The sound of music — The Cal Poly Wind Orchestra (shown here in the Performing Arts Center's Harman Hall) recently returned from its concert tour of New Zealand and Australia. Conducted by Music Professor William Johnson, the group played in several venues in both countries, including the Sydney Opera House, where the orchestra performed as part of the International Music Festival. Johnson called the orchestra "almost technically flawless" and said the musicians "reached for a level of expression that had not been experienced before."

Cal Poly reaccredited by WASC

After a two-year process involving a universitywide self-study and a review by a visiting team of educators from peer institutions across the nation, the Western Association of Schools and Colleges has written a very positive letter reaffirming Cal Poly's regional accreditation and granting Cal Poly the maximum possible time before the next review will become due.

More information about the action by WASC and the follow-up that is planned by the university will be included in the Cal Poly Report and elsewhere at the beginning of fall quarter.

Clarification

In a July 19 Cal Poly Report article about the two graduate students who received awards for outstanding work, it should have been noted that Scott Sacchetti (who received the Outstanding Graduate Student Award) was honored for his work while pursuing a master's degree in industrial and technical studies, a program in the College of Business. □
