Winners selected for Community Service Awards

President Baker presented awards to several students, two university organizations, and a professor at the 13th annual President's Awards for Community Service.

Jennifer Reed, a senior biology student, and Stephen Bennett, a junior in social sciences, won individual awards for long-term community volunteer involvement.

Reed has been active in a variety of service programs, including fund-raising for several non-profit organizations, helping the elderly, working for environmental causes, and keeping a long-term commitment to a child she mentors through the Poly Pals organization. She also currently serves as president of Student Community Services.

Bennett, a 1996 recipient of the Emerging Service Leader's Award, is vice president of Student Community Services. He is a Poly Pal, tutors in public schools, volunteers at the Juvenile Services Center, acts as advisor to the student group Enrich (Residents Involved in Community Helping), recruits and trains project directors for Student Community Services, serves on the grant selection board, and has expanded his involvement in the national organization

Campus Outreach Opportunity League.

The Beyond Shelter group and the Tenaya Residence Hall shared the award in the group category. Led by students Stephen McShane and Joel Henderson, 30 volunteers from the two groups aided the homeless and educated themselves and others about the problems of hunger and homelessness.

Maureen Mangosong, a senior biology student, and Michael Nevarez, a sophomore in electrical engineering, were chosen for the Emerging Service Leader's Award.

Mangosong initiated Partnerships in Health, a project to recruit and advise students on health-related volunteer opportunities such as helping disabled children, people in wheelchairs, and mentally ill adults. She also assists teachers, nurses and therapists in three local facilities.

Nevarez, director of the Youth Education project, recruits, trains and schedules more than 50 volunteers as tutors in the schools. He has helped with a Native American summer camp and holiday toy drives, is active in Partnerships in Health, works with the homeless, and is a mentor at the Juvenile Services Center. He was elected Student Community Services' 1998-99 vice president.

Economics professor Daniel Villegas earned the Distinguished Faculty Service-Learning Award for promoting student interaction with service agencies to reinforce classroom knowledge with first-hand experience. Over the last two years, Villegas has integrated a new "study connections" program into a class he teaches on the economics of poverty, discrimination and immigration. More than 200 students have been involved in the program.

Directed by Student Life and Activities, the President's Awards for Community Service are designed to inspire groups and individuals to address social needs in San Luis Obispo County and to encourage students to enhance their education by investigating, organizing and leading community-service activities. □

Open forum to explore Foundation operations

Faculty and staff can learn about the Foundation's operations and policies at an open forum from 3 to 5 pm Thursday, May 21, in Room 231 in the Erhart Agriculture Building.

For information, call or e-mail Myron Hood, ext. 6-2352 or mhood@calpoly.edu. □

In memoriam

The flags in front of the Administration Building will fly at half staff during Memorial Day weekend, Saturday through Monday, May 23-25, in honor of America's war dead and Cal Poly students, faculty and staff members, and emeriti who died during the 1997-98 school year. □

'Grammar for 21st Century' title of talk

English professor Johanna Rubba will speak about "Grammar for the 21st Century" from 11 am to noon on Thursday, May 21, in Fisher Science 286.

A linguist, Rubba is interested in the pedagogy of teaching grammar. She is working on a new grammar textbook.

Dialogue and debate will follow the talk, part of the "What Else We Do: An English Department Faculty Forum."

For more information, contact the English department at ext. 6-2597 or series organizer Debora Schwartz at 6-2636. □

Cal Poly to host straw building symposium

Leading architects and experienced builders will guide a two-day workshop on building with bales of straw on Saturday and Sunday, May 23-24, at Cal Poly.

The California Straw Bale Construction Symposium and Workshop will run from 9:30 am to 3:30 pm both days. The workshop will be led by architecture professor Polly Cooper, retired architecture professor Ken Haggard, and Bob Theis, an architect and straw-bale building expert.

Saturday's workshop will include instruction, slides and discussion. On Sunday, participants will have an opportunity for hands-on activities. Experts will also explore financial, ecological, aesthetic and community benefits of using fiber crops as construction materials.

The course costs $98 for both days. It is being offered through Extended Education. Registration is on a first-come basis. For more information or to register, call ext. 6-2053. □

Modesto alumni set golf tourney

Cal Poly's Modesto Alumni Association is planning its 10th Annual Golf Tournament at 12:30 pm Friday, May 29, at the Stevinson Ranch Golf Course in Modesto.

