After an hour of presentations by the panel in Washington, three Cal Poly faculty members will continue the discussion. The local panel will consist of Dean Lark P. Carter of the School of Agriculture, Dr. William Alexander of the university's political science faculty, and Dr. George Suchand, a member of the social sciences faculty.

The final hour of the program will return to the national teleconference to provide an opportunity for those attending the session at Cal Poly — and sessions elsewhere in the nation — to ask questions of the panelists in Washington.

The film series will begin at 1:30 pm in UU 220 and continue until 4:30 pm. Final selection of the films to be shown has not been completed. Educational materials on the problem of hunger will be available during the showing at tables in the adjacent main foyer of the building.

Alila's remarks, titled "The Politics of Food Crisis," will conclude the campus observance. Scheduled to begin at 7:30 pm in the Union's San Luis Lounge (Room 203), they will be followed by a panel discussion with Annie Zumba, a reporter for Radio Station KATY, San Luis Obispo, and George Hellyer and Dr. Stan Dundon, both members of the Cal Poly faculty. Hellyer is the university's coordinator of international agriculture development programs and teaches agricultural management courses, while Dundon teaches philosophy.

Harvard Professor to speak at humanities series Oct. 18

Dr. James Engell, a member of the English Department faculty at Harvard University, will be the next speaker in the 1984-85 arts and humanities series.

He will discuss "The Creative Imagination: A Paradigm for Science and Art" on Thursday, Oct. 18, at 11 am in UU 220. The free, public program is part of the 1984-85 series "Imagining the Imagination: The Varieties of Contemporary Creativity."

The programs have been funded in part by a grant from the California Council for the Humanities, the state-based affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities. The series is sponsored by the university's School of Communicative Arts and Humanities.

Engell will look at the birth of the idea of the creative imagination during the 18th-century Enlightenment, and the tension between genius and invention. Is there a difference between the artistic imagination and the scientific imagination?

CSU establishes Distinguished Artists Forum

The formation of a Distinguished Artists Forum to assist in developing and enhancing arts programs in The California State University has been announced by Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds.

Actress Barbara Bain, radio-TV pioneer Norman Corwin and playwright Jerome Lawrence are among the professional artists providing expertise and support to the Forum.

Forum members will advise the CSU on arts issues, help outstanding students secure performance or exhibition opportunities, meet with campus arts support groups, and assist with occasional symposia and other events.

Conference planned

The UC/CSU Mathematics Diagnostic Testing Group in cooperation with the university's Mathematics Department has planned a conference on Saturday, Oct. 13, for high school teachers and administrators interested in learning about diagnostic testing.

The program will be in Chumash Auditorium from 9 am to 3 pm. The Mathematics Placement Exam (MAPE) is part of the day's activities. Interested faculty and staff are asked to contact Art DeKleine, ext. 2268.

Check your publications with Public Affairs

A reminder to all academic and administrative departments: All publications to be distributed off campus should be reviewed by the Public Affairs Office.

Posters for upcoming events and workshops, brochures describing various programs, and alumni newsletters are perhaps the most common items, but the requirement applies to all printed matter that will be seen outside the university, including form letters and logo designs.

The purpose of the rule is to assure that the university distributes appropriate, professional-quality publications that communicate clearly. The Public Affairs Office is not interested in dictating content or design or censoring expression.

There can be benefits in it for you too. We might be able to give you money-saving advice or steer you toward the right people to design, typeset or print your piece. And if you need a paragraph or two describing the university or the locale, we have several possibilities already written that you can choose from.

It's best to submit drafts and layouts before anything is set in type or pasted up. Any changes cost much less at that point and cause little delay. Camera-ready art should then be submitted for a second, final review.

Call the Public Affairs Office, ext. 1511, for more information.

College Board workshop for high school counselors

High school counselors from the San Luis Obispo area have been invited to participate in a College Board workshop at Cal Poly on Monday, Oct. 15.

It will be held from 8:30 am to 12:30 pm in Room 220 of the University Union.

The workshop is designed to provide counselors with the latest up-to-date information on The College Board's exams and services so they can pass it on to their students and colleagues. It will include a presentation by Jim Sanderson, director of financial aid services in the board's Western Region Office. The workshop is one of a series of annual fall workshops conducted by The College Board throughout the United States.

Counselors and others interested in knowing more about the workshop should contact the Relations with Schools Office, ext. 2792. About 50 counselors are expected to attend.

The conference is being sponsored by Cal Poly's Relations with Schools Office.
