Cal Poly Students Win National Scavenger Hunt

SAN LUIS OBISPO - Cal Poly architecture students Irwin Gozali and Warren Troung placed second in a scavenger hunt at the 50th Annual Construction Specifications Institute Show and Convention held March 29-31 in Las Vegas , Nev.

The event allowed students to network with and learn from product representatives and CSI directors and introduced them to CSI members from four other participating universities.

The scavenger hunt led the students through the exhibition hall, requiring them to visit booths, attend seminars, pick up and analyze handouts, compile data and turn in their findings.

The CSI seminars introduce students to the latest software, practices and products, paperless documentations and sustainability issues related to construction.

For more information about the CSI, go to http://www.csinet.org/s_csi/index.asp.