All golfers are welcome, no matter how well they play. The entry fee is $125 and includes golf cart, green fees, barbecue lunch before, catered dinner after, and a silent auction.

Tea prizes and awards will be given for longest drive and closest to the pin. Hole sponsorships are available for $150 each, or $250 with one golf entry included. Proceeds from the event will benefit Cal Poly.

For more information contact Vito Chiesa at (209) 883-0044, Dave Absher at (209) 521-9929, or Bob Weaver at (209) 634-2032. Tax-deductible checks payable to Cal Poly Boosters can be mailed to Cal Poly Golf, 1312 Mt. View, Hughson CA 95366. □

Retirement reception set for Ann Morgan May 28

The campus community is invited to a retirement reception for professor Ann Morgan of the Psychology and Human Development Department from 3 to 4:30 pm on Thursday, May 28, in the Mathematics and Home Economics Building, Room 114. Morgan is retiring after 18 years of service to Cal Poly. □

'Run With the PAC' set for May 30

The Performing Arts Center is sponsoring "Run With the PAC," a 5-K fun-run/walk through campus, at 9 am Saturday, May 30, beginning and ending in the Cohan Center's Plaza.

The entry fee is $15 for students. Others pay $15 before Friday, May 22, and $20 after that date. For a race registration form, stop by the Performing Arts Ticket Office; Venue Sports, 4035 Higuera, San Luis Obispo; the San Luis Obispo Chamber of Commerce, downtown; and GH Sports, 698 Higuera, SLO.

Proceeds from the race will benefit the Performing Arts Center's Youth Outreach program and the center's volunteer Friends organization.

For more information, call the center at ext. 6-7555. □

Here's how to reach us

The Cal Poly Report is published by the Communications Office every Wednesday during the academic year.

Items submitted by 10 am Thursday appear in the following Wednesday's edition.

For information, call ext. 6-1511, or e-mail articles, suggestions, and questions to polynews@polymail. You may fax items to ext. 6-6533. □

Faculty, staff invited to The Cliffs

Faculty and staff are invited to mingle with co-workers and meet other campus employees at a reception in the lounge at The Cliffs at Shell Beach from 6 to 9 pm on Wednesday, May 27.

Complimentary appetizers will be served, drink specials will be on sale, and a DJ will provide music for dancing. In addition, prizes including dinners, brunches, and a weekend stay at The Cliffs will be given away.

The reception, the first in what is to be a monthly event, is part of The Cliffs' 1998 Business and Industry Appreciation Program that allows Cal Poly employees discounts on room rates, food and beverages, and health club memberships.

For more information, call Chris Baker in Athletics at ext. 6-7188. □

Trumpeter Bobby Shew to play at Jazz Night

Award-winning trumpeter Bobby Shew will be the featured soloist with Cal Poly's jazz groups at the university's Jazz Night on Saturday, May 30.

Led by music professors Paul Rinzler and William Johnson, the University Jazz Bands and Jazz Combos will perform music ranging from swing, shuffle and Latin to jazz rock and jazz ballads.

The show begins at 8 pm in Harman Hall in the Performing Arts Center's Cohan Center.

Shew has played with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra and Woody Herman's band, as well as with Della Reese and Buddy Rich.

After playing lead trumpet for a number of pop stars in Las Vegas, Shew moved to Los Angeles to play more jazz. He played with Art Pepper, Bud Shank, the Horace Silver Quintet, and others.

Johnson promises "upbeat, brilliant big-band sounds" from the two 20-member University Jazz Bands, as well as "the more intimate, warm improvisational sounds" of the Cal Poly Jazz Combos.

Tickets cost $9 to $18 and can be bought at the Performing Arts Ticket Office from 10 am to 6 pm weekdays and from 10 am to 4 pm Saturdays. To order by phone, dial 6-ARTS (ext. 6-2787).

Jazz Night is sponsored by the Music Department. □

Open forums planned for vice provost finalists

Four candidates for the position of vice provost for academic programs and undergraduate education will be interviewed during May and early June. Faculty, staff and students are encouraged to attend the open forums and meet the candidates. All forums are scheduled in UU 220.

