Cal Poly Guernsey herd tops nation

Cal Poly's Guernsey herd was the top-ranked herd in the nation during 1981 for milk and butterfat production according to Dairy Herd Improvement records (DHIR).

The 34 "college cows," used in the laboratory sections of dairy science courses, tested out to a mature lactation average of 16,530 pounds of milk and 811 pounds of butterfat.

Additionally, the herd was honored as one of 45 "Plus-1,000" herds in the nation for 1981. This honor is reserved for herds that top the previous year's milk production average by at least 1,000 pounds.

The Cal Poly herdsman is Danny Kjos, who assumed his duties last December after majoring in dairy science at the university. Dr. Eugene Starkey is head of the Dairy Science Department.

The herd, started in 1938, is intended primarily to serve the instructional purposes of the department, which emphasizes practical applications of coursework, according to Starkey.

Students have played an important role in the herd's development as they are responsible for feeding and milking the herd as well as herd management.

Unit 1, Physicians—agreement with Union of American Physicians and Dentists

Unit 5, Operations and Support Services—agreement with California State Employees' Association

Unit 7, Clerical/Administrative Support Services—agreement with California State Employees' Association

Unit 8, Public Safety Officers and Public Safety Investigators—agreement with Statewide University Police Association

Morro Bay resident will head Extension

A specialist in organization behavior and management will begin new duties as acting director of extended education at Cal Poly early next month.

Dr. Howard M. Vollmer of Morro Bay was appointed to the post by Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dr. Hazel J. Jones, who said he will begin new assignment on Sept. 7.

Vice President Jones said the appointment of Dr. Vollmer will continue through August 1983. It is expected to allow the university time to conduct a nationwide search for a successor to Dr. Don M. Morris, who has been responsible for operation of Cal Poly Extension and other extended education programs at the university for the past 13 years.

An alumnus of Cal Poly, Dr. Morris will begin a new assignment as a member of the university's Education Department faculty this fall.

Dr. Vollmer has been active as a consultant in organization planning, personnel management, management training, and seminar programs since 1978, and has held part-time appointments as a member of Cal Poly's Management Department faculty the past two years.

For 20 years prior to 1977, the new acting director of extension activities was a program manager for Bechtel Corp. and Stanford Research Institute and head of the Department of Sociology at American University (D.C.).

Dr. Vollmer, a native of Los Angeles, is a graduate of Stanford University, where he earned his bachelor's (psychology) and master's (sociology) degrees, and of University of California, Berkeley, where he earned his doctoral degree (sociology and social institutions).

As acting director of Cal Poly's extended education programs, he will be responsible for self-supporting Cal Poly Extension, concurrent enrollment, and other educational opportunities for persons who are not regularly enrolled students of the university.

Smith acting head for Economics Dept.

Howard F. Smith has been appointed acting head of Cal Poly's Economics Department by President Warren J. Baker. He began his new assignment in mid-June and will serve throughout the academic year while George M. Eastman, head of the department, is on sabbatical leave.

A member of the university faculty since 1968, Dr. Smith holds degrees from Wayne State University (Mich.), Harvard University, and American University Wash., D.C. He formerly was an economic advisor, international economist, and foreign service officer with the U.S. Department of State.
