

Concert test of system

What one member of the campus Fine Arts Committee terms one of the greatest tests of the "system" in recent years has resulted in a monetary stalemate in the group's efforts to get a day of ethnic-American music on campus.

According to the spokesman for the group they have done everything possible to get approval of the 12 hour event, which will feature blues artists, country and western artists, negro spiritualists and bluegrass artists.

The event, scheduled for May 9 in the football stadium, is called the "Mustang Almanac of Ethnic-American Music" and according to Mike Zander, chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, "the original concept for the Almanac rose out of the need for some type of cultural event that could appeal to the entire student body at this school.

"Our first idea was to try to appeal to as large a percentage as we could and still retain some sense of structural cohesiveness. Coming out of this original concept then has grown a manifest objective that has proven just as vital to our cause as the reason for the event in the first place. This objective is basically to prove that it can be done," states Zander.

The committee has been laying the groundwork for the event for the past two quarters, and they recently culminated the work with an extensive report that was submitted to the administration for the approval of the event. This report touched every possible area that they felt was applicable to the subject from security precautions to the budget.

Security was one of the most vital areas related to the event, according to the committee spokesman. Their main objective was to convince the administration that the possibility of violence wasn't as great as would be at an affair that featured rock groups.

"The type of music that we're bringing to the campus won't interest the people that are attracted to rock concerts because they would be bored by the type of music that we are bringing," said Zander. His statement was supported in a letter sent to John Lawson, acting dean of students, by Sam Hinton who is one of the performers scheduled to appear at the event and at the same time is an administrator at the (Continued on page 3)

FRATERNITY RECOGNITION SOON?

Senate says okay

by DALE KERN
Staff Writer

The long standing custom of non-recognition of local and national fraternities and sororities by this college may soon be a thing of the past.

Three such organizations appeared before the Academic Senate Tuesday to plead their case for recognition. The Senate responded to their pleas by voting 11 to 6 in favor of recognition. The measure has been approved by the Student Affairs Council, but the final decision in the matter rests with President Robert E. Kennedy.

It is recommended to President Kennedy, that those social fraternities and sororities and other recognized off-campus social groups that meet the designated guidelines listed below be granted official recognition as a part of the co-curricular activities of the college.

All officially recognized fraternities, sororities and other off-campus social groups shall comply with those college regulations with which all student organizations must comply. Particular attention is directed to provisions pertaining to alcoholic beverages, hazing and discrimination against persons on the basis of race, color, religious preference, financial status or social status, according to the Academic Senate approved guidelines.

In addition to the faculty advisor, the fraternity or sorority shall be encouraged to develop a group of faculty and community sponsors to serve in an advisory capacity.

A council made up of representatives of each officially recognized fraternity or sorority may be formed.

Guidelines and regulations governing social fraternities and sororities, including the above, shall be subject to review and modification through appropriate channels as becomes necessary, according to the guidelines.

Banker opposes war

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Louis B. Lundborg, board chairman of Bank of America, told the Senate Foreign Relations committee today he opposes the Vietnam war both as a banker and as a citizen.

He told the committee that the war "is a major contributor to inflation—our most crucial domestic economic problem. It draws off resources that could be put to work towards solving imperative problems facing this nation at home."

He cited historical research to show that the belief that war contributes positively to economic development is largely a myth. Applying the principle to the Vietnam struggle, Lundborg noted that "during the four years prior to the escalation of the conflict in Vietnam, corporate profits after taxes rose 71.0 percent. From 1966 through 1969 corporate profits after taxes rose only 9.2 per cent."

He said that after adjusting the figures on a before tax and inventory adjustment basis, corporate profits still rose 51.3 per cent from 1962 through 1965 but were cut to 16.6 per cent in the post-escalation 1966-69 period.

War for economic gain "has been so outmoded by the experience of this century that I would like to be able to say to potential aggressors all over the world, if you want to profit, if you want to own the world, don't dissipate your energies in wasteful warfare—follow the example of Japan and Germany since World War II and be economically aggressive."

The California banker appeared before a committee session called to look into the impact of the Vietnam war on the American economy.

The 64-year-old Lundborg also added his criticism of Vietnam as a citizen—and it went far beyond the economic realm.

He said he felt the Vietnamese struggle was a far cry from the Korean conflict.

"Unlike Korea, this does not represent the banding together of the major nations as a group, under the leadership of the UN, to protect any established principle. It is a unilateral action, in which we as self-appointed militia have seen fit to inject ourselves into an internal fight between two parts of a single country—to take sides in that fight and try to impose our views on the entire country. Even from an ideological viewpoint it was questionable, because we drove Ho Chi Minh into the arms of a Communist China that he hated."

He called the war "morally indefensible and practically unsustainable."

He said he had remained silent because he believed President Nixon was attempting to wind down the war, but felt it was time to speak up when he read that the president is under pressure to expand our military role in Asia.