Leonard Salazar, professor of research, administration and foundations at California State University, Fresno, will be interviewed today and Thursday, May 20-21. An open forum has been scheduled from 11:10 am to noon May 21.

Faye Vowell, dean of the school of library and information management at Emporia State University, Kansas, will be on campus Tuesday and Wednesday, May 26-27. An open forum will be held from 11:10 am to noon on May 26.

David Conn, special assistant to the provost, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, will be interviewed on Monday and Tuesday, June 1-2. An open forum has been scheduled from 11:10 to noon June 2.

Annette Chappell, associate vice president for academic affairs at Towson University in Maryland, will be on campus Thursday and Friday, June 4-5. An open forum is set from 1:40 to 2:30 pm June 4. □

More staff survey results

Here are more results from the survey done last summer by the Ad Hoc Committee for Supporting and Sustaining Employee Performance.

While most respondents (78 percent) felt they would know what to do in an emergency, the majority of the staff commented that emergency preparedness classes would be beneficial, followed by written emergency procedures, training, and on-site visits to the department or building.

To address those concerns, the following information has been provided by Joan Graham, emergency management planner. For information or copies of publications, call her at ext. 6-6653.

Emergency Preparedness Classes

A series of classes in emergency preparedness (Campus Emergency Response Team or CERT training) is offered three times a year — fall, winter and spring quarters. The classes, open to all staff and faculty members, are advertised in the Cal Poly Report, the Staff Council Update, and by e-mail to division offices. The classes are free, and upon completion, graduates are provided with a personal emergency preparedness kit, a certificate, and an emergency preparedness manual.

Written Emergency Procedures

The Emergency Management Plan (EMP) for the campus has recently been updated and distributed to all division and department offices.

Individual department offices have been asked to develop their own department emergency procedures under the umbrella of the campus EMP. The Emergency Management Planning office is available as a resource in developing department emergency plans.

Two publications are available from the Emergency Management Planning office: (1) Emergency Preparedness Guidelines for Students, Faculty, Staff, and Visitors and (2) Your Family Disaster Supplies Calendar.

Two videos can be checked out: (1) "Academic Aftershocks" and (2) "Surviving the Big One." Information on these and other subjects will be available on the Emergency Management Planning Web site by the end of spring quarter.

Training/On-Site Visits

Graham is available to speak to campus groups and departments about disaster preparedness.

In addition, options for continued training in first aid/CPR are being explored. In 1996-97 the campus provided one-time funding for 250 employees to receive the training. □

ADVANCEMENT

Cal Poly Fund sets record

The Cal Poly Fund is enjoying its most successful year. It surpassed the $1 million mark in April, earlier in the fiscal year than ever before.

Eric Doepel, director of the program, reports that in two years the number of gifts to colleges and units has nearly doubled and the dollar amount has more than doubled.

As of April 30 this year, 10,134 gifts totaling $732,159 had been received, compared with 5,184 gifts for a total of $306,506 two years ago at this time. Last year at this point the fund had received 8,757 gifts totaling $582,621. □

Rec Sports to offer summer swimming lessons

ASI Rec Sports is taking sign-ups for the Children's Summer Swim Program. Lessons cost $40 per session for each enrolled participant. Lessons begin Monday, June 29. Call ext. 6-1366, or stop by the Rec Center for more information. □

'Permaculture' course scheduled at Cal Poly

Anyone interested in clean air and water, healthy food, and community vitality is invited to participate in a two-week, intensive training course at Cal Poly from June 21 to July 5.

The workshop will teach "permaculture," a system of sustainable living practices that encompasses gardening, farming, architecture and large-scale agricultural development.

The University Permaculture Design Training Course is intended for anyone interested in the system, including land managers, farmers, gardeners, architects, planners, environmental educators, community service volunteers and students.

Larry Santoyo, a pioneer permaculture designer, is one of three teachers for the course. College of Agriculture staff members Akiva Werbalowsky and Julian Kayne will also teach. Werbalowsky develops ecological agriculture programs for the university, and Kayne is Cal Poly's compost site manager.

Session topics include cultivating fertility, water harvesting, solar technologies, patterns in nature, food forestry, community collaborative design, and building with annual fiber crops.

Participants who complete the course can receive professional certification and continuing education units.

