Fresno, Santa Barbara Add New Coaches

Two California Collegiate Athletic Association conference colleges have added new coaches. The University of California at Santa Barbara has hired Harold "Rusty" Fairly to the football staff and at Fresno State College, Jack Adler takes over as junior varsity football and basketball coach. Fairly is currently completing his Master's Degree at the University of Denver where he was graduated in 1955.

Ag Division Commended

Cal Poly's Agricultural Division was described as making "a significant impact on economic and social developments throughout the free world" in a letter which President Julian A. McPhes recently received from Cannon C. Hearne, director of the foreign training division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Hearne's letter was written to comment on the acceptance by Dean Vard M. Shepard of appointment as food and agriculture officer for ICA in Egypt.

Ping Pong Wizard From Viet Nam

Gaining recognition on campus this week is Phan Ngoc Chau, 24, from Saigon, South Viet Nam. A very active ping-pong player, he was champion in both of the summer ping-pong tournaments. Chau is taking an Animal Husbandry major here after three years of Veterinary Science at the National College of Agriculture in South Viet Nam. He is completing his education under the sponsorship of the United States International Cooperation Administration. Chau has been playing ping-pong for the past 10 years. He relates that his home country is among the top five countries of the world in ping-pong competition. "Many times South Viet Nam was top contender with Japan for the world championship," says Chau. Chau also plays on the soccer team and is one of the better tennis players at Poly. Scholastically, Chau speaks French, Vietnamese, and English and has an overall grade point average of 8.2.

Fees Increased

Students at both the San Luis and the Kellogg campuses will pay an additional $8.50 per quarter (10.50 for the regular college year) for the materials and service fee, starting in September. Donald S. Nelson, business manager at the San Luis Obispo campus, said the increase resulted from action of the Trustees of the California State Colleges and is applicable at all 15 state colleges. "In December of last year the trustees raised the fee by $6 a year and increased it again recently," Nelson pointed out. Last year Cal Poly students paid $22 a quarter. This year they will pay $25.50. The fee for limited students (those carrying six or less units of study) will be $18 a quarter, or $50 for the regular college year. In addition to the materials and service fee, students at Cal Poly pay annual fees of $27 for parking, $15 for the Associated Student Body card, $9 for campus medical services and $1.50 for post office box rental. Commencing in September, total fees for a full-time student at Cal Poly will be $120 a year.

Student SCSA Wins Nation-Wide Honor

Cal Poly's student chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America won nation-wide recognition at the recent annual meeting of the SCSA held at Purdue University for last year's activities. A plaque will be presented by Clark Gleason, chairman of the California chapter of the society, to the incoming 1961-62 student chapter chairman at the state meeting of the California SCSA in San Diego in January. Preparation of the award-winning report of activities was made by Peter Ashton, Northridge, secretary of the Cal Poly chapter, assisted by Ray Wildung, Van Nuys. Activities included: 1. Preparation of the SOIL AUGER, edited by Bob Willmont, Los Angeles, a publication sent to Cal Poly Soil Science graduates. It includes articles of interest by alumni, students and reports on past activities; equipment and curriculum additions in Soil Science; senior project progress; and a directory of graduates from Cal Poly's Soil Science Department. 2. Preparation for, conducting of, and judging of three regional F.F.A. land judging contests held at Arroyo Grande, King City and Pismo College. Student chapter members helped make these contests smooth-running by suggesting revisions of the land judging score card and assisting with the report on factors judged which is being prepared by members of the Soil Science Department staff. 3. Activities of monthly meetings which included speakers who presented topics of special interest and job opportunities, and the fall and spring picnics to which families and guests were invited. 4. The field trip through which the students made contact with men at various experimental stations and laboratories and toured several industrial plants. 5. Planning and assembling Poly Royal exhibits about which the public made many favorable comments. These "learn-by-doing" co-curricular activities were carried out by students and faculty advisors in addition to the regular school program.