EOP passes

The Educational Opportunity Program was given support by the student body in a special election yesterday.

A total of 1406 ballots were cast, and 1004 were yes votes as opposed to 360 no votes. The 74.3 percent figure far exceeds the two-thirds majority needed for the issue to pass.

The second part of the election, that of changing the ASI secretary position from an elected to an appointed position, did not attain the necessary two-thirds. The count was 748 for and 699 against—56.8 percent.

ASI Vice-President Dick Barrett said he was "very satisfied" with the results of the EOP election. He cited the overwhelming publicity given the issue as a prime reason for its acceptance.

The results of the election have been approved by the Election Committee, according to Chairman Steve Greenberg. He said Student Affairs Council will be expected to ratify the results at the SAC meeting next Tuesday night.

Leslie Griffin of the Election Committee said the figures will be posted for two weeks, and if not contested will become an amendment in the ASI bylaws.

It's my view

by CHUKU C. EZIKPE

This epistolary composition is to help you, the reader, understand what is going on when you meet someone foreign to you.

The urgency of learning to communicate with persons of other cultures has been one major impetus to the rapid growth of educational exchange programs which this college participates.

Yet one of the main lessons more perceptive participants have learned from that exchange is the difficulty (and even the rarity) of communication across cultural lines. Such exchanges have increased the amount of contact between U.S. and foreign persons on more than 3,000 campuses. But there is considerable doubt about how much communication has occurred in such contracts.

While this is ample reason for trying to improve our ability to communicate with foreign persons, several other factors make it a matter of urgency that we improve our ability to talk with foreigners.

Gone forever are the bad days when the inhabitants of Africa, Asia, and South America were regarded as ignorant savages. A new era has come when the riches of their many diverse cultures are slowly being recognized and appreciated.

Blessed are those who live at a point where western and other cultures meet, for that meeting is alive with challenge to our accepted views of life. By its challenge, we can be freed to go beyond our own tradition. But the meeting can do more. By placing his own contribution beside that of the native, the foreigner can enrich your experience as well as your thought. Mutual enrichment by exposure to diverse ways of thought and action—education by contact—is one of the great possibilities of this century.

Hence, the need of logical and psychological organization of our personality is vital. The solution I urge is to bridge this communication gap. Our educational achievement does not have to be based only on diploma. It can be determined sociologically too.

Perhaps the weightiest educational question Americans must reckon with has to do with the role of education and the schools in social change. Are the schools to lead change or merely to reflect and follow it?

This is a question we all have to answer, for we are the school. Social change itself is a term which indicates only changes in social organization, that is, in the structure and functions of social institutions, school being one of the institutions.

Social change results from human interaction and involves the processes of culture—discovering, inventing and borrowing new elements, or forgetting and sublimating old ones. If we shall achieve meaningful education, these social philosophies should be bases of our educational philosophy.

Let us be honest about it. We do want things from other people. We want other people's good will and friendship. We want their acceptance and recognition. But the question is, are we mentally matured enough to face reality? Fellow students, bear in mind that the one common denominator to all success and happiness is other people.

Folk, not rock, music

University of California at San Diego. "My experience with folk music audiences is that they are extremely unlikely to be unruly; I have never experienced any of the problems that seem to rise in some rock festivals. Folk music just doesn't turn the kids on in the same way."

The committee went into great lengths to try to erase the idea of a rock festival from the minds of the students and the administration officials. "There will be no performer who even could be called a rock performer. The music will be entirely ethnic-American," said Zander.

Concern for the audience the event would attract was also important to the committee, and they agreed to set the admission price at a figure that every student could afford to pay. A figure of 75 cents for students and $1.50 for the general public was set with the stipulation that children under 12 would not be allowed to enter unless they were accompanied by an adult. "We don't want to take on the responsibility of being a baby sitter along with everything else we have to do," Zander added.

For the past month the committee has been contacting everyone on campus who would be responsible for the event ranging from doctors in the Health Center to campus maintenance men. All preliminary reports have been favorable according to Zander. A proposal in the school Activities Office came last week and the committee was awaiting the final approval from President Kennedy before they formally signed contracts with the performers and set their plans into action. Approval from Pres. Robert E. Kennedy came last Friday and the group immediately sent the contracts off to such artists as Mike Seeger, Donnie Jones and the Georgia Sea Islanders, Sonny Terry and Brownie McGee, Merle Travis, Crabgrass and Hinton. They also arranged to get either John Lee Hooker or Lightnin' Hopkins.

According to Zander the plans were moving smoothly until Tuesday when it was learned that certain restrictions had been placed on the event by Pres. Kennedy's office. These restrictions called for the event to be limited to only six hours instead of the original 12 and that it would only be limited to students from this school and the neighboring junior colleges.

A meeting was then set with Pres. Kennedy Tuesday afternoon and members of the committee worked to convince him that the original plan could prove successful.

During this meeting it was learned that after giving the approval for the event, Kennedy had been met by opposition from his administrative advisors.

