Sharing the VISION

This spring I gave a keynote presentation on the future of Cal Poly, outlining ways this university can grow according to our foundational principles — commitment to student success, the Learn by Doing philosophy, the comprehensive polytechnic model, and excellence through continuous improvement.

By 2022, we will have brought more of our students onto campus and created a more vibrant residential experience that will merge social life with an integrated, interdisciplinary, holistic education. We will have built a more diverse, welcoming community that values the unique contributions of each member and better reflects the wonderful diversity of our state.

We will have secured the financial future of the university in order to provide more resources and opportunities to our students and to better support our dedicated faculty and staff. And as we grow, our outstanding graduates and the ideas we develop here will have an increasing impact across California.

You can read more about the details of Vision 2022 at president.calpoly.edu/vision2022.

Some of the goals in this plan are easily within our grasp. Others are more bold and aspirational. But all of these goals have one thing in common: they can only be achieved as we all come together for the good of the university and our students. Faculty, staff, alumni, supporters and, yes, even the students themselves all must renew their commitment to the principles that make Cal Poly a distinctive and highly effective learning community.

The Learn by Doing education is transformative. It creates graduates who are well equipped to handle the future’s most pressing challenges. Because of this, Cal Poly has the power to transform our region, California, our nation and the world — but only if our whole community understands that an even brighter future is possible when we come together.

I want to congratulate the Class of 2014 as they commence life after graduation. Please remain connected to this community — future generations of Mustangs are counting on you!

— Jeffrey D. Armstrong, President

A gift to Cal Poly in your will allows future generations of graduates to dream big and achieve more. Through a bequest, you can continue your support for years to come — and it can be accomplished in as little as three steps:

1. Decide what amount or percentage you want to give.
2. Determine if you want to direct your gift to support a specific program or scholarship, or leave your gift unrestricted, allowing it to be used for our most pressing needs.
3. Share our bequest language with your attorney to include your gift in your will.

Learn More
Visit plannedgiving.calpoly.edu or contact us for more information on the benefits of bequests or to find our official language to share with your attorney.