Coaches Agree On Home Run Ruling

By RAY SOTO—TED WEINGAL
Needles Poly, I.A.
The assault of Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle on Babe Ruth's record of hitting 60 home runs in a single season is a favorite topic among sports fans this season and the coaches at the Cal Poly workshop are no exception. Several were asked their opinion concerning baseball commissioner Ford Frick's ruling that the record to count, must be broken in 154 games. The vast majority of coaches agreed with Frick's judgement on the matter. One coach, in favor of Frick's ruling, explained it this way: "That would be like giving a guy two extra bowling balls to knock down the pins he didn't make." Gene Corr, head football mentor at Contra Costa Junior College, felt this way about it. "If it isn't broken in 154 games but is broken in 162 games then as the years roll by it will be considered the record since records are compared according to seasons. However, I'd like to see the record broken in 154 games. Lloyd Robinson of Wood Lake High doesn't think the record will stand up in 162 games and so thinks Frick's ruling is the fair thing to do. Ted Tollner, who was a dissenter, put it this way. "It's their fault for making the season so long." He felt that his record should be limited to a season because a little livelier form of baseball was played in Ruth's day. Dave Wachner of Pasadena City College says, "I don't think it's right because if Maris or Mantle hope to break Ruth's record they should have a full season the same as he had. Also the rules and the dimensions of the park have considerably changed."

Poly Grad To Serve In Peace Corps

Hans C. Groot, 22, a 1960 graduate of California State Polytechnic College's Kellogg Campus, has been selected as a trainee for a two-year Peace Corps mission to the Philippines. Currently a staff reporter for the Sacramento Bee, he will begin an eight-week training program July 29. If selected as a Peace Corps Volunteer after completing the course, he will be given two weeks' leave before departing on his mission. During training he will receive instruction in the culture, history, and political institutions of the Philippines and the United States, as well as training to achieve physical and psychological readiness for the conditions under which he will be working. Groot, who received his bachelor of science degree in social sciences, took the special examination for English teachers during the rigid recruiting process. In addition to his aptitude in this area he will have to demonstrate technical ability, physical stamina, and emotional stability.

McMeen To Serve As Education Consultant

Dr. George H. McMeen of the Mathematics Department has been granted a leave of absence to accept a position as special consultant for the State Department of Education. McMeen will work with the advisory committee on mathematics and the Department of Secondary Education in planning, promoting and coordinating school mathematics programs throughout the state. The position was created in response to a need to give special emphasis and direction to upgrading mathematics programs in the state. The mathematics instructor will be on leave from September 1, 1961 to August 31, 1962. McMeen received his bachelor's degree from Western Washington College of Education and completed work for his master's degree at the University of Washington. He received his doctorate from Teachers College, Columbia University. He came to Cal Poly last year from Newark State College, Union, N.J.

World Affairs Council Offers Reviews of Important Books

The World Affairs Council of Northern California, San Luis Obispo, is presenting a series of book reviews of current works in the field of foreign affairs. The programs are informal and audience participation is encouraged. They are open to the general public. The next review will be given by Arthur Armstrong of Atascadero, who will examine "On The Necessity of Choice" by Kiesinger, Tuesday, Aug. 15, at 8 p.m. in the Erhart Building (AG155) 222. On Aug. 22, Albert Heltrami will discuss Seton-Watson's "Neither War Nor Peace" at 2045 Skylark in San Luis Obispo at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 27, at 8 p.m. Mrs. Lois Armstrong will review "In Place of Folly," by Norman Cousins, at 9420 Mountain View in Atascadero. President of the local World Affairs Council is Dr. Michel N. Franck of the Social Science Department. Dr. J. Phillip Bromley of the Farm Management Department is vice-president.