Tuition for two weeks of instruction is $565. An additional and optional $330 covers the cost of tent camping, three catered meals a day, a pass to the university's recreation facilities, and parking.

One-day course passes, $100, include instruction, three meals, and one night of camping. Partial work-exchange opportunities are also available.

For more program information, contact Werbalowsky by phone at ext. 6-5086 or by e-mail at awervalo@calpoly.edu. For a registration packet, call Conference Services at ext. 6-7600. □

Zingg announces faculty PSSI recipients for 1997-98

Paul Zingg, provost and vice president for academic affairs, has announced the names of faculty members awarded Performance Salary Step Increases (PSSI) for 1997-98 by their respective college deans or administrators.

As recommended by the Academic Senate, the procedure was changed this year to allow for the decisions to be made at the college or unit level. Of the 349 applications, 224 faculty unit employees were awarded PSSIs at a cost of $447,098.

These faculty are recognized for their contributions to the university through their meritorious teaching and record of service and professional accomplishments:

More staff survey results

Results of the staff survey conducted last summer revealed that most staff employees (77 percent) are satisfied with the amount of release time they receive to attend campus-sponsored training. Eighty-six percent of the respondents had participated in work-related training sessions offered within the last three years.

Training in state-of-the-art technology, productivity enhancements, and job skills improvement topped the list as most valuable. Respondents also indicated that the three most helpful changes in current training programs would be more comprehensive or varied training (25 percent), more personalized training (19 percent), and more interactive training (19 percent).

In response to the survey, Human Resources and Employment Equity (HREE) is identifying a broader variety of work-related training topics that are of interest to staff, as well as a mechanism to support the specialized training needs of specific work units or employees. In addition, HREE has compiled a list of campus departments that offer training to employees in such areas as management information and reporting systems, business processes, computer technology, organizational and professional development, and workplace safety. This information will be distributed to campus departments.

In developing its own training programs for the upcoming academic year, HREE will continue to emphasize training activities that are highly interactive and provide employees with the opportunity to apply key concepts to "real life" work situations. The supervisory training series and new employee orientation program are being restructured to include a more interactive format. In the past, HREE has conducted small-group training sessions — particularly in the area of injury prevention training — and will explore the use of these smaller, more customized programs in other training areas. HREE is also establishing stronger collaborative relationships with other campus departments, such as the Employee Assistance Program, in order to jointly sponsor staff training and optimize existing resources and expertise.

For more information regarding training programs sponsored by HREE, contact Joan Lund, training manager, at ext. 6-6563 or jlund@calpoly.edu. □

Students to teach about wilderness

For the third consecutive year, students in the environmental education class in the Recreation Administration Program are planning to teach San Luis Obispo County elementary school children about the natural world.

Student teachers instruct with the aid of a "Wilderness Box," a collection of teaching aids including skulls, skins, books, puppets and videos.

In the past two years, Cal Poly students have introduced more than 1,000 San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara county elementary and middle school students to ecological, social, and cultural wilderness values and helped them develop wilderness recreation skills.

This year lessons will be taught to third-graders at Vineyard Elementary School in Templeton and to second- and third-graders at Bishop's Peak Elementary School in San Luis Obispo. Bill Hendricks, recreation administration professor, directs the student teachers. □

Cal Poly students win housing competition

An interdisciplinary team of students won the Bank of America's Northern California 1998 Low-Income Housing Challenge Competition with its design for a 50-unit townhouse for low-income families that is to be built in Buellton.

The Cal Poly team, called Partnership for Equity Development, included Dan Brendel, who earned a bachelor's degree in architecture from Cal Poly and is now an MBA student at the university; Kim Brosseau, a city and regional planning grad student; team leader Daniel Fisher, a Cal Poly landscape architecture graduate who is now a city and regional planning grad student; Katrina Rosa, an architecture senior; and Julie Striplin, city and regional planning grad student.

The students' project of attached townhouse rental units will be the Santa Ynez Valley's first affordable housing development.

The Santa Ynez service group, People Helping People, will receive the winning team's $3,000 prize. The organization will operate adjacent facilities that include classrooms, a culinary institute, retail space, and a day care and community campus. Construction is expected to begin next spring.

The team was advised by Lori Hoffman of the City and Regional Planning Department and Brian Kesner of the Architecture Department. □
