Cyber crime unit recognized

A high-tech investigation group initiated by the University Police to help Central California law enforcement agencies solve computerized crime has won an award from the California College and University Police Chiefs Association.

The association presented its Award of Distinction to University Police Officer Jeff Joynt and Chief Tony Aeilts.

Joynt and officers John Edds and Mike Kennedy began developing the investigations group in 2000 to share the high-tech expertise of Cal Poly staff and faculty members with police agencies in the region.

Last September the group officially became the Central California Chapter of the High-Tech Crime Investigation Association International. The unit now includes representatives of police agencies in San Luis Obispo, Kern, Kings, Santa Barbara and Tulare counties as well as the Highway Patrol, the FBI, district attorney's offices and corporations such as Verizon and Internet service providers.

So far the high-tech unit has helped regional agencies investigate and solve more than 20 crimes that were perpetrated with – or could be investigated with – computer technology, including homicide, insurance fraud, identify theft and stalking of children on the Internet. University Police officers have also provided high-tech training to officers in other agencies. □

Science & Math to hold research conference Friday

The second annual College of Science and Mathematics Research Conference will be held Friday (May 17) 11 a.m.-1 p.m. in Fisher Science Hall. Everyone is invited to attend and talk with students about their research. The students will present projects in biology, chemistry and biochemistry, math, physics and statistics.

For more information contact Biological Sciences Professor Elena Levine at elevine@calpoly.edu or Chemistry and Biochemistry Professors Peggy Rice, ext. 6-1624, Kevin Kingsbury, ext. 6-1652, or Sam Rigler, ext. 6-1591. □

Zen master to talk Thursday

An internationally known Zen master will give the next Philosophy at Poly talk, "Zen Training for Self and Others," on Thursday (May 16).

The Rev. Huon Phoebe, abbess of the Pine Mountain Buddhist Temple in Kern County, will speak 11 a.m.-noon in BioResource and Agricultural Engineering 123.

She will talk on the effect of meditation on oneself and on the world. She will examine the Zen teaching that much of the world that we perceive is, in reality, no different from ourselves and that, by meditation training, we can influence not only ourselves but the whole universe for the better.

Originally from Holland, the Rev. Phoebe studied and was ordained at Throesel Hole Abbey in North England. She will be accompanied by the Rev. Seikai Luebke, who has lectured at Cal Poly and will participate in the discussion.

For more information, call ext. 6-2041. □

Talk on ethnic identity set

Cal State L.A. Psychology Professor Jean Phinney will explore ethnic identity in the keynote presentation at the 2002 Cal Poly Psychology and Child Development Research Symposium, today and Thursday (May 15-16). Phinney's talk, "Ethnic Identity: Conceptualization and Current Issues," will be 4:10-5:30 p.m. today in UU 220.

Additional events in the Psychology and Child Development Symposium include a faculty research panel 11:10 a.m.-noon and a student research panel 12:10-1 p.m., both on Thursday in UU 220.

For more information, call ext. 6-2033. □