Seven Mermen In AAU Championships

Seven Cal Poly swimmers will be participating in the National Amateur Athletic Union swimming championships on Aug. 18-20 being held in the Olympic Swim Stadium in Los Angeles. Mustang mermen entered are Jack Adam who will swim for the Los Altos Swim Club, Frank Brooks for the Los Angeles Athletic Club; Courtney Childs, Jim Furlong, Bill Murr, Jim Wilson and Phil Darnay for the San Luis Obispo Swim Club. An interested spectator for the three days will be Dick Anderson, Mustang swimming coach. All seven will return to Cal Poly to compete next year.

Sen. Farr Speaks Here Friday

State Senator Fred S. Farr of Monterey County will speak on "The Accomplishments of Governor Brown's Administration" Friday, Aug. 11 at 8 p.m. in the west wing of the San Luis Obispo Veterans' Building. His talk is being presented under the auspices of the San Luis Obispo Democratic Club in cooperation with the Cal Poly Young Democrats. Senator Farr, a progressive member of the legislature, has represented Monterey County since 1955. He has sponsored many of Governor Brown's legislative proposals, and is a constant supporter of Democratic Party platform policies with his votes in the senate.

Horse Breeding Program Featured In Publication

"Cal Poly's Thoroughbred Breeding Program" is the title of an article in the August issue of the "Thoroughbred of California" magazine. It is by a Cal Poly Animal Husbandry instructor, James R. Flanagan.

In the article Flanagan describes the Cal Poly horse breeding program from its start in 1940 to the present. He explains the progress of the program in recent years, and shows its place in the Animal Husbandry curriculum and the college instructional program.

Flanagan also makes mention of the expansion of facilities for the horse program, including a new breeding shed and isolation area, and a 18-stall, 22-horse student horse barn.

The article is illustrated with photographs of the Animal Husbandry facilities, student laboratories and classes in horsemanship and horse shoeing.

The "Thoroughbred of California" is published by the California Thoroughbred Breeders Association and has a monthly circulation of 5,500 throughout the United States and Canada.

Two Cal Poly Colts Head For Del Mar

Cal Poly is sending two thoroughbred colts to Del Mar which have been consigned to the California Thoroughbred Breeder's Association's Del Mar Summer Sale of Selected Yearlings, Aug. 21-22.

Both unnamed, the colts are of winning quality. The first by Curragh King - Silver Flight, by Himlech, is a half brother to Old Shep, winner at three and four years of age. The second colt by Eugenir-Topay Ann, by Top Row, is a half brother to Orbit's Top, winner at ages two to four. He is also a half brother to Soon Well Know, Left Over (14 wins) and to the mare, Soon Ann, a producer.

Randy Lynn, Animal Husbandry major, Los Gatos, will accompany the colts to the sale.

CCAA Plans PR Guide Book

A guide book for the field of college athletic relations will be put out soon by the California Collegiate Athletic Association's Sports Information Director's Association.

The book, which will be written by Jim Mangan, sports information director for Long Beach State, will be a great asset to anybody involved in the field of public relations in school sports publicity.

Bus-Bombs

by Bus Bortachman

Figuring prominently in recent headlines has been the John Birch Society, whose goal is the preservation of the American Way of Life from the evils of communism.

In the course of the pursuance of this laudable goal, the society has received an inordinate amount of publicity, largely as a result of a series of investigations of its functions by, of all people, the Un-American Activities Committees of both the federal and some state governments. The end result of studies was the conclusion that (in the words of the one conducted in this state) "the Birch Society has as much right as the Prohibitionists, the Vegetarians, the Republicans, or the Democrats" to expound its views. This finding was reached despite a generally critical official attitude, expressed by Attorney General Mosk when he termed the organization "pathetic."

Founded late in 1955 by Robert H. Welch, a retired candy manufacturer of rather strong convictions, the Birch Society was named for an Army Intelligence officer who died in China during the second World War. Its stated purpose is to expose and oppose communism in the United States.