Expressing concern in the size of the crowd at the event, Kennedy said, "This is a pretty touch situation, and if it is misinterpreted we could have another Livermore on our campus." Zander then reminded him of the differences in the type of crowds that the Almanac will draw.

Concern was also expressed in the date chosen for the event because it coincided with a traditional Future Farmers of America state judging competition. Kennedy stated that the events may not be 100 per cent compatible.

Zander attempted to strengthen the committee position by stating that even though the campus is exempt from meeting the recent county ordinance controlling large crowds of people at events of this nature, they have practically done this to the letter with the precautions already stated.

After a period of discussion, Pres. Kennedy said, "I don't want to be unreasonable, I just want to be sure. I want to cover all the bets."

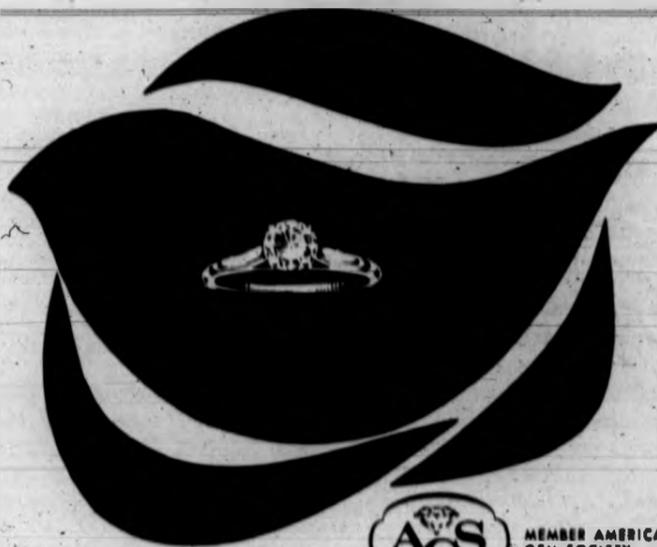

During the meeting Pres. Kennedy said that he will wait to make his final decision on the matter, and he said that he didn't want his decision to seem like "a capitulation to students' demands."

It has since been learned that Kennedy has requested to be put on the agenda for the Tuesday Student Affairs Council, and he will make his final decision after the Tuesday meeting.

Meanwhile he told Zander and the committee to continue their work on the event. Zander and the committee will continue the work but they don't know if they are working for a 12 hour event of a six hour event, and the decision now rests with Kennedy.

12 HIT ATTACK

Mustang nine split twin-bill

by PAUL SIMON, Sports Writer

Lathan Marsh stroked three hits to spark a 12-3 Mustang triumph and a doubleheader split with Fresno State Tuesday.

Marsh, a part-time leftfielder, belted a double and two singles, triggering an explosive 12-hit Mustang offensive, after Fresno claimed the first game 5-2.

Looking ahead to an all-important series with San Fernando Valley State College this weekend, Coach Augie Garrido employed four pitchers in Tuesday's games.

Bill Hall saw action first, hurling four innings. Allen Noble took over in the fifth and retired six men in a row.

Centerfielder Dave Yeazell led off the game with a home run, but the Bulldogs countered with a pair of runs in the bottom of the inning. In the third the Mustangs tallied their other run when Yeazell walked, moved to third on a single by Dave Oliver and a groundout, and raced home on a sacrifice by Steve Wolf.

The next inning the Bulldogs scored three runs and led the rest of the way. The big blow in the inning was a two-run homer by Ed DiFrancia, and a run-producing triple followed minutes later.

Fresno had five hits in the game and the Mustangs gathered four.

Gary Landrith started the second game, giving up only three hits and a run in five and one-third innings. Larry Silva then put in an appearance and finished the game.

The Mustangs started slowly, nabbing solo runs in the second and third innings. In the fourth, though, they totaled three hits for three runs, in the fifth they added two more tallies, and in the sixth four hits brought in three more.

Valley holds key to golfing success

Now that the Mustang golf team has straightened out its problems Coach Bill Hicks is hopeful the Mustangs can win their fourth straight CCAA match and get back in the race.

The Mustang divot diggers face San Fernando Valley at 1 p.m. today at Woodland Hills and are at Alta Vista on Friday for a 1 o'clock match with Cal State Fullerton. Earlier the Mustangs defeated the Matadors 33-21 and Fullerton 48-6.

After dropping their first two conference tests the Mustangs have come to the take their next three and now an overall record of 9-7-1.

"All our players are playing well now," Hicks reported. "The key to our whole season will be how well we play today against Valley State on their course."

In last week's win over Fullerton Perry Pederson and Jim Kiger who play No. 3 and No. 5, each fired 72s while sixth man Greg Stafford had a 72 and No. 2 golfer Steve Lockyer had a 75.

Lockyer, a senior from Long Beach, has the best medal average for the season, 71.8 with earning a 7-6-1 record in medal play.
