising in his professional standards: he always presumed that we were at Cal Poly to do our best, and he inspired us to live up to his—and our own—expectations. I will miss him as a friend as well as a colleague. Our world will be diminished by his absence.

Cal Poly Alumni Board Member Don Morris (PE ’53, M.S. 59) wrote to send along a photo of Ena Marston he had snapped in a local restaurant (below). Marston taught English and art from 1946 to 1970 and worked for both President McPhee and President Kennedy. She taught English to Morris in 1950. “She was a great teacher and one of the few women teachers on the campus at that time,” says Morris.

According to Morris, Ms. Marston started the popular series “Books at High Noon,” and was in charge of the program for 10 years. At 92, she attends quarterly meetings of the Retired Faculty and Staff Club, is also active in the Central Coast Weavers, and serves on the board of directors of the San Luis Obispo Historical Society.

“The Alumni Association [c/o Alumni Relations Office, Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, CA 93407] would like to hear from anyone who knows of other faculty members from Cal Poly’s past,” writes Morris.