Some of the more prominent persons on the governing board of the Society are T. Coleman Andrews, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue and presidential candidate (1956); Spruille Braden, ex-assistant secretary of state; Father Richard Ginder, editor and columnist; Clarence Manion, one-time dean of the Notre Dame law school; Revilo P. Oliver of the University of Illinois faculty; and several past presidents of the NAM. All are conservatives of a more-than-Goldwaterian variety, extreme, even reactionary in their stand. The two immediate objectives they have set for the society are the impeachment of Chief Justice Earl Warren (who has a record of voting with communists and subversives 92 per cent of the time since his 1953 appointment, according to Birchian figures) and the repeal of the income tax.

Although membership and financial statistics are unpublished, UPI reports that 63 salaried employees and more than 100 volunteer workers are spreading the organization gospel. Recent announcement of a college essay contest sponsored by the society has further piqued interest in it. Topic is to be "The Impeachment of Chief Justice Earl Warren," and $2800 worth of prizes are being offered.

The Birch Society has been the target of a steadily-increasing barrage of criticism from all quarters since its existence first became known. Welch said he thought the move to impeach Warren stimulated the attack... "somewhere behind the scenes," he said, "a button was pushed and a violent and wild attack was begun." All of this "storm and drang" notwithstanding, however, the Senate Internal Security Commission reported that "we are happy to state that it seems to be, from our records, a patriotic organization."

Officially opposed to NATO, the UN, and what he terms the "social gospel," Welch believes that democracy "is merely a deceptive phrase, a weapon of demagoguery, a perennial fraud."

An interesting parallel to the growth of the John Birch Society is the rise of the Nazi Party in post-World War I Germany, which similarly attracted disgruntled industrialists, retired military men and conservative politicians.

"All things fall and are built again, and those that build them again are gay."

A function of the Cal Poly Foundation is the feeding of students and staff. During 1961 two cafeterias were activated, one on the Kellum campus for resident students and one on the San Luis Obispo campus.

Roving Reporter

This week, the Roving Reporter, in his naturophilic wanderings, garnered a series of interesting responses from Poly personalities when he asked them the deceptively prosaic question, "What do you like most about Cal Poly?"

Georgianna Sweeney, junior PR major from San Luis Obispo—"I like the friendly atmosphere best of all. Everybody smiles at you and says hello, whether they know you or not. And the instructors are real friendly, too, not cold and aloof as they are elsewhere."

Alex Gunn, graduate Education major from Paso Robles—"I like the people at Cal Poly best of all. They're all interesting, personable, and extremely enjoyable to have as classmates and friends."

Diane Schilita, sophomore PR major from Pismo Beach—"I think the campus itself is the most attractive. The landscaping is beautiful, and the setting is simply ideal."

George Stult, senior Soil Science major from Modesto—"I came here because of the excellent instruction I offered in my own department. The instructors and courses in soil science are superlative."

Sandy Leguina, junior elementary education major from San Luis Obispo—"After being at San Jose State's city campus, I like Poly's country atmosphere... the trees, hills, and fresh air. It's much more conducive to study than traffic noises and smog."

Visitors Dig Campus, Enjoying Their Stay

By JESSE MORALES

Cal Poly's campus has been rated among the most beautiful in the state and 25 young journalists here for the Los Angeles Examiner Scholastic Sports Association's journalism workshop won't disagree with that opinion. Typical of the preps' idea of the San Luis Obispo campus is that of Raymond Soto of Needles High.

"The campus is well-landscaped and well kept and I particularly like the size and modern decor of the dormitories," said Soto.

Jack Oskins of Rancho Alamitos High is lavish in his praise, "I've been to other colleges before, but this one really has them all beat for beauty."

The SBAers also are impressed with the agricultural aspect of the campus.

"The ice cream I bought at the dairy was the best I've had in years," commented Frank Hirsch of Mt. Carmel High after consuming a pint of the peach variety.

Bill Tunilla an English major at the University of Illinois, visited the campus three years ago when he attended the workshop as a student at Serra High.

Obviously, he's impressed with the marked improvement resulting from Poly's ambitious building program.

"The campus is vastly different from when I saw it last and I like it much better," he commented.

Sturgeon Gives Sacramento Report To Staff Members

A report on the legislature was the topic of a speech given at a luncheon held in honor of Senator Vernon Sturgeon in the Staff Dining Room recently.

The senator was introduced by Dr. Walter P. Schroeder, head of the Education Department. Sturgeon gave a resume and a brief interpretation of the education bills which came up in the legislature.

He said, "I am not nor do I pretend to be an expert on education, but I have a high interest for education."

Spirited Mustangs Eye Next Season

BY FRANK PINNY
El Centro High

A new note of spirited enthusiasm has been sounded by those involved with Cal Poly's future football fortunes.

With the announcement of the retirement next year of Coach Roy Hughes as football mentor, this year's team will be out to give their coach a victorious send-off.

For Hughes, this will be his twelfth year of molding the school's grid stars.

He has compiled an enviable record of 70 wins, 30 losses and one tie and has coached four Mustang squads to California Collegiate Athletic Association championships.

Hughes sums up his experiences by saying, "This is my last year of active coaching after 29 years of ups, downs, nightmares and hallucinations in this, the most wonderful of professions."

Sports prognosticators have laid odds this season will pass without a victory being snatched by the Mustangs.

For material, Hughes will be leaning heavily on last year's frosh team, which came through its novice season in good shape.

He will also be leaning on the greatly heightened spirit and morale which comes to any team when it is termed a darkhorse.

His inexperienced charges will be running from a professional-type formation.

Lakers-Celtics Play For Fund

The Los Angeles Lakers and the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association will square off in Poly Gymnasium Oct. 2 in a contest to benefit the Cal Poly Memorial Fund.

The game, set for 8 p.m., will bring together some of the leading professional players—Elgin Baylor, Jerry West and "Hot Rod" Hundley of the Lakers and Bob Cousy, Bill Russell and the Jones boys, K.C. and Sam, for the Celtics.

It Could Be Today

"Maris swings and lofts a high fly ball into deep right field. Hunt moves back to the fence as . . ."

"We interrupt this program to bring you this bulletin. The DEW line warning system announces that flying objects, believed to be ICBM's have passed over it in polar flight apparently headed for the continental United States. Station KTRN now leaves the air in accordance with Civil Defense instructions. Please turn to your Conelrad station, 640 or 1240 on your dial, for further information. God protect us."

You sit stunned a minute, realizing that within a half an hour your nation will be destroyed. Suddenly, with a resolute born of desperation, you call frantically to your wife and children . . . "Alice! Janet! Billy! Chuck! Get into the shelter—there's going to be an attack. Get into the shelter, for God's sake! Hurry!"

The sirens begin the first mournful wail, sounding strangely like the keen of women at a wake. You pick up the things you need from the house, and rush to the front yard, where you had a fall-out shelter installed just last month as a precautionary measure. The street is clogged with traffic, frantically propelled by self-preservation. The air is rent by occasional screams, bewildered cries of those who have just learned of the impending tragedy.

Your wife rushes out distraught . . . Chuck is at someone's birthday party across town. Your first impulse is to go to get him . . . then you realize the futility of even trying. The other two children and your wife go with you to enter the shelter.

Your neighbor comes dashing over . . . "Frank, can we come into your shelter, too? You know I just haven't had the cash to have one put in, and it's our only hope. Look at the street . . . we can't get away." You look . . . you agree. "Okay."

The area was designed to hold five, but it now will hold your four and your neighbor's four. Other friends swell the total to fifteen, then, as you listen to the frightened, uncertain voice of the Conelrad announcer as he gives survival instructions, a crash resounds, followed by a chain reaction echo. You know what it is.

The inundation of traffic has ceased to flow. Somewhere, far up the line, some car ran out of gas, some engine stalled, some tire blew out. Panic flees down the massed automobiles. People climb out of them, screaming, approaching the insanity of hysteria. Now comes the most frightening picture of the whole mad affair—man, reduced to utter desperation, reverting to the instinctive. Self-preservation must be paramount. Some one has a gun. Some one cries, "A shelter! A shelter!" A shot is fired. People—nay, animals—rush blindly toward you in a last wild grasp for survival.

And after . . . in some manner you have the door closed, you are safe within your shelter, hearing all the while the last tortured yells of the doomed, the twisted screams of the primitive. The attack, but a half hour away, has come. Long hours pass and at last you are able to come out for a brief time to survey your country.

It no longer exists. The buildings are levelled or shelled, fires rage unchecked, to burn until the rains of winter quench them or they consume all combustible material. Dead are fifty million people, including one of your sons. With 80-day provisions for five people, you thought you were prepared . . . fifteen now must survive on them. Can you reknit the fabric of your life now? What is the purpose of survival? It is small comfort to realize that Russia has suffered as heavily.

This is no science fiction story. This is not something that might happen in a century from now half way around the world. It can happen here today. It will happen here and soon unless a sudden and complete change occurs in international relations, a change of which no indication exists because we are drilled with statements such as, "We'll fight over Berlin. We'll show those Russians. We've got to stand up for our rights. We can't be pushed around any more. We got to draw the line." To those who advocate these, I wish to pose one question—

Why?

What is there in Berlin that is worth the destruction of civilization?
—D.M.

Controversy Aid To AAU: Haralson

By JACK OSKINS
Rancho Alamitos High

The recent controversy involving the Amateur Athletic Union has been deemed beneficial for the ruling body of American amateur sports by the trainer of the U.S. track and field team which toured Europe.

"The recent blowup over the AAU will do it a lot of good," said J. B. Haralson a director of coaches workshop who also serves as superintendent of the Kern County Schools.

His point was that the embroilment will wake the American public up to the direction of the AAU and cause athletes involved with the group to look into its functions and benefits.

Ping Pong Championship

Last weekend saw lots of fast action and good sportmanship at the Temporary College Union in the second Mustang ping-pong championship. In the singles competition the quarter finals matches saw top seeded Phan Ngoc Chau defeat D. Barday 22-20, 21-12; Jaime Escobar downed Geonel Spain 21-16, 21-18; Ngo D. Ngoan beat Nguyen Hoang Anh 40-38, 24-22; and Dick Dames walked over George Hong 21-10, 21-12.

Competition grew tough in the semi-finals as Chau defeated Escobar 22-20, 21-18, 21-15 and Dames dumped Ngoan 21-12, 21-12, 21-18.

Monday night a crowd of spectators watched top seeded Chau down second seeded Dick Dames 21-12, 21-11, 21-14 in the finals.

In doubles action the top semi-finals match was Chau and Anh defeating Spain and Escobar 21-16, 21-17. The finals saw the only major upset of the Tournament when Dames and Barday beat Chau and Anh 10-21, 21-16, 21-18, 21-15.

He was careful to point out, however, that in his opinion the AAU should not be disbanded or completely reorganized, although he said reorganization of some kind is necessary.

"It would be wrong to do away with the AAU because of the great respect it holds in foreign countries," he said.

He said that during the U.S. team's recent sweep through Europe the public there was vitally interested in the organization's problems recently brought to light.

An important point made by Haralson was that his seven athletes who refused to make the international tour, for one reason or another, are not indicative of the feeling of most of America's athletic stars.

"The athletes who made the trip never showed any bad blood about the AAU," Haralson related. They were out to prove to the American people they could win without those athletes who didn't make the trip."

The record will show that the U.S. track and field forces did prove their point, sweeping unscathed through a tough schedule of meets which included Russia, England, West Germany and Poland.

College Hosting P. E. Workshop

By RUSSELL MOORE
Fremont

Cal Poly is once again hosting the annual coaches workshop, now in its fourteenth year, for physical education and athletic instructors from throughout the state.

The program, which runs a total of eleven days and is opened to both men and women, is sponsored by the California Association of Health Physical Education and Recreation, State Department of Education and Cal Poly.

The training is featuring several outstanding college coaches from throughout the state, among them John McKay, head football coach at USC; Rene Herrerias, basketball coach from California, and Bud Winter, track coach from San Jose State.

Lectures and seminars are being conducted in the four major sports as well as in wrestling, tennis, gymnastics, swimming and golf with other classes directed towards physical education, athletic conditioning and officiating.

The workshop this year is dedicated to William G. Lopez, the founder of the program as well as its director for its first six years, who passed away last December at the age of 68.

Lopez was also the chairman of the advisory council of educators of the Los Angeles Examiner's Scholastic sports Association since it was created in 1949.

The SSA is also conducting a Journalism and public relations program at the same time the coaches workshop is in session.

Animal Husbandry Instructor Writes On Animal Breeding

Appearing once a month in "The Stockman's Weekly" is a series of articles by Roy Harris, instructor, in the Animal Husbandry Department. Harris' articles are in the various phases of animal breeding.

The livestock producer today finds that he must increase his production to keep in line with his ever increasing investment. Harris discussed the effects of these economic pressures in the first of the series, "Progress Review" in the July 27 issue.

The USDA Grade Standards have come under much discussion recently as producers strive to meet the demands of the housewife and yet have production be advantageous to the producer. Harris, in articles to come, is planning to discuss this problem and possible avenues leading to its solution. Crossbreeding, hybridization, selection indexes, and selection methods with livestock are a few of the topics Harris is planning to cover as he explains the problem.

"The Stockman's Weekly" is only one publication that has received material from Harris. His articles have appeared in the "Quarter Horse Journal" and the "Western Horseman Magazine." An article titled "What's the Goal of Your Breeding Program" by Harris, appeared in the "Western Livestock Journal," March, 1961.

SSA Members At Journalism Meet

BY JOHN GILMORE
Ramona High

The Scholastic Sports Association, a Journalism training program sponsored by the Los Angeles Examiner, is currently holding its annual workshop at Cal Poly.

Attending the two week course, which is being held Aug. 6 through Aug. 18, are 25 high school seniors who are interested in Journalism, public relations, and allied fields.

Several of the top personnel in the journalism field are serving as instructors for the workshop. Ralph Alexander, Dave Kirby, and Mary Harris of the Los Angeles Examiner are teaching the group the fine points of newspaper reporting and layout.

The public relations aspect of journalism is being handled by John Healey, Cal Poly's sports publicity director; S. Allen Clark, public relations director for the Coca Cola Bottling Company in Los Angeles; Don McCaleb, publicity director at Los Angeles State.

All of the high school seniors who are attending the workshop were given the opportunity to participate because of their outstanding work with the Scholastic Sports Association in covering their high school athletic events.

The boys attending the conference are Mike Miller (Covina); Jack Oskins (Rancho Alamitos); John Gilmore (Ramona); Chuck Benninghoff (Upland); Jim Walloch (Colton); Russ Moore (Fremont, LA); Thomas Windress (Washington, LA); Glen Willardson (Pt. Loma); Charles Moreland (Fremont, LA); Lloyd Beckwith (Brawley); Ted Weisgal (Poly, LA); Frank Pinney (El Centro); Jim Walcott (La Habra); Ray Soto (Needles); Jesse Morales (Cathedral); Ron Wolfson (Ramona, Muir); Ron Urner (Fallbrook); Frank Hirsch (Mt. Carmel); and Gene Martinez (Santa Barbara).
